British Repulse Greatest Night Raid on London

Hitler Tells Britain He'll Be There, Threatens to Wipe Out Cities In Answer to Attacks by R. A. F.; Waves of Bombers Follow Speech

The War Today

RUMANIA'S KING CAROL, who surrendered two provinces to Soviet Russia and half of Transylvania to Hungary, gives up most of his royal powers to Gen. Ion Antonescu, new premier; foreign reports indicate Carol may also have surrendered his famed red-headed friend, Magda Lupescu, whose banishment the general demanded.

ADOLF HITLER'S BOMBERS roar over Britain in perhaps the most intensive raids of the war on the heels of his warning to "erase" British cities in retaliation for R. A. F. night raids on Germany; London fights off three Wednesday raids, hears boom of A. A. guns far into the night.

BRITAIN STRIKES BACK with a new night attack on Berlin following Tuesday night's raids on the Nazi capital's power plants and on forest-hidden arms factories; other R. A. F. bombers head for northern Italy across Switzerland, as British guns and planes pound blitz bases in France; Sweden reports British torpedoing of Nazi transport with loss of perhaps 3,900 troops.

London Still Stands

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 4.—An air raid loosed upon London by waves of German planes just a few hours after Adolf Hitler had proclaimed his threat—"I'm coming!"—was clubbed off tonight by the heaviest barrage of antiaircraft fire that ever thundered over the city.

Even after the "all clear" had sounded there were new bursts of antiaircraft fire.

A barrage balloon tumbled to earth in flames and at least two Nazi planes were believed to have been shot down southeast of London.

It was a big-scale assault—on the twenty-third anniversary of the first German attack on London ever made by planes—but it appeared that only a few Nazi bombers were able to break through the outer defenses.

There was no immediate evidence of bomb damage in London proper.

The raid lasted an hour and a half and quiet fell for a time with the last notes of the "All Clear" at 10:43 p. m.; but at 11:34 p. m. (5:34 p. m. Eastern standard time) there was another crash of "A. A." fire.

It appeared that there were more planes aloft than ever had been sent

Fury and Jeers

By Louis P. Lochner

Berlin, Sept. 4.—Adolf Hitler, with a triumphant year of war behind him and an unpredictable winter ahead, spoke out to his British foes tonight with fury and jeers—and a threat that the bombers of Germany will "erase" English cities to avenge the night raids of the R. A. F.

Before 25,000 uproarious winter relief workers, he pointed a finger at the "impatient" English and said:

"If they ask, 'Why doesn't he come?' my reply is: 'Just be quiet. He's coming all right. One mustn't be so inquisitive.'"

The grim facetiousness of his manner as he uttered those words in the great Sportspalast, customary party rallying place in Berlin, was characteristic of Hitler's speech. But there were times in his 50-minute address when he turned loose all his anger in denunciation of the British and their leaders.

This happened when he spoke of the Royal Air Force raids on Berlin.

"For three months," he said, "I have waited for the British to cease the nuisance of nightly, planless bomb-throwing. Now we will give the answer night after night.

"If the British throw two or three thousand kilograms (of bombs) we will unload 150,000, 180,000, yes, 200,000 . . ."

"Series of Defeats"

The shouts of his audience, gathered to hear the Nazi leader speak at the opening of the eighth winter relief campaign, smothered his voice.

(A kilogram is 2.2 pounds.)

British bombers had kept Berlin in a state of alarm for two and a half hours during the early morning hours, and squadrons of British planes headed for the German capital had clashes with German fighters in central Germany last night. The German high command said only a "few" of the planes reached Berlin.

There was no indication when Hitler expected the war to end but he observed that when the war started and Prime Minister Chamberlain spoke of a three-year con-

Army Warehouse Hit

Berlin (Thursday), Sept. 5 (AP).—British night raiders dropped two bombs in Berlin, killing a policeman in Tiergarten Park and hitting an army warehouse in a northwestern suburb without "creating extensive damage," it was announced officially early today.

Another person was killed in a small town southeast of Berlin when

3,900 Nazis Die In Torpedoing

Stockholm, Sept. 4.—The newspaper Dagen Nyheter reported tonight that all but 100 of about 4,000 German troops aboard a transport en route to Norway had been drowned in a torpedo attack in the Kattegat by a British submarine that sent the vessel to the bottom.

The transport, identified as the Marion, of Hamburg, was sunk Monday night, the dispatch said, while en route from Germany under a convoy of two armed trawlers and a destroyer.

Carol Yields To General As Dictator

Antonescu Given Supreme Power; Reported to Insist Mme. Lupescu Go

By Robert St. John,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest (Thursday), Sept. 5 (AP).—King Carol of Rumania bowed today before iron-willed Gen. Ion Antonescu, the man he chose to restore order in Rumania, and relinquished the bulk of his powers by giving the general supreme authority to rule his shrunken kingdom.

After an all-night conference, during which Gen. Antonescu refused to become premier under any other conditions, a royal decree was issued at dawn. It dissolved Parliament, suspended the constitution and gave the hard-fisted general the supreme power.

The King reserved for himself only the rights to confer decorations, commute sentences of criminals and negotiate conventions with foreign governments. He also will be commander in chief of the army. His ministerial appointments must have the premier's signature.

(Diplomatic dispatches from Bucharest to Belgrade, Yugoslavia, said the basic demand laid down by Gen. Antonescu was that Magda Lupescu, titian-haired friend of King Carol, be banished from Rumania.

Gen. Antonescu immediately took the oath as premier when the King acquiesced to his demands.

The new cabinet was expected to include Juliu Maniu, peasant leader who bitterly opposed the King's decision to yield to the Vienna settlement which gave Hungary about half of Transylvania, and a number of generals and Iron Guardists.

[Hungarian troops were to begin occupation of northern Transylvania at 7 a. m. (1 a. m. E. S. T.) today, and there were indications they would meet some opposition from mutinous Rumanian army units who were reported defying government orders to withdraw peacefully.]

World Premiere Of Virginia Film Thrills Richmond

Richmond, Va., Sept. 4. (AP).—Conservative old Richmond let down her hair a bit tonight to celebrate in Hollywood style the world premiere of Williamsburg-filmed, "Howards of Virginia."

Martha Scott, star of the colonial picture; Frank Lloyd, the director, and Elizabeth Page, who wrote the novel, "The Tree of Liberty," from which the motion picture was adapted, were all here for the first showing of the film.

Convicts Free Young Hostages, Surrender to Posse of 1,000

By the Associated Press

Columbia, La., Sept. 4.—Demands for a "truce" failing, three desperate Arkansas convicts threw down their guns in a cornfield today and surrendered peacefully after releasing unharmed two girls and a boy held captive nearly 48 hours.

Surrounded by 1,000 grim possemen, the desperadoes gave up a few hours after sending one of the girls to officers with a demand for safe passage through posse lines on the threat of death to the other two high school students.

The surrender near here was followed quickly by the killing of another fugitive and additional recaptures among the band of 36 criminals which shot its way to freedom on Labor Day in a sensational break from the Cummins prison farm. In all, two convicts are dead, 22 have been retaken and 12 remain at large.

In their mad break from the Arkansas prison farm, the convicts killed a trusty guard. One of the ringleaders was Frank Conley, 34, who was killed by a posse fusillade when searchers came upon him as they scoured this sector for the group that kidnaped the three young people. Conley died only 50 yards from the spot where the felons killed merchant-posseman Frank Gartman early yesterday.

Caught in a closing flank of State police and trusty convicts in civilian clothes from the Louisiana Angola Penitentiary, three of Conley's companions tossed away their guns.

Willkie Gives 'Full Steam' Order Today

Parley With Leaders Will Formally Start His Drive, He Says

Rushville, Ind., Sept. 4.—Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, said today "a definite step-off into an aggressive, organized campaign" would result from tomorrow's conference with Republican organization leaders from half the Nation.

"The object is to get the campaign under full steam," Willkie said. "The conference will be the formal start of an organized drive."

The nominee told reporters Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota and John Hamilton, executive director of the Republican National Committee, would be present. He said Chairman Joseph W. Martin of the National Committee would be here if possible.

The meeting will give Willkie his busiest day in a week.

Willkie talked today with reporters in the ladies' dining room of the Elks' Club after conferring with 57 labor representatives from Michigan.

C. L. Daniels, of Grand Rapids, spokesman for the group, said all were members of the labor division of the Republican State committee. Leslie Butler, of Lansing, Republican State chairman, said "two-thirds of these people here today undoubtedly voted for Roosevelt in 1936."

The Republican nominee said he was "enormously gratified that representatives of Michigan labor have come down to see me and to pledge their support wholeheartedly."

"I enjoyed the meeting," he continued, "and I was glad to see that they understand what really is involved in this campaign—the preservation of our American way and free enterprise under which both labor and capital prosper."

Daniels quoted Willkie as saying he was "opposed to conscription of labor or Government supervision of

Fighting Said To Be Going On in Mexico

Crisis Is Regarded As Past, However; Oil Issue Is Raised

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Sept. 4.—Followers of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, the antiadministration presidential candidate in Mexico's recent election, issued a manifesto today carrying an implicit call to arms, and fighting was rumored to be already in progress in the northern state of Durango.

[At El Paso, Tex., Gen. Manuel Enriquez, commandant at Juarez, said a Mexican army lieutenant colonel and three rebels were killed in a skirmish in Durango State. It was not immediately ascertained, however, whether the fighting was connected with the national political crisis.

[Concentration of federal troops in northern Mexico, particularly in Nuevo Leon State, was reported by the United Press, which noted also rumors of scattered fighting both north and south of Mexico City. Trouble was said to have occurred at Durango, while there were reports of dissension in army ranks in Guerrero State.]

The ministry of national defense said officially, however, "all is quiet in Durango and the situation is under control."

At all odds a national crisis clearly was near.

Stocks Cast Off Summer Languor With a Rush

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—The stock market came out of its long summer slumber with a rush today.

In a brief but lively rally near the close leading issues moved up $1 to $3 a share and in some cases more, making it one of the best upturns of the year.

It was a spontaneous affair so far as brokers could determine with no specific piece of news to account for it, but some said they believed Hitler's reminder to the German people that he had once before called for preparations for a five-year war had strengthened the belief that the Battle of Britain was not going well for the Nazis.

Transfers of 782,140 shares, of which 300,000 were traded in the last 20 minutes of business, were the largest since June 28.

Hands Off Indo-China, Hull Warns

U. S. Repeats Refusal To Allow Japanese Control of Defense Sectors at Shanghai

Ultimatum Modified

U. S. Issues Warning

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Hull last night issued a "hands off Indo-China" warning to Japan and at the same time repeated this Government's refusal to allow Japanese troops to take over all the defense sectors in the International Settlement at Shanghai.

The double pronouncement to Tokyo came within 24 hours of reports of a virtual Japanese ultimatum to Indo-China. It coincided with rumors in Washington, which officials would not confirm, that the United States would loan $100,000,000 to the Chinese government, now in its third year of a death struggle with Japan.

Hopes for Settlement

Without waiting for official confirmation that Japan has demanded passage for Japanese troops across Indo-China and port rights at its strategic port, Haiphong, Hull said in a statement:

"The situation and the subject to which these reports relate is, however, a matter to which this Government attaches importance, and it stands to reason that, should events prove these reports to have been well-founded, the effect upon public opinion in the United States would be unfortunate."

Insisting on the right of American troops to patrol one sector of the trouble-torn Shanghai International Settlement, which British troops evacuated some weeks ago, Hull said in a separate statement that he hoped a settlement would be reached allowing Japanese and American troops each to patrol their own sectors.

The State Department took this strong stand against further Japanese penetration in the Orient as naval strategists in the Capital were saying that the destroyer bases deal with Great Britain would free the United States Fleet for more intensive policing in the Pacific.

Naval Base at Stake

Hull's warning on Indo-China contained a reminder that the Japanese and American governments have indorsed the status quo in the Pacific in recent months, with special reference to Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies.

Behind the State Department's enunciation on Indo-China was in-

37 Off Torpedoed British Ship Land At Baltimore

Baltimore, Sept. 4 (AP).—The Swedish freighter Eknaren docked here tonight with 37 survivors of a torpedoed British steamer aboard.

Capt. John H. Taylor, British consul here, said seven of the seamen were injured. He refused, however, to tell the name of the ship torpedoed or where it went down.

City ambulances met the freighter at the pier to take the men to a hospital.

Company police at the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad pier, where the ship tied up, along with customs agents and consular officials clamped a tight censorship on all details of the rescue.

Dr. B. V. Kelly, a Baltimore physician, boarded the vessel a few minutes after it docked.

Arkansas River Goes on Rampage

Pawnee, Okla., Sept. 4 (AP).—A cloudburst sent the Arkansas River and many of its small tributaries on a rampage today, forcing more than 100 families from their homes in Sapulpa and isolating several towns in the area.

The Arkansas rose 12 feet in eight hours as the downpour continued, and police called for 50 boats to aid in evacuation of families.

The area along the Arkansas from Tulsa to Pawnee bore the brunt of the storm. Two deaths from lightning were reported.

Cleveland, where rising waters in the Municipal Lake ate away parts of the dam, was cut off. Rainfall in the northeast corner of the State varied from 3 to 10 inches.

House Divided

Representative Calls Another Traitor Over Draft—Fists Fly

A cry of "traitor" last night precipitated a fist fight on the floor of the House in an angry climax to two days of bitter debate on the controversial conscription bill.

The House was thrown into an uproar when Representative Martin Sweeney (Democrat), of Ohio, and Representative Beverly Vincent (Democrat), of Kentucky, came to blows.

Sweeney had just made a speech warning the House that the Administration was using the same tactics that President Wilson used in 1916 to "lead the Nation to war." He was taking his seat when Vincent called him a "traitor."

Sweeney landed a hard right on Vincent's nose and Vincent struck back. Soon colleagues surrounded the two men in an effort to halt the fight. Vincent, still free, landed several more blows as other members were grappling with Sweeney.

SWEENEY

Later, Sweeney went to the well of the House and apologized.

"As I was nearing my seat my friend called me a traitor and repeated it," Sweeney explained. "You know what happened. I am sorry I brought any confusion to the House, and if you think I am guilty, I apologize to you and to the Nation."

VINCENT

A roar of applause greeted Sweeney as he left the well and with a grave face returned to his seat.

Jumping to his feet, Vincent said:

"Mr. Speaker, I served in the World War. As I understood it then and as I understand it now the war was fought because we were being attacked by submarines and women and children murdered on the high seas.

"To say that my President of that time brought on that war to me was an untruth. The whole statement that the gentleman made here I resented very much.

"When he came down to sit with me, I got up and moved, as I shall continue to move as long as I am a member of the Congress of the United States and he is a member of the Congress.

"I said I don't want to sit by a traitor, and then I moved. He attacked me and I have no apologies to make."

Some members cried "Shame," but Vincent went on:

1st-Line Army Planes Number Less Than 300

Only 59 Are Heavy Bombers; About 1,500 Craft on Order Now

By Frank L. Kluckhohn
Copyright by New York Times

The United States Army has fewer than 300 first-line combat planes of which only 59 are heavy bombers, according to reliable Army figures in the possession of this correspondent. Fewer than 1,500 more fighting planes have so far been ordered for delivery in 1940 and 1941, of which only 176 are heavy bombers.

This data was obtained through official sources as Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, insisted that the awarding of contracts must be speeded in the interests of national defense.

These figures do not include observation, trainer and other subsidiary planes nor combat planes considered by the War Department as no longer fit for modern air warfare. Chairman May of the House Military Affairs Committee, inserted in the Congressional Record yesterday a War Department memorandum stating that the Army has contracted for 2,677 planes of all types since June 1.

Navy Pushes Own Industry Draft Plan

Tells House It Prefers Vinson Amendment To Smith Measure

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy yesterday criticized the pending Smith "draft industry" amendment to the conscription bill as "too drastic" and as violating constitutional rights which "should, if ever, be taken away only when a state of war exists."

Exception was taken to parts of the proposal—approved by the House Military Affairs Committee as a compromise substitute for the controversial Russell-Overton amendment—in a memorandum from the Navy Department submitted to the House by Chairman Vinson of the Naval Committee.

No objection was made in the Navy statement to the principle of commandeering factories which refuse defense orders, and in fact it indicated that another substitute introduced by Vinson was viewed with approval.

A vote on the "draft industry" issue is expected today or tomorrow after which leaders hope to take final action on the conscription measure itself. General debate on the bill was continued until late

2-Way Probe Begun

Mystery Fire Sweeps Hangar Of Va. Naval Reserve Airport

A mysterious fire swept through the metal hangar of the Naval Reserve Airport at Hybla Valley, Va., yesterday, badly damaging three privately owned planes valued at $8,500.

Two investigations were launched immediately, one by naval and the other by Civil Aeronautics authorities.

The fire was discovered by three sailors on duty at the field shortly after 4 p. m. They wheeled the three flaming ships out of the hangar in time to prevent damage to three other privately owned planes also stored there.

The field had been privately operated until July 1, officials said. When the airport was leased by naval authorities for the training of reserve flyers, owners of the private planes were given several months to remove their craft. No naval planes were stored at the field.

The fabric of the three damaged planes, a Stinson, Taylor Cub and an Aeronca, was destroyed, leaving the metal frames warped.

Lieut. Commander Thomas Sisson, commandant of the Naval Reserve Air Base at Anacostia Airport, dispatched two naval officers to determine the origin of the blaze. He said that he did not suspect sabotage, since no naval equipment had been kept at the field.

Commander Sisson explained that the Hybla Valley airport is used only for take-off and landing practice by Naval Reserve pilots, who fly to the field from Anacostia each day, then return.

A second investigation was started by an inspector for the administrator of Civil Aeronautics, since the planes were privately-owned. The Taylor Cub belongs to E. G. Germain, of 1436 North Carolina avenue northeast, former operator of the field.

Galapagos, Cocos Needed, Knox Says; Destroyers Leave, Ostensibly for Canada

By the United Press

San Francisco, Sept. 4.—Secretary of Navy Knox said today that negotiations were under way for new defense bases in the Pacific Ocean—particularly to protect the Panama Canal.

The new bases, he said, were sought on the Cocos and Galapagos islands, north and south respectively of the Canal.

"The Panama Canal is America's most important line of communication," he said. "It doubles the Navy and is so absolutely vital it must be made impregnable," he said.

Knox said it was necessary to acquire new bases because the Canal cannot be defended completely by planes stationed on the Panama mainland.

"They (the planes) must have space to get into the air and gain altitude," he explained.

Knox arrived here for inspection of the San Francisco Bay defense bases. He is en route to fleet maneuvers in the Pacific off Hawaii in an extended aerial tour of western defenses after an Atlantic coast inspection.

The Galapagos are owned by Ecuador; the Cocos by Costa Rica.

If obtained for bases, they would form a southern anchor for the western defense chain extending from Alaska through the Hawaiian Islands.

Three new bases are being developed in Alaska, Knox said. He added that the Navy would be glad to receive Treasure Island, the International Exposition site in San Francisco Bay, after the fair there closes.

"The new bases along the Atlantic coast give the air corps an effective radius of 500 miles from the Panama Canal," he said. "A surprise attack would be impossible."

More Atlantic Bases Can't Be Had Now

Adolf Hitler's conquests in Europe block the United States for the present from negotiating defense base leases in Greenland, Dutch and French possessions in this hemisphere, officials told The Post yesterday as work was being rushed to convert the newly acquired British sites into a "chain of steel."

Well informed foreign diplomats and American officials did not believe that the known American desire to acquire rights on such spots as Greenland, St. Pierre, Miquelon and Curacao could bear fruit while the controlling Danish, French and Dutch governments are still in German thralldom.

All delay was swept aside to prepare 50 destroyers, pledged in Tuesday's agreement, for delivery to Great Britain.

Three of the over-age craft sailed from Boston harbor last night, apparently bound for Canada, the Associated Press reported. They were observed lifting anchor and moving out to sea, despite Navy Department expectations that none of the destroyers would be ready to sail until Friday.

This fact was reported in the face of a statement by White House Sec-

Coolidge Urges Third-Term Ban

Hobart College Head Testifies on 6-Year Limit for President

Limitation of the Presidential term of office by constitutional amendment was urged before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee yesterday by a prominent historian, a former Roosevelt Undersecretary of the Treasury and a college president who called himself a "New Deal Democrat."

Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, who resigned as Undersecretary of Treasury in 1936 after two New Deal years, and James Truslow Adams, historian, saw danger of future dictatorship in a third-term precedent and condemned the theory of "the indispensable man."

William Alfred Eddy, president of Hobart and William Smith colleges, said he opposed a third term for the same reason that he disapproved a second term, because candidacy while in office generally diverted any President from national considerations to those of politics.

Adams, whose paper was read in his absence owing to illness, favored an amendment limiting tenure to two four-year terms. Coolidge and Eddy recommended a single term of six years only, such as is proposed in a resolution offered by Senator Burke (Democrat), Nebraska.

Eddy Won World War Honors

Burke, who presided as subcommittee chairman, said hearings will resume today with Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, retired bishop of the Washington area of the Methodist church, and President William Mather Lewis, of LaFayette College, testifying. Tomorrow Representative Robert G. Allen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, and former Representative Samuel Pettengill (Democrat), of Indiana, are listed to appear.

Burke, one of the first Democrats to bolt to Wendell Willkie because of his opposition to a third term, indicated hearings will continue at least two weeks, after which he would seek a report and airing in the Senate. Opponents of a limitation will be invited to appear.

Eddy, awarded the distinguished service cross and purple heart decoration after he was wounded in World War action, said he had "very little interest in the current controversy over the third term."

"I am a New Deal Democrat," said the Hobart College president. "When election day comes I shall vote for the candidate who, at that date, offers the greatest assurance of mobilizing all the Nation's resources for national defense, and who recognizes most clearly that the survival of Britain with her navy is our first line of defense. The Fascist revolution has dwarfed all other issues into insignificance."

"Blight of Suspicion"

Eddy said a single six-year term for the Presidency "will take our President out of politics, eliminate from the office unnecessary vilification and hollow praise and make our Chief Executive the servant of the entire commonwealth." He said political passions of the hour should not postpone an amendment "which will dignify and strengthen the office of President."

Eddy declared that the "evil" of eligibility for reelection to either a second or a third term "has already cast its blight of suspicion upon many recent acts of the Administration."

"The damage has been done already," said Eddy. "The election of Mr. Roosevelt next November may well prove to be expedient, but his candidacy while in office has been a calamity."

Coolidge, who was praised by the President following his resignation from the Treasury four years ago, said he favored a single-term limitation to prevent "an ambitious man" from "destroying our form of Government."

Coolidge said there is "danger to our Republic and its institutions in the possibility that the majority of our people will follow one leader who, backed by this majority, will usurp the powers intended to be distributed."

"Toward One-Man Government"

Outlining a world-wide trend toward dictatorship, Adams, whose statement was read by Burke, said this is "all the more reason for our maintaining all the dikes and bulwarks we have built against it in the past."

While no prohibition on a third term was written into the Constitution, Adams said that through "wise usage" for 150 years of Presidents, the limitation has become "deeply embedded in the thinking of the people and in our (unwritten) Constitution or way of carrying on government." He declared any effort to break down the two-term tradition will be "resented" by sober-thinking people and "they still have more than two months to think."

In warning of "a vast tide flowing toward one-man government," and asking "if we have grown tired of thinking for ourselves," Adams said:

"I am not speaking of Franklin Roosevelt, for I do not think he wants to play the role of dictator, but of any man, present or future, who might be allowed to hold the office of President indefinitely under the modern and uncontemplated conditions of the office and of the world."

Adams asked: "If now, with a population of 130,000,000, it is claimed that only one man among all of us is capable of leading, what has happened to America?"

Defense Committee Attacks Provision of Excess Tax Bill

Proposal to Make Industries Subservient To U. S. in Matters of Plant Policy Held Nullifying Amortization Plan

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A House proposal to "tie strings" on privately built national defense plants that are granted certain tax privileges was denounced by the Defense Advisory Commission yesterday as an impairment to the Nation's rearmament program.

William S. Knudsen, Leon Henderson, John D. Biggers and Donald Nelson, of the commission, one by one attacked the Treasury-sponsored plan at Senate Finance Committee hearings on the excess-profits tax bill.

At the same time, Knudsen, emphasizing that he was speaking for himself alone, inferentially criticized the present bill's "penalty tax" provisions, which also have been attacked by some Senators on the Finance Committee.

Pointing out that the levy is known as the "'excess-profits tax," Knudson declared that "it seems fair that this should be a tax on earnings above their normal past record, and not a tax based solely or largely on earnings above an arbitrary per cent or standard.

Knudsen, recently resigned head of General Motors, added: "I do not think a penalty tax should be imposed on normal earnings. If the Government needs more revenue, why not obtain it by flat increase in the corporation tax rate?"

The restrictions in the bill, which the Defense Commission unanimously disapproved both in testimony and in a formal letter to the Finance Committee, would apply to new plant facilities erected under a special amortization provision allowing their entire cost to be subtracted from taxable net income in the relatively brief period of five years.

The restrictions consist of a provision that these facilities could not be destroyed or even substantially altered unless the Secretary of War or Navy either gave written consent or bought the property at a reduced price.

If this limitation remains in the bill, it would "tend to defeat the very purpose of the amortization provisions and thereby impede the defense program," Knudsen asserted.

Expressing full agreement with the Treasury that the interests of the United States must be protected, Knudsen declared that this aim could best be met through individual contracts rather than the less flexible terms of a law.

Retention of the restrictions would "lead to a dearth of help from private capital," the witness said, but if the amortization provisions are accepted with the "strings," he predicted that there would be no trouble in carrying through plant expansion for the defense program very largely with private capital. So far, one witness stated, most of the money has been put up by the Government.

Henderson, SEC commissioner, and one of the New Deal's leading economists, warned that "you might as well drop the amortization provisions" if the restrictions are retained on the subsequent use of the newly built plant facilities to which the liberal amortization priviliges would apply.

"You would be saying that the manufacturer has to give up his facilities to the Government," Henderson insisted.

Declaring that "the sole purpose in recommending the amortization provisions was to encourage the use of private capital," Biggers, the Commission's tax expert, asserted that the proposed restrictions "would in effect nullify" the amortization features.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, repeatedly expressed the fear that the plants with national defense contracts would increase prices for their products in order to cover the cost of the new production facilities, in addition to taking advantage of the five-year amortization plan which alone was intended to take care of the cost of new plant.

The commission members agreed that any such effort would have to be carefully guarded against, but that the best protection would be in contracts rather than in the law.

"Considerably sharper negotiations" are being carried out on the part of the Government than during the last war, Henderson asserted. Under the "alert procedure" now followed in watching prices, he said, the Government has already obtained two articles in large quantities at a lower price than ever before.

Biggers informed the Senate committee that three plans would be followed in respect to financing new plants for defense materials:

(1) Wholly by private capital, which is to be encouraged by the amortization provisions.

(2) By private capital, but repaid by the Government, which at the end of the emergency period could sell the plant back to the private manufacturer.

(3) Entirely by the Government, which would retain the plant in the same way that it now owns arsenals.

With the "string" giving the Government ultimate control even of the privately financed plants, "the private manufacturer will not avail himself of plan 1, and the whole load will fall on the Government through plans 2 and 3," said Biggers.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John L. Sullivan, who testified earlier in the day, indicated in answer to questions that he thought it might be possible to work a provision for permissive filing of consolidated returns into the pending bill.

$114,235 Navy Plane Contract Is Awarded

The Navy Department announced yesterday it had awarded a $114,235 airplane contract to the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation at Burbank, Calif.

Among other contracts were:

Harry Alexander, Inc., New York, for improvement of an interconnection between the Brooklyn Edison Co. and the New York Navy Yard on a cost-fee basis. The total estimated cost of the contract, including fee, was $185,000.

General Machinery Corporation, Hamilton, Ohio, lathes, $588,598.

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—Negotiations for the purchase of the $15,000,000 Floyd Bennett Airport as a third naval district base of aviation have been under way "for more than a month," Lieut. Comdr. Don F. Smith said today. Smith, aviation aide to Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, commandant of the district, added that the field would be "an ideal site" for the Navy's use.

Baltimore, Sept. 4 (AP).—Ground was broken today at the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft factory for a huge addition, which, company officials said, would more than double bomber production and plant space, and provide employment for 37,000 men—or 24,000 more—within the next year.

Glenn L. Martin, president, described the expansion program as the first by any American military aircraft company under new national defense program.

While Government observers looked on, Martin turned the first spadeful of earth, and declared production would be increased "two and a half times" within the coming 12 months. The plant now is turning out three large bombers daily.

Garner Taking Rest, Not Walk, Friends Say

Declare He'll Be Back Before Congress Adjourns, If It Does

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

John Nance Garner is taking a rest, not a walk.

He will be back on the Senate rostrum at least a week before Congress adjourns—if it does adjourn—his close friends said yesterday.

But if Congress merely recesses over the election period, and the Vice President isn't urgently needed here, he may continue to fish and to cultivate his pecan grove at Uvalde, Tex.

One thing Congressional cronies said they were convinced of—Garner will not allow Congress to take sine die leave of Washington without his being on hand to round out his 37-year public career.

They were equally convinced that he will never take a hand in the third term campaign any more than he will take the stump for Wendell Willkie. But he isn't bolting and he isn't in a huff, however bitter he may have felt about Chicago and what went before.

President Sees Flynn

When the election fireworks are all over, Garner's present plans call for permanent retirement in Uvalde, where for five weeks he has maintained his tight-lipped silence.

Without benefit of either Garner or former Postmaster General James A. Farley, political advisers in two former campaigns, the President for an hour canvassed election strategy with the No. 1 politician of the third New Deal—Edward J. Flynn.

The new National Democratic chairman was as conservative in his estimates as both Farley and Garner know how to be. He said only that prospects of Mr. Roosevelt's reelection to a third term appeared "very good."

Then he followed up his Tuesday statement that Willkie is "gradually losing ground" with a shaft at the Republican nominee's financial support.

"The wealth of the country," said Flynn, "is behind Mr. Willkie—that is, the misguided wealth."

Republicans at the same time were pointing out that financial support, misguided or otherwise, would have very little to do with campaign spending in view of Hatch Act restrictions.

Republican National Committee Chairman Martin estimated his entire Republican campaign budget will be limited to $1,550,000. The Hatch Act placed a limit of $3,000,000, starting last January 1, six months before a candidate was placed in the field.

Flynn brought the President his first Nation-wide report on political prospects. These he declined to discuss in detail, but he declared there was no doubt the President would win if the election were held immediately.

Nor did he disclose the President's future campaign plans. So far as he knew, he said, the President had no definite plans for trips.

Pecans Not Politics

But when reporters questioned Flynn on possibilities of a Chicago speech by the President, he did not rule it out. The President himself has barred engagements farther distant than 12 hours from the Capital. Flynn pointed out that Chicago is only an overnight train trip from the Capital.

Word that Garner would probably return to Washington before any sine die adjournment was accompanied by reports that he would likewise heed any emergency summons to return, provided it concerned the national emergency and not the campaign.

From all the Vice President has said or done since his sojourn in Uvalde, one gathers he isn't interested. Reporters who have reached him have found him willing to discuss his pecans, politely changing the subject from politics.

He visits seldom, and receives mostly his intimate friends at his big brick house. As in Washington, he and Mrs. Garner usually are up at 5 a. m. and in bed at 8:30 a. m.

But associates report there is an air of permanence about this last midsession visit to Uvalde. Enlargements have been made in his detached garage, and Mrs. Garner has eased gracefully out of the role of secretary and into that of small-town housewife.

And the Vice President is about to let contracts for six more low-rent dwellings, a hobby with him since he has found he can build them "for 30 per cent less than anybody else."

Deal for Bases Makes Democracy Safer, Wallace Declares

Freeport, Ill., Sept. 4 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace said today this Nation's acquisition of naval and air bases from Great Britain "means a great deal to our security—it makes democracy definitely safer in this hemisphere."

The Democratic Vice Presidential candidate asserted in a campaign speech that Adolf Hitler "feels he is a man of destiny" and "does have definite designs on this hemisphere."

Remarking that should there be any attempt to invade the United States, it probably would be made through Central America or Canada, Wallace added:

"That is why I say that establishment of these bases would make it less likely that any aggressor would try to make an entry into Canada or Central America, the Achilles heel in our defense system.

"The only road to peace and freedom on this hemisphere is through the complete preparedness for which Roosevelt has continually stood."

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—R. S. Wallace, president of the Central Illinois Light Co., said today the company, an operating subsidiary of the Commonwealth and Southern system, "has never had any strike or other labor trouble."

The statements were issued by the offices of the Commonwealth and Southern System, formerly headed by Wendell L. Willkie, in reply to assertions made Monday by Edward J. Flynn, national Democratic chairman.

Of the Peoria company, Flynn had said, "Mr. Willkie's Central Illinois Light bought guns and tear gas shells."

Wallace described the Flynn statement as "entirely erroneous. The facts are that Central Illinois has never had any strike or other labor trouble. In 1936, it purchased a small amount of tear gas for a vault at a time of a burglar's scare and in 1935 it purchased 12 baby gas guns and 36 shells for use by its own employes in patroling its own lines against possible sabotage at a time when there was a strike on the lines of another company with which the Central Illinois Co. had no corporate connection."

labor unions."

"He granted the right of labor to organize," Daniels continued, "and said it was one that could not be taken away without Government control, to which he is opposed."

Robert Amsterberg, of Grand Rapids, vice president of the Michigan Federation of Labor, asked Willkie for his views on Federal aid for rural fire protection. Willkie said he favored the program of the International Fire Fighters Association, which calls for Federal help in buying trucks and paying firemen in needy rural districts.

Willkie arose at 5:30 a. m. and took a brief walk around the neighborhood of his rented home during the day.

McCarran Likely To Succeed King

Expected to Become Chairman of D. C. Senate Committee

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, yesterday appeared the most likely successor of Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, as chairman of the Senate District Committee.

King, according to late returns from the Utah primary election, was trailing far behind Representative Murdock, ardent New Dealer, in the contest for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Returns from 538 out of 835 election districts gave Murdock a better than 3-to-1 plurality over King, a member of the Senate since 1917 and chairman of the District Committee since 1933.

Others Have Posts

Ranking ahead of McCarran on the District Committee are three Senators, but all already have committee chairmanships. Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, heads the Appropriations Committee. Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, is chairman of the Territorial and Insular Affairs Committee, while Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, is chairman of the Irrigation and Reclamation Committee.

McCarran yesterday declined to comment on the possibility that he would take the District Committee ledership in the Senate, but it is believed that he would be willing to accept the assignment. Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, ranks after McCarran on the District Committee. Neither is now a committee chairman.

King succeeded Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, as head of the District Committee. The Utah Senator, keenly interested in affairs of the Capital since his first experience here as a Representative from 1897 to 1901, selected the District Committee out of the three he could have headed when the Democrats organized the Senate in 1933. He also was in line for chairmanship of the Immigration and Privileges and Elections committees.

Murdock Far in Lead

Salt Lake City, Sept. 4 (AP).—Representative Abe Murdock, ardent New Dealer, today was the Democratic Party's candidate for United States Senator.

By a better than 3-to-1 plurality that had gained steadily with slowly accumulating returns from yesterday's primary election, Murdock had not only beaten the veteran Senator William H. King, but established a safe majority over the Senator and former State Chairman Delbert M. Draper, who ran a poor third.

King is completing his fourth six-year term in the Senate. Murdock is serving his fourth two-year term in the House. While the Congressman's record shows consistent support of the Administration's program, Senator King had differed with the President on some of his major policies.

On the Republican side, Philo T. Farnsworth, jr., Salt Lake attorney, who helped frame the party's national platform, ran well ahead of his three opponents but still faced the probability of a run-off battle with Oscar W. Carlson, Salt Lake attorney.

Second Primary Seen

Henry M. Doyle, regarded as the State administration candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, and Herbert B. Maw, who lost the 1936 nomination to Gov. Henry H. Blood, seemed destined also to go into the second primary.

Republican voters also put their gubernatorial contest into the next primary, October 1, with former Representative Don Colton and Reed Stevens, of Salt Lake City, as the probable contenders.

Both Republican Congressional races and the First District Democratic battle also were due for a repeat. Walter K. Granger led the quartet of First District Democrats toward the nomination, but couldn't shake off J. Francis Fowles, of Ogden. For the G. O. P., Le Roy B. Young established a good lead, but his three other opponents garnered enough votes to promise a run-off with either S. M. Jorgensen, Salina stockgrower, or Arthur Woolley, Ogden attorney.

Representative J. Will Robinson had no primary opposition for the Second District Democratic nomination, but the Republicans scattered votes among five men to give A. Sherman Christenson a lead, but no majority, with the second place still contested, on the basis of 539 districts, by Reed Vetterli, former Federal agent, and Don Mack Dalton, American Fork attorney.

Platt to Oppose Pittman

Reno, Nev., Sept. 4 (AP).—An unofficial tabulation of votes cast in Nevada's primary Tuesday gave Samuel Platt, Reno attorney, the Republican nomination for United States Senator. He will oppose Democratic Senator Key Pittman in the general election.

Platt said today he had received congratulatory messages from his opponents who promised their support in the general election.

The unofficial vote gave Platt 3,843; Harry Atkinson, 3,159; Clarence Pugh, 1,400, and Clyde Souter, 1,066.

Police Aid Girl Released By Convicts

FIRST AID FOR GIRL RELEASED BY CONVICTS—Sixteen-year-old Voncelle Williams, held as a hostage nearly two days by escaped Arkansas convicts, was near collapse yesterday when she was released near Columbia, La. State Police Chief Steve Alford administered first aid to the girl. She said she was not mistreated, but was forced to tramp through woods and swamp with the convicts while a posse sought them escape. She walked out of dense swamplands to tell police of a threat to kill Gladys Diamond, 15, and Jerry Harrigill, 17, if the posse denied passage. The three Rayville youngsters were kidnaped Monday when the criminals commandeered their car.

The possemen, forthwith refusing to deal with the criminals, were directed by Miss Williams toward the fugitives' hideaway. She told police the convicts did not mistreat her or her companions but said they were forced to tramp through woods for hours with their captors.

Meanwhile, from other parts of Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas to which the fleeing group of convicts had scattered came reports of further kidnapings, recaptures, a killing and the wounding of a hostage.

Acting Police Sergt. L. H. Hogue announced the killing of Bruce Fowler, 28, serving 27 years for robbery, and the recapture of a companion, Floyd Boyce, at the Mississippi River Bridge just below Vicksburg. Three hostages, one wounded in the shoulder, were freed when officers halted the two convicts. Two fugitives were retaken at Gillett, Ark., without bloodshed.

Near Lewisville, Ark., Will Modisett, a husky oil driller, knocked unconscious with his fist and recaptured Life Termer Percy Loftin at a filling station. Loftin had commandeered a car occupied by three women and a man. Modisett trailed them, leaped from his car when the other automobile swerved into the station and felled the convict as he attempted to raise a rifle.

Two men, believed companions of the convicts taken in the cornfield, held up A. L. Hinton north of Columbia and took him along as a hostage in his automobile.

Search for others among the escapees extended to the Little Rock area after J. N. Heagan, Little Rock music instructor, reported to police he was abducted last night by three men who took his car and clothes and left him beaten unconscious several miles south of the city.

Marijuana Act Violation Suspect Is Arrested Again

For the second time in less than two months, Henry Booker Turner, colored, 27, of 1317 Q street northwest, was charged with violating the Marijuana Tax Act yesterday, and last night was being held under $5,000 bond.

He was seized at Seventh and T streets northwest by Detective Sergts. Robert Bryant and H. H. Carper and Federal agents. Seven charges were placed against him.

Turner was arrested on four charges July 20, detective bureau records showed, and was held for the action of the grand jury by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. He was released under $1,500 bail at that time and was awaiting trial when arrested again.

Police set the higher bail last night pending a second hearing before Commissioner Turnage.

Girl Hostage Of Convicts Tells of Terror

3 Youths Weren't Harmed, She Says; Periled by Posse's Fire

[A comely, 16-year-old Rayville, La., schoolgirl gave the following exclusive account of her experiences today following her release with a boy and girl friend after all three had been held two nights and a day as hostages by escaped long-term convicts from the Arkansas Prison Farm.—Editor's note.]

By Voncille Williams

Columbia, La., Sept. 4 (AP).—At first we were all scared when the convicts, six of them with sawed-off shotguns, took over our automobile in Rayville. But they did not harm us.

The men told us all about prison life. The said they had been planning this break for 16 months. They had it all fixed they would go to Mexico and they were pretty sure they would make it.

Gladys Diamond, my best girl friend, was driving the car and Gerry Harrigill and I were riding in the back seat. We saw their car had been wrecked so we stopped.

Then we saw they carried guns but it was too late and Gladys said: "Oh! Oh! We're in for it now." All six piled in our car, three in front and three in back.

Bullets Whizzed Past

We rode around on gravel roads for a long time circling around before we saw a whole line of automobiles coming with men crowded in them. We had a flat tire and so we turned out our lights and waited.

Bullets began whizzing by. They came so close one of the convicts had his leg singed. Things were getting hot and we ran. Three of the convicts left us and we didn't see them again. Gladys and I screamed while we ran and finally the shots stopped.

Later Jerry could have even reached one of their pistols, but we wouldn't let him because we knew we would all be shot. They were nice enough, no rough stuff.

Our only trouble was the men kept pushing us to go on and on through the woods. They said they couldn't let us go because they would be killed.

No Food or Water

I got so tired last night I almost fainted. We hadn't had anything to eat and nothing to drink. My legs were burning just like coals of fire. They were so scratched up. We tried to get some sleep but every time we would doze off we would see flashlights in the dark and dogs barking on our trail.

Those men made Gladys and me sneak up to a farm to get water. Dogs were barking at us and we were scared. So we left as soon as we got drinks from a well. When we got back the men were angry and sent us back for some for them.

Late last night they thought they would let us go if we wouldn't walk out until the next morning. Jerry swore on his Boy Scout honor, and we promised too, but the men must have changed their minds because they wouldn't let us go.

Then this morning they made me walk out and make a truce. They wanted the police to send in a car with only a driver and with its doors open so they could see no one would be in it. They wanted the driver to blow his horn twice to signal that everything was okay.

Then I told the police where they all were. Later the convicts were captured and Jerry and Gladys came out of it safe and sound.

Taps Sounded for Historic Fort Washington; Last Troops Gone, It May Become Play Center

D. C. Area Post Had Been Used Since Colonial Days

By Edward Ryan

The historic and unwarlike career of Fort Washington, Md., ended yesterday in a quiet, businesslike ceremony between War Department and Park Service Officials.

Today, for the first time in more than a century, Fort Washington will be no longer a military post and prospective battleground, but the site of a future recreational center.

The fort's military future was written off more than a year ago, when former Secretary of War Woodring ordered its garrison, 13 officers and 464 enlisted men of the Third Battalion, Twelfth Infantry, commanded by Lieut. Col. William F. Lee, transferred to quarters at the Arlington Experimental Farm.

A caretaking detachment of less than 20 men was left behind. These were moving out yesterday, and today George Clark, chief of construction for the National Park Service, will sign a receipt for the fort and its movable property.

The historic fort is 14 miles south of Washington, on a bluff overlooking the Potomac at its junction with Piscataway Creek, within sight of Mount Vernon.

Its future, according to park service officials, is uncertain. One of them described the place right now as a "lemon," partly because they got the fort without any funds to clean it up and run it. Most logical first move, park officials said, would be to set up a CCC camp there to restore the century-old defense works, clear the 345-acre site of fire hazards and remove some of the temporary war-time dwellings. Officials said that these jobs would keep 200 CCC workers busy for a year.

After the CCC work is finished, park officials said, the site could be used as a recreational center, or for other purposes. The Welfare and Recreation Association of Public Buildings and Grounds, it was understood, has conferred with the Park Service on possible plans for the association to operate the area as a camping and picnic center.

The military history of the Fort Washington site runs back to the earliest days of Potomac River settlement. The Maryland Assembly established a garrison there in 1645, and 50 years later Virginia and Maryland militia, commanded by Col. John Washington, grandfather of the First President, broke the power of Indian tribes in the Potomac region in a battle near the site.

President Washington in 1794 picked the site for a fort to defend the new Capitol, and the defense works were started in 1808. The fort's first and last chance to stage a war show came six years later, in August, 1814, when a British fleet sailed up the Potomac toward Washington. The fort's commander, Capt. Sam T. Dyson, ordered the guns spiked and the fort blown up without firing a shot.

The British, surprised by this action, finished the job of destroying the fort, while Capt. Dyson retreated with his men, and was later dismissed from the service. Defeat of the fort did not settle the battle for the Capitol, since the latter had been captured three days before.

After the war ended, L'Enfant, who planned the City of Washington, was assigned to plan a new fort. The fort he started still remains, although he was taken off the job before its completion because of charges of extravagance.

During the Civil War, the fort was one of the chain of defenses for the District. It was garrisoned and strengthened for the Spanish-American war. For the World War it was enlarged for training while its guns were shipped to France.

With the old stone fort, the post has about 80 buildings, including brick quarters for officers, a hospital and warehouses dating from Spanish war days, plus temporary World War barracks.

In September, 1921, Maj. W. F. L. Hartigan, of the Fifty-sixth Infantry, was assigned to take whatever men and officers he wanted from the Seventh Division at Camp Meade, Md., and to organize them as the Third Battalion of the Sixty-fourth Infantry, to man Fort Washington.

Besides giving the post a crack military organization, Maj. Hartigan's assignment brought it a championship basketball team, which defeated all other units in the Washington area for several years in a row.

Testimony of 'Graft Broker' Involves Ex-Mayor of Detroit

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 4.—A witness who called himself a "graft broker" testified in Circuit Court today that he handled more than $300,000 in tribute paid by law-breakers to Detroit police and public officials in three years.

Raymond W. Boettcher, ousted police inspector, said he served as "broker" for the Police Department and former Mayor Richard W. Reading.

He received the money, Boettcher asserted, from handbooks, policy houses and police officers who paid from $2,700 to $3,500 apiece for promotions.

Recipients Named

Testifying at an examination to determine if Reading and about 150 other defendants will be held for trial on a grand jury indictment accusing them of conspiring to protect illegal handbooks, Boettcher named the following as recipients of the larger graft payments:

Former Mayor Reading, $50,500; Richard W. Reading, jr., his son, about $18,000; Fred W. Frahm, former police superintendent, $26,000; Wendell A. Lochbiler, former district police inspector, $41,000; William J. Heidt, suspended deputy police superintendent, $32,000, and Fred R. Clark, former chief police inspector, $12,000.

Boettcher was dismissed from the police force after a special grand jury charged that official protection was given vice and gambling in Detroit.

The witness said his main job while on the police force was to organize handbook and policy rackets to obtain the maximum amount of graft payments. Armed State troopers stood at either elbow while he testified.

Installment Plan

Boettcher named five men including himself, who he said bought promotions to become police inspectors. They paid on the installment plan out of graft collections, according to the testimony.

Elmer (Buff) Rayn was described by Boettcher as a "subpaymaster" of graft to police inspectors and various lesser officials. About $147,700 in irregular amounts, he said, was paid Ryan with the understanding it was to be passed on to others.

"Grafting started on a fairly large scale in December, 1936, and increased in January, 1938, when Reading became mayor," Boettcher said.

Reading was defeated for reelection last year by Edward J. Jeffries. The grand jury investigation started in August, 1939.

Irony Veils Nazi Ire on Ship Deal

Press Hints U. S. Preyed on Helpless, Crumbling Empire

By Percival Knauth.

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Sept. 4.—The German press today portrayed a mixture of feelings dominated by a note of irony with regard to the United States destroyer-bases trade. The British empire and its fleet, according to the unanimous viewpoint here, must be in a sorry state to have to make such a one-sided deal.

The United States is sarcastically credited with having made an excellent business transaction, unhampered, however, by any scruples regarding neutrality which the Germans state is "flagrantly violated."

There is in these comments the same note of restraint regarding American affairs which has been noticeable now for many months and it appears unlikely that the episode will have any diplomatic sequel.

In the opinion of the Wilhelmstrasse as expressed by an official foreign office commentary "England's exigency has now mounted to unlimited proportions. For the first time since George Washington's war of liberation England is retreating in the Western Hemisphere. The United States is about to take over the hegemony of power, not with force this time, but as heirs."

Italian Echoes

Rome, Sept. 4.—The cession of 50 United States destroyers to Britain is hailed unanimously by the press as another proof of the crumbling of the British Empire.

Criticism of the United States is confined to strong contempt of what Virginio Gayda terms the "mercantile application of the avowed solidarity between the Anglo-Saxon peoples and governments."

Today's press theme stresses the "downfall of the British Empire," the "moral and material collapse of England" and the loss of British prestige resulting from the cession of important naval and air bases to a foreign nation for what is bitingly termed "50 carcasses."

The political significance of the transaction as affecting the trend of the American attitude toward the European conflict is so far ignored. Signor Gayda makes only a vague reference to it by saying that the cession of the destroyers "involves the United States ever more dangerously in the European war."

Britons Satisfied

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 4.—Two questions were uppermost in British minds today: How soon the destroyers will get here? Is 50 all that are coming?

That doesn't mean that in any responsible British quarter there is a feeling that they are victims of a Yankee horse trade. Rather they are awaiting Prime Minister Churchill's speech tomorrow before Commons hoping that it will contain some clew as to how far the affairs of the British Empire and the United States are likely to be "mingled."

On this side of the Atlantic the majority view seemed to be that it was a perfect trade with each side getting what it wanted without haggling over pennies.

For the long term, it is recognized that the United States perhaps has gained, but looking at it from the short term view this nation, which depends upon its ability to rule the seven seas, has gained a small fleet of destroyers that it would take months if not years to build. And even the most complacent Britons are ready to concede now that it is not a matter of years but days which may determine the empire's fate.

Japanese Are Impressed

Tokyo, Sept. 4.—The Anglo-American destroyer transaction and the British pledge that the fleet would never be surrendered or scuttled made a deep impression here.

First it is assumed that America will keep her fleet in the Pacific and secondly it is assumed that the United States having made its front door secure will next secure the back door.

Putting New Life In '50 Old Destroyers' last night to afford all members an opportunity to speak.

One after another opponents of the unprecedented proposal marched to the well of the House and denounced it as leading the United States into "militaristic dictatorship." Alternating were supporters, who urged its speedy adoption to guard the Nation against attack from overseas.

Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri, declared that peacetime conscription is "nazism" and a "confession that the methods of Hitler are more effective and better than our own."

He scoffed at contentions that Germany will invade the Western Hemisphere after the war, declaring the whole of Europe will be exhausted. Asking who was for the bill, Short then answered, "Wall street, the international bankers and foreign investors."

Replying, Representative Thomason (Democrat), of Texas, said, "Wendell Willkie, his leader, is for the bill, the Republican Secretaries of War and Navy, the Army General Staff and a majority of the American people."

Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, cosponsor of the bill, delivered the major speech of the day for the bill, calling upon the House for quick action to get an Army of 1,200,000 men.

Wins Ovation

"We are not masters of the situation," he declared, "but the thing I plead for is that we shall fashion our own defense so that we shall be master of our own destiny."

He was given a standing ovation when he finished.

Wadsworth told the House that plans for the draft provide for registration the middle of otober and mobilization of the first men between November 7 and 10.

The New Yorker did not point out that this means no men would be actually drafted until after the elections November 5, but others were quick to call attention to the fact. Plans originally announced by the Army would have called out 400,000 men October 1, a schedule later revised.

A War Department statement several weeks ago that the first draftees would be inducted into service October 15 brought from Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, an opposition leader, an exclamation of disbelief. He declared the Administration had no intention of permitting "mothers to kiss their drafted sons goodby until after election day."

Mothers Disagree

One of the highlights of the conscription debate came as two women members of Congress, each with sons of draft age, took opposite sides on the measure.

Representative Clara McMillan (Democrat), of South Carolina, drew a round of applause when she urged adoption of the bill as necessary to "peace and freedom." Telling the House she had five sons, one beyond 21, she added:

"If and when my sons are needed for the defense of their country I do not want them to go up against experienced soldiers, untrained and unskilled. It will be with a heavy heart but with honest conviction that I shall vote for this measure."

Immediately afterward, Representative Frances P. Bolton (Republican), of Ohio, took the floor and declared she had three sons, two of them already conscripted under the National Guard mobilization. She said she saw in the bill "more danger than defense, more dictatorship than democracy" and added:

"Have you stopped to think that once the President has authority to conscript 1,000,000 men annually, and to take over industry as he deems necessary . . . he has all the powers he needs to declare both a state of war and then a dictatorship? He himself has told us he believes no one else qualified to rule us. Have you thought that this bill implements him to do just this—rule?"

Until yesterday there had been no indication from Administration sources as to their views on the "draft industry" proposal. Wendell Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate, attacked the Senate-approved Russell-Overton amendment as "potential dictatorship" and called upon President Roosevelt to make known his stand on the proposal. Mr. Roosevelt declined to comment, declaring he did not discuss pending legislation.

Vinson Plan Called Fair

The Navy memorandum described some provisions of the Vinson measure as "fair" and had no criticism of others. There have been reports the amendment was drafted by the Navy high command.

The report made no mention of the Russell-Overton amendment, but some of the criticism of the Smith plan would apply equally to the Senate-approved bill. Under the latter, the Army or Navy would take over plants whenever they are "unable to arrive at an agreement" with its owners. Compensation would be fixed by the courts.

Rental of factories taken over rather than forced purchase is provided in the plan approved by the House Military Committee and sponsored by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Connecticut. It would apply only to manufacturing plants. Some members of Congress believe that the Russell-Overton amendment covering "plants and facilities" might include newspapers and radio stations.

retary Stephen T. Early that "Hitler can find out for himself" when and where the World War destroyers will leave for Canada.

Asked whether any of the vessels already had left for Canada, Early retorted:

"Hitler can find that out for himself—when they leave, where they are, and anything else about them, as far as I am concerned."

At Boston, it was expected that four of several other destroyers in the yard would leave some time today. Painters and fitters were active on the vessels, the Associated Press said.

Senator Barkley, majority leader, said after a legislative conference at the White House that an appropriation might be necessary to carry out military work on the new British bases, but that it was too early to tell definitely. He pointed out that the President might use for this purpose some of the $200,000,000 fund that Congress gave him to use at his discretion.

Actual fortification of the new bases would be undertaken one at a time, Barkley believed, with Bermuda—strategically astride the Gulf Stream—slated perhaps for first attention.

Hitler's power to block lease of Dutch, French and Danish possessions in this hemisphere just now, officials said, was owing mainly to the fact that granting of such leases would be a violation of armistice terms, probably bringing swift reprisals in Europe.

Speculation that the United States and Australia might reach a defensive understanding was also scouted yesterday, by officials familiar with Australian-American relations.

Diplomats in close touch with the plans of the French, Dutch and Danish governments told The Post that none of these governments was in a position just now to grant leases to the United States.

Greenland, a Danish possession, has been described by President Roosevelt as belonging to the Western Hemisphere. Defense experts have advocated construction of military bases on the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, of the Canadian coast, and on the Dutch oil refinery island of Curacao, in the Caribbean.

Secretary of State Hull and Early both said yesterday they had no knowledge of further defense base negotiations with France or The Netherlands.

Meanwhile, as some of the high strategy behind the destroyer-base deal emanated from official circles, naval authorities said that every one of the sites acquired from Britain could be put to immediate use as soon as experts agree on exact limits of the sites.

Every one of the locations has a harbor, it was pointed out, that could be used, at least by destroyers and cruisers.

One effect of the new arrangement, one officer said, would be to release British vessels from the Western Atlantic for combat against Germany and Italy in waters closer to Europe.

Other experts said that a repercussion of the historic trade would be to free the United States fleet for wider duties in the Pacific, where it could act as a more effective counterweight to Japan's announced ambitions.

Early reported that the President had received several hundred messages about the trade with Britain, almost all congratulatory.

Reminded that Wendell L. Willkie has criticized "secrecy" of the arrangement with Britain, Early commented:

"I take it Mr. Willkie doesn't like anything the President does."

Japanese Soften Tone to Indo-China

Chinese Skeptical Of Invasion Now; French Prepared

By the Associated Press

Hongkong, Sept. 4.—French and Chinese reports from Indo-China indicated tonight authorities there may have dodged a Japanese army ultimatum by a shrewd combination of firmness and temporizing.

French informants in Hanoi, capital of Indo-China, said the Japanese had now presented a "modified ultimatum." This, it was reported, demanded only certain unspecified "military facilities" in place of the original demands for the use of the port of Haiphong as a naval base and the right to transport Japanese troops over the Indo-China Railway to invade China.

French and Japanese representatives were understood to be planning a meeting tomorrow to consider the demands. The Indo-China authorities politely refused to accept the first ultimatum and, at the same time, asked for time for consulation with Vichy.

Although informed Chinese believed Japanese army authorities in Indo-China had failed to run a quick bluff on the local government, they considered the situation still tense.

(Shanghai dispatches told of the unexpected arrival there of Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet. He came from Tsingtao on the Cruiser Marblehead, apparently to keep in close touch with developments in the Indo-China crisis.)

The Chinese said right along they did not believe the Japanese would attempt to invade Indo-China until the rains cease in mid-October.

Chinese said the Chungking government had reached an agreement with Indo-China authorities regarding measures to be taken in event of a Japanese invasion.

Governor General Jean Decoux was said to have assured Chungking that under no circumstances would Japanese armed forces be permitted to pass through Indo-China or establish bases there.

The Japanese fleet was reported to be cruising outside Indo-China waters, blockading the entire northeast coast.

Taipong was a hive of activity, with French and native troops mobilized and manning all defense positions along the coast.

Youth Claims He'll Inherit An Earldom

FRED RAWLINGS

Sigma Phi Epsilons of George Washington University threw a farewell party last night for one of their brothers who will become an English knight when he goes back to England, they heard.

It was when Fred Rawlings announced to his fraternity brothers he was leaving for England today to do what he could for the country in its hour of need that they pumped him until they got the story—all the story except the name of his grandfather, from whom they were told he would eventually inherit the title of earl and an enviable fortune and estate at Brighton, in Sussex.

"Since it's already out, I'd just as well tell you the story, too," Rawlings told reporters who cornered him during his party at the Fraternity House, 1715 Nineteenth street northwest.

So he recalled how he came to the decision to give up his American citizenship. He was born at San Francisco, where his father, the late Sir Frederick Brightwell Rawlings, was British consul for many years, he said. His mother came from San Antonio, Tex.

He said his grandfather established a trust fund for him when he was a child, providing funds for his education at prep school in California, at Lehigh University and at George Washington University, where he was graduated in 1936.

"I owe it to my grandfather and to England, where, after all, the money was made for my trust fund, to do something in return," Rawlings confided.

Rawlings, who is giving up a job as supervisory assistant in the Washington office of the Life Insurance Co. of New York and has been living in a rooming house at 5325 Colorado avenue northwest, will leave Washington by train today.

He had hoped all along that he could get away without any publicity, he explained, and he would rather not say anything about the title.

Insistent questions, however, brought the information that his grandfather is an earl and that the grandson would inherit the title.

But the mystery of the earl's identity remained. Young Rawlings refused to disclose it; he said the publicity might embarrass his grandfather.

The Post tried a number of British sources and reference books but was unable to establish the earl's identity.

All other sources exhausted, The Post telephoned the S. P. E. house as the party was breaking up for just one more try at Rawlings himself.

He came across after a lengthy plea. "The Earl of Brighton," he said.

Back to the references, and there was no Earl of Brighton listed. Rawlings was telephoned again. He hedged, and finally said, "It's the Earl of Sussex." The Earl of Sussex is listed as H. R. H., the Duke of Connaught.

a bomb struck a workers' settlement, the Germans said.

Earlier, authorized German sources had reported that antiaircraft fire and Nazi chaser planes had broken up an attempt by British bombers to raid Berlin for the second straight night. These sources asserted only two planes penetrated the Berlin defenses.

One of the invading planes was reported shot down outside Berlin.

The British dropped incendiary and explosive bombs on various parts of the Reich, it was reported. Two apartment houses and one warehouse were hit, but the majority of the bombs landed on open fields, it was said.

Berliners spent a couple of hours in air-raid shelters again during the air-raid alarm, and planes were heard over the capital.

Bern on Alert

Bern, Switzerland (Thursday), Sept. 4 (AP).—A 45-minute air raid alarm kept Bern on the alert last night and early today, indicating British bombers again had crossed the Swiss frontier to raid Italy or southern Germany.

Switzerland has protested the flight of British bombers over her territory.

(This was the second indication that an air raid over Italy was in progress. The first was the fact, reported in New York by Columbia Broadcasting System, that Rome's international radio stations were silent for an hour and 20 minutes.)

French Coast Shelled

London, Sept. 4 (AP).—British coastal guns, including the Dover batteries, and the Royal Air Force combined tonight in attacking the French coast for the fourth consecutive night. Apparently they were seeking to blast German gun emplacements from which the Nazis have shelled Dover.

The R. A. F. attacked German airdromes in the Pas de Calais area, just opposite Dover, the air ministry announced today.

German Forests Blasted

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 4.—Blasting great tracts of dense woodlands where it is known the Germans have hidden armament factories and munitions stores, Royal Air Force bombers have unleashed a devastating barrage of incendiary bombs on the famous Black Forest east of Baden-Baden, the dense woods of the Ober Hartz Mountains, the Grunewald Forest on the outskirts of Berlin and the Forest of Thuringen.

Everywhere the terrible rain of bombs spattered great fires swept the woods and terrific explosions occurred, according to various official announcements issued here today.

This new phase of Britain's aerial counteroffensive against Germany, which hitherto had been confined to air bases or cities where Nazi war factories or naval bases are located, was disclosed for the first time today.

This morning and last night, the air ministry announced, R. A. F. bombers ferreted out armament plants and munitions depots hidden deep among the dense pine forests of the Ober Hartz Mountains and the Grunewald forest near the German capital. Late Monday night British raiders had strewn their incendiaries through the Black forest and the Thuringen forest, where the resulting fires were still raging, according to reports by reconnaissance pilots, while the attacks were being delivered in the Hartz Mountains and the Grunewald forest early today and last night.

Power Stations Attacked

Other R. A. F. raiders smashed at enemy electric power stations and gas works in Berlin and other targets over a wide area, including five important advance air bases in nearby France from which German fliers have been taking off on their attacks on Britain.

Many hundreds of incendiary bombs flamed among the pine trees of the Hartz Mountains and the trees blazed like tinder. The fierce flames spread swiftly accompanied by momentary blinding flashes of light and big explosions as the fire area widened, according to the air ministry. One great conflagration lit up the sky so brightly the glow could be seen 70 miles distant by raiding British crews while they were en route homeward.

"When we got to the areas allocated to us," related one pilot, "the fires were already burning. Somebody had got there before us. Our bombs started 40 more separate fires. They blazed up tremendously and every now and then we could see vivid white flashes.

"There was something important in that vicinity because antiaircraft fire started coming up at us and you wouldn't normally expect a lot of guns cracking off at you from the middle of a forest. At a height of 13,000 feet my rear gunner could read the time on his watch and everything in his turret was lit up by the fires below."

Japan Changes Navy Minister

Hull Warns Japan On Indo-China

formation from military and naval authorities that Japanese occupation of Indo-China would seriously alter the status quo and create a powerful new hazard for the Philippines, the Dutch Indies, British Malaya and Burma.

Japanese seizure of the French colony, whose leaders have reportedly declared independence from the Vichy regime of Marshal Petain, would bring into Nippon's hands a new French naval base on the southeastern tip of Indo-China, potentially a menace to all the southern Pacific.

After the fall of Holland, Hull warned all powers, especially Japan, that any tampering with the Dutch Indies would "menace peace in the Pacific."

Insistence on American determination to patrol a part of Shanghai's foreign area was the latest stage in an increasingly bitter dispute between the United States and Japan over who is to inherit powers relinguished there when British troops left August 15.

Kernel of the impasse, Hull revealed, is that Japanese authorities insist on taking over area "B," where important American interests are located.

Volunteers Patrol Sector

Pending solution of the difficulty, over which Hull was not optimistic, Sector "B" is being patrolled by the Shanghai Volunteer Defense Corps.

The text of Secretary Hull's statement on the Shanghai dispute follows in full:

"On August 15, at a meeting made necessary by notification that the British defense forces at Shanghai would be withdrawn, the Shanghai Defense Committee voted to assign Sector D in the International Settlement Defense Plan to the Japanese defense forces and Sector B to the American defense forces. This decision was reached by a majority vote, the commanding officer of the Japanese forces voting "No." The majority vote was subsequently approved by the Shanghai Municipal Council.

"As the American Consulate General and a considerable number of other important American interests are located in Sector B, which sector lies between the present American sector and the waterfront at which American naval vessels are customarily anchored, the Government of the United States gave its approval and informed the Japanese Government that this plan was agreeable to it.

"In view of the Japanese dissent, neither Sector D nor Sector B has been taken over by the defense forces. Special protection in Sector B is temporarily being provided by the Shanghai Volunteer Corps, pending arrival at an agreement.

"As this matetr is of substantial importance to all concerned, discussions are in progress between this Government and the Japanese government with regard especially to Sector B, and it is the hope of this Government that a reasonable settlement, considerate of all interests involved, for assumption of responsibility in Sector D by the Japanese defense forces, and in Sector B by the American defense forces will soon be arrived at."

Indo-China Statement

Secretary Hull's statement on Indo-China:

"I have noted the reports in the press regarding which inquiry is made to the effect that Japanese military authorities have delivered an ultimatum to the local authorities of French Indo-China in connection with demands for passage of Japanese troops across Indo-China for military operations against China.

"It will be remembered that during recent months this Government and several other governments, including the Japanese government, have given expression to their desire that the principle of the status quo be respected and be preserved unimpaired in the Pacific, with special references to the Netherlands East Indies and French Indo-China.

"In the absence of official confirmation of the reports of a Japanese ultimatum to the authorities of French Indo-China, this Government is reluctant to give credence to the reports now under reference. The situation and the subject to which these reports relate is, however, a matter to which this Government attaches importance, and it stands to reason that, should events prove these reports to have been well founded, the effect upon public opinion in the United States would be unfortunate."

Brazilian Declares Outcome Of War Is More Vital to U. S.

He Says Europe Needs South American Food No Matter Who Wins

MAJ. GUIMARAES

The outcome of the battle for England is a matter of more vital concern for the United States than it is for South America, in the opinion of a Brazilian army major.

Maj. Napoleao de Alencastro Guimaraes, 39, 6 feet 4 inches tall, is in Washington to discuss with the Brazilian Embassy details of his assignment—purchase of $4,000,000 worth of railway, road-building and dredging equipment.

He covered the war and economic relations in the Western Hemisphere in an interview at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

Pleased at New U. S. Bases

South America is pleased the United States has acquired new defense bases, but regardless of who governs Europe, trade with South America must be resumed after the war because Europe needs South American products, Maj. Guimaraes declared.

"The United States is 90 per cent self-sufficient," he pointed out. "Take the case of Argentina. She produces for export corn, wheat, meat—the very things the United States produces in such abundance that she could sell to Argentina.

"Brazil is an exception. We need everything the United States has and there are many things in Brazil the United States must have—coffee, rubber, tin, manganese."

Autos Could Be Used

There is plenty of manganese in Brazil, Maj. Guimaraes said. The ore is of medium quality, but far better, generally, than United States ore. What is needed to produce large quantities of the ore essential to steel and, therefore, to National defense production is "organization and finance," he said.

As an example of the potentialities of the Brazilian market for United States products, the major cited the automobile. There are, he said, 200,000 cars in Brazil for a population of 50,000,000, or one car for every 250 persons as contrasted with a United States ratio of one to five.

As swiftly as she can without piling up obligations beyond her ability to pay, Brazil, under the Vargas regime, is building railroads, highways, factories. Three of his countrymen, Dr. Guilherme Guinle, Col. Macedo Soares and Dr. Ary Torres, are now in Washington on a project for construction of a steel plant, Maj. Guimaraes recalled.

Relations Improved

Relations between the United States and Brazil have improved immeasurably in recent years, Maj. Guimaraes said, but much remains to be done. He cited three problems which must be solved before the two countries can fully realize their potentialities for trade.

The first obstacle to trade improvement, he said, is the high price of United States products. The second related to, but more likely to be solved than the first, is the high price in foreign trade of the American dollar. The third, he said, is the disinclination of American manufacturers to grant credit terms as liberal as those available in other countries.

In contrast to United States practices, he cited German policies. As much as 30 years ago, he said, it was possible for South America to buy even the smallest German trade item, ash trays, for example, on as much as six-month credit.

Sweden Told Nazis Can't Win By War in Air

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 4.—"Germany cannot gain victory by the air war." Such is the title under which one of the two chief pro-German Swedish dailies, Aftonbladet, publishes a dispatch from its Berlin correspondent, who says this is the opinion in military circles there.

The same circles believe, he says, that only through the landing of troops would it be possible to get a compromise peace with Great Britain.

Quoting neutral opinion in Berlin, the paper says three theories prevail. First, a compromise peace when German air attacks reach their peak, but "it is England's turn now to make the proposal." Second, a quick peace through an invasion. Third, victory through the air war and blockade "since Germany is unable to stage a successful invasion."

Naval Air Base Project Approved

Richmond, Va., Sept. 4 (AP).—State headquarters of the WPA announced approval today of a $146,150 project at the Naval Air Base near Norfolk.

It involves the clearing, draining, top-soiling and seeding of 500 acres of a tract on both sides of the Naval Base-Ocean View road. Approximately 397 men will be employed for six months. The draining will require the placing of 42,000 feet of pipe.

The Navy Department is furnishing $28,450 of the project's cost and the WPA is putting up the remainder.

D. C. Loses A Friend

The apparent defeat of Senator William H. King in the Utah primaries deprives the District of an understanding and loyal friend. Chairman of the Senate District Committee since 1933, Mr. King has given an enormous amount of time and energy to improvement of conditions in the local community. His departure from Congress will be a source of genuine regret to Washingtonians.

It appears that Senator King is paying the price for his independent attitude toward national issues. He may be roughly classified as a member of the conservative wing of the Democratic Party. Yet he has always been an individualist in the Senate. His votes have consistently reflected his convictions rather than the stand taken by his party.

In recent years Mr. King has been particularly hostile toward the New Deal. Presumably that was the largest factor in his defeat. His successful opponent, Congressman Abe Murdock, has the reputation of being an outstanding New Deal spokesman in the House.

There is no indication that Mr. King's activities on behalf of the District brought him disfavor in his home State. Yet it cannot be denied that long hours of work in the interest of the Capital City detract from any legislator's capacity for service in fields of more immediate concern to his constituents.

Senator King has sponsored many local bills that have become law in recent years. Among these are the Small-Claims Court Act, the statute fixing financial responsibility for motor accidents, the Beverage Control Act, the Lunacy Act, the Narcotics Act and many others. He was one of the sponsors of the Municipal Center project. For many years he has advocated reorganization of the District government, giving larger powers to the local authorities.

The reorganization bills and the Sumners resolution, which Mr. King sponsored in the Senate, might have progressed further toward enactment if the Senator had had more time to give to them. Their failure does not alter the fact that the people of Washington owe to Senator King a debt of gratitude for his conscientious service to the community over a long period of years.

Mexican Alarms

The full implications of the increasing political tensions below the Rio Grande are not precisely clear. But they seem to be of purely internal origin and without international significance, or, at any rate, without direct relation to the cataclysmic struggle on the other side of the Atlantic.

The partisans of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan become steadily bolder in their utterances. Yesterday the Almazanista electoral congress, which had already declared the general to be President-elect of Mexico, announced that it would employ "all the means which the law and the people grant us" to see that he is installed in office. In the dispatches this was interpreted as "tantamount to a call to arms."

Meanwhile, the language of Gen. Almazan himself likewise becomes stronger and stronger. In his most recent statement, issued this week in New York, he even hints of imminent revolt against the "racketeer government" of President Cardenas. Nevertheless, Gen. Almazan seems in no precipitate haste to return to Mexico, though promising that he will do so "at the proper time."

There are several reasons why any violent attempt at coup d'etat by Gen. Almazan's Mexican followers seems quite unlikely. First of all the genial Gen. Almazan has scarcely the kind of personality from which ruthless revolutionary leaders like Obregon, or political ideologues like Madero, are made. He is a wealthy man with extensive real estate interests which he would put at stake by sponsoring an armed uprising. Secondly, it would be almost impossible, in view of the vigilant border patrols, for a revolutionary party to obtain arms in quantities to assure success. Finally, it is unthinkable that the United States at this critical juncture in its history would view with equanimity anything as dangerous to its own interests as civil war in Mexico.

The truth of the situation seems to be that as economic conditions in Mexico go from bad to worse Gen. Almazan has waxed in popular favor. His cause is naturally the focus of all dissatisfaction with the Cardenas regime. Originally Almazan's strength lay among the middle class moderates and among that considerable section of Catholics which is still embittered by antireligious policies inaugurated by the Calles administration.

It is, however, the workers and peasants who have suffered most from the present economic stagnation, the accumulating public debt, wage cuts, and the progressive depreciation of the peso. It may be that discontent has reached the point where it gives plausibility to the claim that Gen. Almazan was actually chosen to succeed Cardenas and "counted out" by the government-controlled election officials. But that charge is vehemently denied by the government. And it is quite possible that neither the Almazanistas nor the Comachistos know whether they or their opponents are telling the truth.

Hitler's Hope Deferred

Almost seven weeks have elapsed since Hitler addressed what he called "one more appeal to reason" to the British, warning them that if they rejected it the British Empire would be destroyed.

It is significant that the Fuehrer has found it necessary at this time to renew that warning. It is equally noteworthy that in his latest pronouncement he was careful to make no claims as to when British resistance would be overcome. Indeed, while boasting anew of the German army's indisputably spectacular achievements, and mocking at British hopes of a revolution in the Reich, he let his people know that Germany's final victory is not yet in sight.

When Chamberlain spoke of a three-year conflict, Hitler told his hearers, "I told Field Marshal Goering to prepare for five years." From this and other statements in the Fuehrer's address it is possible to surmise that something has gone awry with Hitler's plans.

Possibly Great Britain has proved a far tougher nut to crack, militarily and psychologically, than the Nazis anticipated. Certainly there is no evidence that the destruction of life and property produced in Great Britain by the daily air raids has weakened either her will or her capacity to resist.

On the other hand, Hitler's efforts to dismiss the British air raids on Germany as merely a "nuisance" suggest that they have had a greater effect than he is willing to admit. Otherwise would he not now threaten to "erase" Britain if these raids go on. Since there is nothing in Hitler's past record to suggest that he has ever been moved by humanitarian considerations, the assumption must be that no British cities have been "erased" up to now because the Nazis have been unable to do so.

Germany may seek during the weeks before bad weather sets in to intensify her aerial attacks. And, as Anthony Eden recently warned his fellow countrymen, an actual attempt at invasion of the British Isles is still a possibility. Fearful days are ahead for the British. They do not need Hitler's latest warning to know that.

But the outlook for Germany is not entirely rosy, certainly not as rosy as it appeared to be on that day two months ago when Winston Churchill envisaged the possibility of the British having to fight on "the beaches, landing grounds, in fields, in streets and on the hills."

Hitler's latest speech gives the impression of being, in no small measure, a notice to his own people that hope of victory must be further deferred.

Other Bases Needed

An Army-Navy mission headed by Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade has left for Bermuda on the first leg of an inspection tour of naval and air base sites made available to the United States by Great Britain in Monday's historic transaction. And, with the President in a position to devote part of the $200,000,000 discretionary defense fund to construction of such bases, that work may not be long delayed.

This prompt action is no less desirable than the trade of American destroyers for British bases. In building up our defenses time is of the very essence. It is also good news that the Administration does not plan to stop with the acquisition of the eight base sites from Great Britain but also intends to negotiate for others as well.

There is, for instance, Greenland. In unfriendly hands, it might become the stepping stone for an aerial attack on Canada and northeastern United States. There are the Dutch West Indies, particularly Curacao and Aruba with their great oil refineries. There are the Galapagos Islands which belong to Ecuador. An enemy power in control of these strategically placed islands could use them as a base for an attack on the Panama Canal from the Pacific.

With Denmark a captive nation subject to Hitler's bidding, the negotiation of any agreement concerning Greenland might seem to be practically out of the question at present. However, the government of the Netherlands continues to function in London, although all Dutch territory on the European continent has been overrun. It should be possible to undertake negotiations with that government if, in the opinion of our naval and military authorities, the establishment of American naval and air bases in the Dutch colonies in this hemisphere is needed to round out our defenses.

For a truly adequate defense system of hemispheric rather than continental proportions it seems desirable also for the United States to seek the right to use of airfields in South America. Bases in the easternmost region of Brazil, where South America is only about 1,500 miles from the nearest point in Africa, would be particularly valuable.

Since the defense of the Americas concerns the other nations of this hemisphere as well as the United States, the acquisition of such rights should not prove too difficult of accomplishment. The precedent which Great Britain has now established may serve to hasten any negotiations for this purpose not yet completed.

Lacking In Candor

Approval of the exchange of over-age American destroyers for naval and air bases in Great Britain's Western Hemisphere possessions is widespread. In part that approval reflects the desire of an overwhelming majority of the American people to help Great Britain in her struggle with Nazi Germany. To an even greater extent it indicates public appreciation of the enormous advantages the United States has won through this transaction.

Chairman Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee has effectively summarized what is doubtless the reaction of most informed citizens. "We need what we are getting," he said, "a great deal more than we need the destroyers." Instead of weakening the United States in its role of chief protector of the Western Hemisphere, the transaction has added great potential strength to our defenses on the sea and in the air.

These unquestioned gains do not mean, however, that no aspect of the transaction is open to criticism. Wendell L. Willkie, for example, seems to approve the results attained through the agreement. Yet he distrusts the method by which it was effected. Others fear that the President acted without sufficient legal authority.

The desirability of the transaction from the viewpoint of our national interests will not be minimized by scrutinizing the methods by which it was brought about. The trade is a fait accompli. But the methods used by the United States Government are a subject of continuing importance which may very properly be examined and debated because of their bearing upon many other issues.

Mr. Willkie's chief complaint seems to be that the country was not informed as to the transaction until after it was made. Protests on that point might be carried to unreasonable extremes. The President and the Department of State necessarily conduct their negotiations with other countries behind closed doors. They cannot be expected to do otherwise. Nor are they under obligation to reveal details of such agreements before negotiations have been completed.

The President's real blunder was in misleading the public as to the quid pro quo which the United States was preparing to give in return for naval base leases. At a press conference two weeks ago he maintained that Great Britain's request for American destroyers was not to be associated with the acquisition of naval base rights from that country. According to some reporters, he emphasized three times that destroyers were in no way involved in the prospective transaction.

In this respect the President was grossly unfair to the press and to the public it serves. That lack of candor in dealing with a great national issue is not less regrettable because the agreement now effected proves to be a significant achievement.

Twenty Years After

Editorial which won the American Legion prize for the Ames (Iowa) Weekly Milepost.

From the travail of a war-weary world on whose altar had been laid the sacrifice of 10,000,000 men, the American Legion was born. The high purposes of their resolve was that "for God and Country" they banded together to cement the friendships, the campfires, the bivouacs of danger and the love of country into a workable and understanding group.

Today, when the world is upside down and on fire, their voice is still raised. For years they have urged adequate national defense; universal service has been a project since 1922; antagonism to the existence of subversive influences now projected into every State of this Union is not new to the legion; America, sleeping like Rip Van Winkle, in a world afire, the legion tried to arouse the people to get prepared.

The legion is confident that today it is needed as much as it was in 1917-1918. It has a manifest call to put first the well-being and safety of this land.

As Gov. Nate Kendall so fittingly said, when he spoke to a group of veterans, "this imperial republic of ours, proud of yesterday, contented with today, hopeful of tomorrow, sails on and on through the countless cycles of its shining career, until finally it shall realize the loftiest aspirations of the most devoted patriot who ever offered his best blood to establish it, to maintain it, to defend it."

"I Have Offered My Outstretched Hand"

Letters To The Editor

Third-Term Opinions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The United States is certainly ripe for a dictatorship when it admits democracy has decayed to the extent that from its 132,000,000 citizens it cannot produce a new leader capable of directing the Nation's affairs.

If the present Administration were above reproach, there might be some justification for asking a longer extension of authority for Mr. Roosevelt than was ever offered to or accepted by any previous President, including the founders of this democracy. But there have been so many failures in the solving of the Nation's vital problems, such as unemployment, the national debt increase, industrial stagnation, and others, that even to ask for a continuation of power seems ridiculous to anyone who values his freedom.

The very admission by the Democratic Party that after eight years in power, controlling the key positions in government, it has failed to produce a single man capable of succeeding to the Presidency proves the mediocrity of the men who have been guiding the destiny of the Nation.

Those in power now tell us we face a very grave crisis because of Hitler's conquest of European democracies. If this is true, we face a far graver crisis by permitting the controls of our Government to continue in the hands of men who have utterly failed to provide sound leadership in the past eight years. No more emphatic reason could be cited for a change in administration.

EARLE J. MORGAN.
Washington, Aug. 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt does not seem to think that he should be re-elected to a third term for the welfare of the country, but the American people, the American voters, seem to think that way, and they will decide at the polls this November. If the President does think that way, that is his privilege, and he is entitled to his own opinion.

There is no occasion for the President of the United States to debate the weighty situation with Mr. Willkie, the Republican nominee, as urged by Capt. Charles H. Coe in The Post of August 26. The President has plenty of able men who, if Mr. Willkie wishes, will debate the welfare of the country and especially its present form of government. Mr. Willkie was offered the opportunity only last week when Paul V. McNutt accepted the challenge. Was it accepted? No.

The American people in these troubled times do not want a change. We have had seven years of Franklin D. Roosevelt; we all believe him honest, sincere in all his undertakings, and loved by all. In accepting Mr. Willkie, a man unknown, the American people would be in more danger than from Hitler. It is up to Mr. Willkie to prove otherwise.

CAPT. J. W. McDONALD.

Stonewall Jackson

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On August 31 a belated recognition of a great hero was unveiled on the Manassas battlefield. In spite of the threatening weather, a large crowd assembled to pay honor to one of the greatest soldiers of any age—a military leader of such caliber that he is recognized by emulation in every war college in the world—Stonewall Jackson.

Surely he is important enough to have a memorial in granite and bronze all to himself. But no. The statue also carries the names of two Virginia Governors and three State senators.

Wake up Virginia. Are you erecting monuments to heroes of the past, or to living politicians?

Dr. Butler Places Blame

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems that Dr. Butler, of Columbia, has just awakened from a long silence on politics. He bursts forth with a blast on the "petty politicians" of 1920 for their failure to take the United States into the League of Nations. He attempts to make these politicians responsible for the collapse of Europe and for the present war.

We may well agree with Dr. Butler on many of the things that might have happened had this Nation entered the league. But he seems to forget some important history. His so-called "petty politicians," after some delay, approved the league constitution and adopted the resolution that provided for entry into the league. The Senate, out of abundant caution, made reservations to certain of the league's articles. But these reservations were no impediment whatever to entrance to the league; they did little more than limit the league's powers to the superior authority of the Constitution.

After all this was done, President Wilson cast the entire proceedings back in the face of the Senate and proposed to have his way or stay out of the league.

Dr. Butler should remember that the politicians at Washington, insofar as possible, did precisely what he now says they should have done.

Fingerprinting

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter by "Resident of D. C." in The Post of September 2, saying that fingerprinting of respectable people is not justified, is a direct slam at men in military service. They are no more guilty of a crime than the so-called respectable people whom he mentions. Furthermore, every Government employe is fingerprinted when he accepts a Civil Service position.

The only people who need fear fingerprinting are the known crooks and those who have committed a crime and left their fingerprints as a clew to an otherwise unsolved crime.

I was first fingerprinted when I joined the Navy in 1923 and have been several times since, the last date being December 1, 1939, when I received a probationary appointment in Civil Service. So, unless Mr. Resident of D. C. has committed a crime, he has no need to feel a sense of inferiority by having his prints taken, but he should know that that is one means of proving that he wasn't there.

A good example of the need of fingerprinting of everyone in this country is the Lovelsville plane tragedy. Think it over Mr. Resident of D. C.

Our Traffic Toll

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Sunday papers devoted page 1 and several more full pages to reports of an air crash that snuffed out 25 lives. The Post of September 3 devoted 15 lines on page 8 to an item headed, "402 Die Violently as Nation Marks Holiday Week-end."

Traffic takes approximately 100 lives daily in the United States, and we take it in stride. The air crash starts numerous investigations. The multiplied death toll of every day demands only better roads for still higher speed.

What queer beings men are!

EDWARD FERRIS.
Washington, Sept. 3.

Dangerous Intersection

To the Editor of The Post: Sir—More than two months ago 150 citizens living at that mystic maze of intersections, cross-sections, triangular parks and junctions of Wyoming avenue, Kalorama road, Nineteenth street and Columbia road signed a petition asking the District Commissioners and Public Utilities Commission to give this, one of our busiest thoroughfares, some kind of traffic protection for the safety of the pedestrian as well as the careful-driving automobilist—something we never had for 20 years.

From California street and Columbia road to Eighteenth street there is not a traffic light, safety zone, a white walkway, slowdown sign or safety device. We have no speed limit—any and every thing in that section, including street cars, go pell-mell, helter-skelter at a speed of 30 to 50 miles an hour, defying the pedestrian to cross the street at any point during the rush hours morning and afternoon.

Knowing from past experience the dilatory tactics of this commission I mailed a copy of this petition to the White House, addressing it to the President personally, one to the chairman of the House District Committee, also one to the President of the street railway, and one to each of the four daily papers—and all of this without result.

As the petition shows, unlimited parking is permitted on the west side of Columbia road from Wyoming avenue to Nineteenth street, entirely blocking the entrance to one of our large apartment houses, both morning, afternoon and night, with no way to enter from an automobile without stopping in the middle of the street, blocking traffic, and running the risk of arrest or an accident. Repeated requests have been made to Mr. Van Duzer for "No Parking" signs, without any result whatever.

I have about come to the conclusion that there is no chance in the world to get any relief until Willkie comes to Washington in January and dumps all the red tape in these different departments into the Potomac River.

HERBERT H. BROWN.
Washington, Aug. 12.

Mr. Thomas' Challenge

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his letter to The Post of September 2, Mr. Simmons seems to think that Norman Thomas has Mr. Willkie on a limb as a result of a recent challenge to debate. In 1932 the same Mr. Thomas invited Mr. Lemke to debate. When Mr. Lemke declined the invitation he was branded a coward by a Thomas paper.

Lest Mr. Simmons carry too far his self-assumed political fortitude, he might be reminded that in that same year Mr. Thomas was challenged to a debate by Verne L. Reynolds, the then Presidential candidate of the Socialist Labor Party. Mr. Reynolds posed this question, "Resolved that the Socialist Party is antiworking class and a procapitalist reform party." Mr. Thomas dodged the challenge.

Now if Mr. Thomas has acquired more political bravery since 1932, let him try his ability with John W. Aiken who is now touring the country for the Socialist Labor Party as its Presidential candidate. Mr. Aiken will welcome the opportunity to expose fraudulent programs along with political cowards. The publicity seekers might be disappointed but at least such a debate would be highly illuminating to certain misguided individuals who parade under the political banner of Socialism.

The Post Impressionist

I Don't Like Dogs

"LET'S GET a dog," my wife suggested.

We were sitting on the lawn at the rear of the house, sipping highballs in the cool of the evening after putting the 4-year-old son to bed.

"Why?" I hedged.

"A dog would be nice for Junior," my wife pointed out. "Every boy should have a dog. Besides, it could bark if prowlers came around."

"What kind of dog do you want?" I asked.

"Oh, a medium sort of dog. Not too large, and not too small. It will have to be good-natured, because of Junior. And I won't have it if it isn't housebroken."

"Suppose Junior doesn't like it?" I said.

"Nonsense," she retorted. "All boys like dogs."

All the while I had been thinking about the only dog I ever owned. It was a "medium sort of dog," really a puppy, and pure mongrel. It had the floppy ears of a setter, the short hair of a pointer, the nose of a rabbit hound, and a stumpy tail. It was coal black except for two white mittens on its front paws. It had a slight case of rickets.

Its eyes were its best feature. They were soft brown in color, large and wistful, and always pleading for affection.

I was about 5 years old when the mutt strayed into my life. I was playing alone in the yard, after breakfast. Suddenly the puppy appeared out of nowhere. It stood off a short distance, its big brown eyes on mine, eager to be petted but ready to dash away if it were not welcome.

Its soft black skin hung in loose folds, revealing its ribs. I took it into the kitchen and gave it a bowl of milk and bread. Then I showed it to my mother and asked if I might keep it. My mother was a tender-hearted woman. "You may feed it and keep it until you find its owner," she said. "Then you'll have to take it back. In the meanwhile, keep it out of your stepfather's way."

My stepfather was a stern, silent man. He never punished me, but, on the other hand, he never tried to be friendly. I understood him bettter when I grew older, but as a small boy I was afraid of him.

When my stepfather came home that evening, I hid the puppy in the kitchen. Later I put it to bed in a box in my room, bedding it down with an old blanket. But a high-spirited puppy is hard to conceal. My stepfather discovered its presence the next day when it slipped into the dining room while we were at dinner. He frowned but made no comment other than to warn me that I couldn't keep it if it made any noise after he retired. "I won't have a howling dog around the house, keeping me awake," he said.

"It doesn't howl," I told him. "It's a good dog."

The puppy was still too young to be housebroken. My mother permitted me to keep it in my room with the understanding that I would clean its bedding and train it properly. But I was a small boy, and careless. By the end of the week my stepfather was in an uproar. I had bathed myself, bathed the puppy, and changed its blanket. But he was not satisfied.

"The house smells like a kennel," he told my mother. "Tonight the puppy sleeps outside—and every night from now on."

When bedtime came, he lifted the puppy by its scruff and deposited it in a box on the kitchen porch. It whimpered a little but made no other sound until the house was dark and my stepfather in bed. I lay huddled under the cover, wondering if the puppy was cold. Presently I heard it scratching and whimpering at the kitchen door. Slipping out of bed, I tip-toed to the door. There was the puppy, crying to be taken in. I hugged it to my chest and crept back to bed. But my stepfather was still awake. A moment later he loomed over my bed. He said nothing, but grasped the puppy by the loose folds of its skin and took it back to the porch.

He had scarcely touched his bed when the puppy began to howl. I did not dare to stir from my bed. I pulled the cover over my head and sobbed.

My stepfather endured the howling as long as he could, hoping, I suppose, that the puppy would eventually quiet down. Finally I heard him swear and roll out of bed. My heart stood still and I stopped crying, holding my breath.

I listened, trembling, while he stalked through the house to the back porch. I heard him break a small branch from an apple tree that grew near the corner of the porch. The night was filled with sharp, agonized yelps as he began to beat the puppy. After an endless time he threw the switch away and returned to his room. The puppy whimpered for a while but it did not howl again for several hours. In the meantime I had cried myself to sleep.

Toward morning the puppy, its first lashing forgotten, began howling again. My stepfather got up and gave it another beating. I lay awake until dawn, then stole out to the porch to comfort my dog.

At breakfast my stepfather told me the puppy would have to go. That very day. His face was haggard from lack of sleep. "If I find that dog here when I come home tonight, I'll kill it," he said, and I knew he meant it.

After breakfast my mother said: "I think the puppy belongs to that Negro family over near the railroad. Mary said yesterday they had lost a dog." Mary was the wash woman. "You'd better take it to them."

I fed the puppy and lugged it across the field to the unpainted shanty beside the railroad embankment. Three children were playing in front of the shack. "How come you white folks tried to steal our dog?" the oldest of the three demanded.

I set the puppy down without a word, and trudged home. I never saw it again, but once I heard it yelping and I knew its owners were beating it.

When I was a few years older, my mother offered to buy me a dog. I told her I did not want one.

"Well," my wife was saying, "do we get a dog, or don't we?"

"No, I think not," I said. "Children become too fond of dogs."

Today And Tomorrow

The Bedrock Of Policy

IN CONNECTION with the present agreement, it may be useful to remind ourselves once more that from the beginning the policy of defending the Western Hemisphere has rested upon understandings between Great Britain and the United States. This was the fact in the case of the Louisiana Purchase and it was the fact in the case of the announcement of the Monroe Doctrine.

Here, for example, is an account of the circumstances which led to the Monroe Doctrine, an account by Calhoun in a speech delivered 25 years after Monroe, Jefferson, Madison, and Adams had made their momentous decision to defend the independence of the Western Hemisphere. Calhoun's speech was delivered in 1848, shortly after the overthrow of the despotic governments at whose aggressive designs the Monroe Doctrine was directed.

"The Allied powers were the four great Continental monarchies —Russia, Prussia, Austria, and France. Shortly after the overthrow of Bonaparte these powers entered into an alliance called the 'Holy Alliance,' the object of which was to sustain and extend the monarchical principles as far as possible, and to oppress and put down popular institutions. England, in the early stages of the Alliance, favored it. The members of the Alliance held several congresses, attended either by themselves or their ambassadors, and undertook to regulate the affairs of all Europe, and actually interfered in the affairs of Spain for the purpose of putting down popular doctrines.

"In its progress the Alliance turned its eyes to this continent, in order to aid Spain in regaining her sovereignty over her revolted provinces. At this stage England became alarmed. Mr. Canning was then Prime Minister. He informed Mr. Rush (the American Minister in London) of the project, and gave to him at the same time the assurance that, if sustained by the United States, Great Britain would resist. Mr. Rush immediately communicated this to our Government. It was received here with joy; for so great was the power of the Alliance that even we did not feel ourselves safe from its interpositions. Indeed, it was anticipated, almost as a certain result, that if the interference took place with the governments of South America, the Alliance would ultimately extend its interference to ourselves.

"I remember the reception of the dispatch from Mr. Rush as distinctly as if all the circumstances had occurred yesterday. I well recollect the great satisfaction with which it was received by the Cabinet, it came late in the year, not long before the meeting of Congress. As was usual with Mr. Monroe upon great occasions, the papers were sent round to each member of the Cabinet, so that each might be duly apprised of all the circumstances, and be prepared to give his opinion. The Cabinet met. It deliberated. There was long and careful consultation; and the result was the declaration which I have just announced.

"All this has passed away. That very movement on the part of England, sustained by this declaration, gave a blow to the celebrated Alliance from which it never recovered. From that time forward it gradually decayed, till it utterly perished. The late revolutions in Europe have put an end to all its work, and nothing remains of all that it ever did."

THERE IS NO DOUBT that the adoption of the Monroe policy was an exceedingly bold act. Yet because of that policy the nations of this hemisphere enjoyed nearly a century of security, a century without great wars, a century in which no great armaments were needed. To that policy which was established, as Calhoun points out, by British and American resistance to the designs of the allied despotisms of Europe, the United States has owed the very isolation which so many of our current "isolationists" have never understood.

The present agreement is a continuation of this same fundamental policy—the policy of Jefferson, Madison and Monroe. It is the policy excluding despotic governments from this hemisphere. It is the policy of collaborating with Great Britain to enforce this policy. It is a policy based upon a recognition that the defense of the independence and freedom of this hemisphere requires that the Atlantic Ocean be controlled exclusively by free nations. These are the inner principles of American foreign policy, unchanged and in essence unchanging, since the earliest years of the republic.

ALWAYS, THEREFORE, when they have been put to the test, the American people have returned to these principles, have rediscovered them, have remembered them, have reaffirmed them, and have upheld them. For these principles were not invented by theorists. They are the products of an inexorable necessity—the necessity of our geographical position and of our accumulated historic development. For a time men may forget the principles that are the guiding genius of American foreign policy. For a time men may by propaganda be induced to deny those principles. But in the end Americans will always return to them for they are inherent in the very existence of the American Nation.

Those Hoosiers

TO UNDERSTAND the Hoosierism of Wendell Willkie or any other ausland Hoosier you have to rub out all preconceived notions and start over. Hoosiers are an entirely distinct breed of cats, and Hoosiery is comparable, in a harmless way, to the Germanism of the chosen people of the master race. They migrate freely, far and wide, few of them ever go back to Indiana except to strut their city clothes, in which they still look like Hoosiers, and they guard their racial purity, as it were, by avoiding marriage with the citizens of other States. A buck Hoosier who leaves Indiana may arch his neck and make passes at the local girls, but when it comes time for him to mate he goes back to Gosport or Union City or wherever and pairs off with some little number whose books he used to carry to school. They are dead against race defilement.

A Hoosier has Hoosier written all over him, but if other signs fail you can always tell him by the way he ties his necktie. The most expensive tie in the world looks like a two-bit necktie on a Hoosier. The reason is that they never learn how to tie a four-in-hand. They get the clerk to knot it for them in the store and after that they just slip the knot up and down the left-hand side. Their ties are the damnedest looking things after about three wearings, and, inasmuch as they keep on wearing the same tie until the stuffing breaks through the knot, you can't miss if you look for this identification mark. It is like the stripes on a chipmunk.

THEY MAY TAKE out citizenship, so to speak, in other States and vote in local elections, as Willkie has done in New York, but, again like the ausland Germans, they never become assimilated or naturalized. There are some exceptions, of course, but they are regarded as renegades. The race-true ausland Hoosier usually sends his young back to Indiana to be educated and to look over the current Hoosier crop for Hoosier mates. After they are educated in Bloomington, Lafayette or Greencastle they return to the homes of their parents, and even though they never see Indiana again except from the window of a train or plane they remain Hoosiers always.

The parents maintain the Hoosier traditions and culture in their homes, and any Sunday gathering in such a home is sure to be predominantly Hoosier, although they are hospitable people and live on very friendly terms with the neighbors. They just don't intermarry with the breeds of the communities in which they make their living or fortunes, and they always have a feeling that some day they are going back to Indiana, although, as I say, few of them ever do.

NO OTHER AMERICAN breed clings to its culture and traditions as tenaciously as the Hoosier. The Virginians have their racial peculiarities, but they are mostly affectations put on to impress the people of other regions in which they find themselves. To hear them tell it, they are all fox-hunting Virginians and descendants of Lees and Talliaferos, but if you observe the Virginian on his own home grounds you find him pretty average.

After all, they would never get anything done at home if all resident Virginians spent as much time and mental effort being consciously and picturesquely Virginian as their auslanders do. For instance, there is nobody quite so Irish as a professional New York Irishman, but when one of that type goes to Ireland and starts telling them how Irish he is and saying "wurra, wurra," and "bad cess to yez" the natives think he is nuts.

BUT HOOSIERY is not affectation at all. It is something in the blood and bone and spirit of the breed. They speak of people as "folks" and they never remain strangers long anywhere because a Hoosier in a hotel lobby or on a train will speak right up to the next man, calling him "brother," probably, and in five minutes will know all about his family, his business and what he thinks of the war and the election. In five minutes more he will have a crowd around him singing "The Banks of the Wabash." If we ever do get into a war the Hoosiers will make marvelous spies because of this disarming, although, as I said, it is hard to disguise them.

So Mr. Willkie's return to Indiana was entirely natural. You don't de-Hoosierize a Hoosier by setting him down in Wall street. More likely he will Hoosierize the street.

Other U. S. Jobs Not So Good As Army

THIS COLUMN bears on the conscription bill now before Congress, as the reader will see, toward the end. But only indirectly. Primarily this column is about another aspect of the Government's management of its business.

The United States Government gives three kinds of jobs—special kinds of jobs. That is, jobs for persons who cannot get jobs elsewhere. They are "made" jobs:

Through the Civilian Conservation Corps, the Government gives, to young men who do not have jobs, $30 a month plus "keep."

Through the National Youth Administration, the Government gives, to young persons who do not have jobs, $3 to $31 a month, for part-time work to enable them to remain in school or college.

Through the Works Progress Administration, the Government pays, to persons who do not have jobs elsewhere, from $31.20 to $94.90 a month, for what amounts to part-time work.

Here are three kinds of jobs the Government provides for persons who do not have jobs otherwise. Lack of jobs elsewhere was the reason these three institutions were set up. The Government does not seek persons for WPA nor NYA nor CCC. These jobs are gift jobs.

TURN NOW to another kind of job the Government offers. These are real jobs, jobs the Government wants very much to fill. The Government looks hard for persons willing and able to fill them. These are jobs in the Regular Army. (What is said here is about the Regular, standing, Army, not the Army contemplated by the pending conscription bill.)

These Regular Army jobs are extremely good jobs. From the first day, a man who joins the Regular Army gets his keep—food, clothing, lodging, medical and dental care, etc.; and in addition $21 a month, which is just being raised to $30. Where, in private employment, does a young man starting in have $30 a month left after paying for his food, clothing, rent and the like?

The $30 a month is for beginners. Within a few months, promotion, easy and quick in the lower grades, brings higher pay. In an army of 375,000, 114,590 will be sixth grade at $36 a month. Over 35,000 will be fifth grade at $54 a month. Nearly 33,000 will be fourth grade, at $60 a month. About 17,000, about 1 out of 20, will be third grade at $72.

And this promotion is not the only way to higher pay. A man who has a trade when he enlists, or learns a trade while in the Army, is called a "specialist" and gets from $3 to $30 a month extra pay. With specialist pay and promotion pay, about four out of five men in the Army get extra compensation. Finally, if a man stays in the service 30 years, he is retired with a pension of about four-fifths of his regular pay.

IN SHORT, Army jobs are good jobs, and the Government is seeking men to fill them, advertising for men.

Query: If a youth is on CCC, or NYA, or WPA, and if his physique will pass the Army tests, why does he not join the Army, which is a better job? Certainly it will be a better job when the pay is raised, as it is about to be.

It will be said the Army is dangerous. But it is not. Lacking insurance statistics, it is safe to say the Army in peacetime is not more dangerous than driving a taxi or working in a shop or store. As to war, if that comes, every young man will have to enter anyhow, as all did in the Great War.

Query: Why does the Government compete with itself? Why does it have these "made work" agencies competing with the Army? Why does the Government offer, to the same men, jobs which the Government does not want to fill—and jobs which the Government is anxious to fill? If a youth on CCC or NYA or WPA is fit for the Army, why does not the Government tell him there is a job in the Army for him? Can any youth say he cannot get a job, when as a matter of fact there is a job for him in the Army? In peacetime certainty, the Army job is better than the CCC or NYA or WPA one. And as for war, if that comes, these youths will be obliged to enter the Army anyhow, on the same basis as every other youth.

FINAL QUERY: If the Government, with the increase in pay, got all the men eligible from CCC, and NYA, and WPA, and also from the other ten millions said to be unemployed, and also from the many who have less desirable jobs in private industry—if the Government got all these, would not the Government then have all the men it needs; that is, some 500,000 in addition to the some 300,000 already in the Regular Army, and the some 250,000 in the National Guard? In short, is the pending conscription bill necessary? Many think the bill, in its present form, is not only unnecessary but a fundamental mistake.

To be clear: There is sound argument for universal training—training as distinguished from service—for the purpose of building up a reserve of manpower for emergency. But this pending conscription bill is not for training merely. It is for service; every conscripted youth is actually inducted into the Army.

The Once Over

Season's End

Days are cooler,
Gray is the sky,
Summer's wilted—
So have I.

Bare the beach, or Nearly so;
In the barn there's
No new show.

Gone's the clambake
And the mob;
No more fights with
Corn on cob!

Outboard motors
Now are still;
Home I eat and Get no bill!

Hotel porches
Now thin out;
Insects I no
Longer clout.

Traffic now is Rather thin;
Mustard ain't on Every chin.

Quite deserted
Sea spots are;
(Better that way,
Yes, by far).

Yacht clubs wear a Lonely air;
Boats at last can Find room there!

Flivvers are not Quite so thick;
Fewer folks yell,
"Tow car, quick!"

On the piers few Men now fish;
Scallops ain't
On every dish.

Mother's home to Find repose;
Now at times she Wears some clothes.

Summer's ended
For the best;
Now a guy can Get a rest.

It's A Hard Life!

Add similes: As exhausted as a workingman who took Labor Day off.

Self-control is defined by T. F. Finnerty as the ability to refrain from defining it as the ability to eat but one salted peanut.

The explanation of the hour: He was going to get married anyhow this summer.

In dismantling the New York World's Fair and selling off the exhibits, the bidder for the Aquacade will obviously argue that there is no pool like an old pool.

This is the time of year when the Summer Girl begins getting her letters back with a notation on the envelope, "Not at this address."

To a Sun-Kissed Wife

The sun has dyed you golden brown—
Your arms, your legs, your torso, honey,
But when you doff your bathing suit—
My word!—But you look very funny.

The stripe of white around your chest
Is something needing full correction—
A color that is only matched
By paleness in the far-aft section.

I do not like this zebra look,
This mixture of the bright and duller,
And hope that when the summer's done,
You'll turn, perhaps, to all one color.

The Spirt Of 1876

THE STORY of the Custer massacre, the last Indian victory on the American continent, has been told a thousand times, but never more humanly than in Katherine Gibson Fougera's "With Custer's Cavalry" (Claxton Press, Caldwell, Idaho, $3). For Mrs. Fougera tells the story as she heard it from her mother, Kate Gibson, and Mrs. Gibson was the wife of an officer who was near enough to hear the guns that killed Custer's men, and she herself first heard the ghastly news from an Indian scout, at Fort Rice, on the upper Missouri.

Illustrated with dozens of photographs of officers of Custer's command, in the flamboyant frontier uniforms and with the lush sideburns, beards and bicycle-handle mustachios common in the Army of the period; the book is a period piece. It brings back the life of an Army post in the Indian country in the 1870's. Even in its occasional outbursts of romantic language it is as authentic as Currier Ives.

Kate had a cough, and the Washington doctor advised that she discard the heavy crepe veil she wore in mourning for her father. The family was horrified, and Kate suggested that, to escape convention, she go West to visit her sister Mollie, married to an officer of the Seventh Cavalry and stationed at Fort Lincoln, near what is now Bismarck, N. Dak. Cowboys rode the Chicago streets in those days (or did Mrs. Gibson's memory miscarry?) and a stage Indian danced in the railway station as a side line to selling beadwork. The train stopped occasionally to permit passengers to shoot antelope; once it paused while the engineer helped a trapped bison calf to extricate its hoof from the rail. From Columbia, S. Dak., Kate traveled by stagecoach, being particularly impressed by an unusually neat and pleasant-spoken cowboy fellow traveler, who, she later learned, was the redoubtable Doc Wilson, holdup man.

"Do you shoot?" each officer asked Kate on being introduced; and when she shook her head, they persisted, "Do you ride?" Gen. Custer himself took her education in hand. Kate was the only unmarried girl in the regiment, and before she had been in Dakota a month she, too, was engaged to a young Lieut. Gibson. Gibson was the hero of scores of practical jokes, but his own favorite story was of the time he won $5 from Lieut. Varnum. Mrs. Custer had pressed him into service as a model for her husband's nightshirts, and while he was standing in her parlor, with a nightshirt over his uniform, Varnum had entered, guffawed, and bet that Gibson would not dare parade the company street in that costume. Army life was more informal in those days; Gibson won the bet.

THEN CAME the fateful summer of '76, when the tribes roamed restlessly, and the Army set out in pursuit, unaware of the size of the redskin army. Lieut. Gibson had missed transfer to Custer's command by a hairbreadth; he was with Benteen in what threatened to become almost as disastrous an engagement as Custer's own, five miles across the Little Bighorn River. But, back at Fort Rice, the women, gathered on a porch and singing "Annie Laurie," could not know just where in Montana their husbands might be. They saw soldiers running excitedly, and presently Horn Toad, a trusted Indian scout, came to them. "Custer killed —whole command killed," he gasped.

Kate Gibson's guitar slipped from her knees; the knitting ball fell out of Charlotte Moylan's hands and rolled across the porch, a letter fluttered away from Mrs. Benteen's lap, and Mrs. DeRudio's sewing bag fell with a thud from the arm of her rocking chair. You can believe that every one of those women remembered the details of that Army post porch scene for the rest of her life.

The steamboat whistle sounded next morning, as penetrating as a hunter's horn, and they knew it must bring more definite news. Unwashed and uncombed, the women trooped to the trader-store postoffice. Some had mail, and some did not. Kate Gibson had two, brief note scribbled just after the massacre and a fuller letter, written in pencil on the battlefield, nine days later. It is printed in this book, and tells a poignant story—no historian's summary, but the account of a fellow officer, writing to his wife, who knew the slain men by their first names.

The Custer battle has been analyzed to the last detail—as nearly as any battle can be, when every white man in it was killed. But these freshly told stories of the Army wives those men left behind—of the gala wedding, of the Christmas celebration with sagebrush and cedar boughs hung from the ceiling, since there were no trees in the neighborhood, of Gen. Custer's prairie "fete champetre," of sewing bees, of the wedding dress torn up to line the Benteen baby's coffin, of the bison stampede, and of the living fear of the "wily savage"—these stories paint in the background of the oft-told battle story. Two-thirds of a century after the battle, writers tend to make heroes of Sitting Bull and Crazy Horse, leaders of the hopeless Indian cause. In this book they appear as they seemed to the Army settlers in Dakota at the time—as a menace. It is written, authentically, in the spirit of 1876.

PEACEFUL RELAXATION from contemporary searchings of heart is offered by the contemplation of the heroic and homespun American past in Della Lutes' "Gabriel's Search" (Little, Brown, $2.50). It is a warm, eventful tale of life a century ago in Michigan, where the excitements of a camp meeting, a harvest supper, the arrival of undesirable settlers, depredations by wolves, are recounted most agreeably. The past seems very near and attractive as these new, venturesome families take up land, create cabin homes, a schoolhouse is planned and completed, an old man is laid in the new burial ground, young people court, quarrel and make up.

When Gabriel Reed came out, he was shaking with ague contracted on the hard horseback journey from York State. He was barely cured before he set eyes on pretty Debby Cooper, but it was to be many a season before she decided she would rather marry him than Hiram Peters. Meanwhile, Gabriel and Hiram kept their mutual dislike well alive, old Doc Snow visited many a sickbed and the Middle Western character had taken on quite a bit more of its shape.

Though Mrs. Lutes knows old-time Michigan intimately and deeply, she miraculously fails to air her knowledge; the homely words, scenes, customs flow naturally with the narrative. When two Indians and Hiram Peters are independently discovered robbing Gabriel's bee tree, and the bees take action, the scene is as irresistibly funny as though one has been a hidden spectator. The fashion in which timid little Davy shows himself to be a very brave boy is so unaffectedly told, his illness becomes so immediately a common problem to the whole neighborly settlement that the child's death has real poignance, as if it captured much of the bitterness and bereavement of all pioneers armed so feebly against perils of this type. The very dogs of the community take on character and importance: the fate of the community's one domestic cat brings home, better than a more significant detail might, the hazards of bare subsistence then. And how those people could eat! They could drink, too, and fight hard.

Worry, Worry, Worry, Let Rush Of Acid Start Stomach Ulcers

Physicians Measured Changes With Fine Tubes While Patients Discussed Troubles, Psychologist Report Says

By Howard W. Blakeslee,
Associated Press Science Writer.

State College, Pa., Sept. 4.—Discovery of a rush of acid into the stomach during intense worry was reported today to the American Psychological Association.

Two New York physicians said they found this in 11 persons with stomach ulcers, and in eight others with burning sensations in the stomach. The worry periods apparently were the direct cause of the ulcers and indigestion.

The report was made by Drs. Bela Mittelmann, of New York Post Graduate Hospital, and Harold G. Wolff, of Cornell.

The acid is hydrochloric, the normal digestive juice. The amount sometimes more than doubled during the worrying.

The physicians were able to measure the acid changes by fine rubber tubes running down, via the nose, into the stomach while the patients talked about their troubles.

One man was worrying because a fellow-worker had died unexpectedly and he had an obsession of fear of the same fate. His stomach trouble had started after this worry began and after he had tried to conceal it from everyone, even his wife.

Another stomach victim showed the rushes of acid when he told how his wife dominated him.

Still another patient's stomach went haywire at unexpected little things, like being told to use the patients' entrance instead of the visitors' entrance to the hospital where the tests were conducted. This man was a panhandler most of the time. About the only period when his stomach acted normally was after a few good days begging enabled him to take a little time off from "work."

Another man who had been a successful broker and church worker, but who had an affair with a servant girl, appeared with duodenal ulcer. His home life was unhappy. He, too, had the high acid during worry and rhythmic movements of his digestive system speeded up above normal during these attacks. Outbursts of anger, resentment and indignation caused the high acidity.

Residents of Seat Pleasant will receive door to door mail delivery beginning Wednesday, it was learned from Mayor William H. McGrath yesterday.

Mail will be delivered twice daily from the Benning Postal Station to residences which have been properly numbered and where mail boxes have been erected or door slots provided. The postal authorities prefer door slots, which must be 7 inches long and 1¼ inches wide, and placed not less than 30 inches from the floor line.

Army Enlistments Hit All-Time High

Summer Campaign For Recruits Brings 40,000 in August

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

The Army recruited more than 40,000 men in August, an all-time record for voluntary enlistments in the United States.

At the rate recruits are coming in, the new authorized strength of the Army—375,000 men—should be achieved without difficulty. The present strength is approximately 300,000.

Some military analysts, among them Hanson W. Baldwin, have argued that the United States could get along very well with a professional Army of 400,000 men. This argument has been used in the fight over the pending conscription bill.

However, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, has told congressional committees that an Army of something like 1,300,000 men is now deemed necessary.

Ceiling to Voluntary Enlistments

War Department officials have been very much gratified by the rising tide of recruits, but they say that there is a definite ceiling to voluntary enlistments. They think it might be possible to maintain a force of between 450,000 to 500,000 by enlistments, but they don't think it would ever go much beyond that.

Therefore the War Department is eager to have Congress complete action on the Burke-Wadsworth bill.

The recruiting bureau of the department, is proceeding as if conscription had never been mentioned on Capitol Hill, and presumably that will continue to be its policy until its goal has been achieved. The men they are after will be the hard core of the Army, professionals who will enlist for a hitch of three years.

The recruiting drive got under way early in the summer, and the number of enlistments has gone up monthly. The actual number of enlistment papers received in the War Department for August is 37,425. However, the papers for that month will continue to come in for ten days, and the recruiting directors say the final total should be over 40,000.

The previous high mark for voluntary enlistments was in May, 1917, the month after the United States went to war against Imperial Germany. The total was 39,589.

From the outset of the recruiting drive it has been noticeable that enlistments are slower in the very sections of the country where excitement over Hitler is greatest—the First Corps Area, of which Boston is the headquarters, and the Second Corps Area, of which New York is the headquarters.

Many Foreign-Born There

Various reasons for this have been advanced, among them the circumstance that in both corps areas there are large numbers of foreign-born.

The Fourth Corps Area (Atlanta) led all others in the number of recruits for August. Second was the Eighth Corps Area (San Antonio), with others in this order: Fifth (Columbus), Sixth (Chicago), Third (Baltimore), Seventh (Omaha), Ninth (San Francisco), Second (New York), and First (Boston).

5,000 Italians Hear Pope Attack Racism

By Herbert L. Matthews

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Sept. 4.—Five thousand members of Italian Catholic Action this morning heard from Pope Pius XII the importance he attaches to their organization and his desire that they "fight for the increased defense and consolidation of the reign of Christ in the bosom of humanity."

The 45-minute speech avoided any mention of politics or international affairs except for a few brief references. It is reliably understood that the pontiff changed his original text at the last minute, considering the time unpropitious for a statement on the war or peace. This tends to confirm general belief that the Pope has no hope for peace now and has no intention of making any sort of proposal.

From the viewpoint of Catholic Action in Italy and throughout the world, however, the speech was of the utmost importance and it was by no means devoid of indirect references which show a fundamental divergence with lay politics.

The whole idea of Catholic Action has, indeed, been regarded with suspicion by fascism, which has shorn it of every vestige of political activity. Therefore the fact that the pontiff called more than 5,000 members to the Vatican and addressed them in the presence of the highest dignitaries of the church shows a determination to keep the association alive, whatever happens.

Through this meeting the Pope has bound Catholic Action even more closely to the Holy See. Having made the organization purely religious, his holiness now considers it safe from attack. Yet, like all great confraternities, it remains a species of a state within a state.

Whatever happens the church has this body of the faithful at its call and today's ceremony was resounding proof of that fact. It was a collective act of faith by Italians, not to the state but to the church. It should not be supposed, however, that there was any shadow of antagonism or disobedience to the fascist state in this demonstration. The challenge was implicit and potential rather than actual.

"The divine fire of apostolic zeal," said the Pope in one revealing passage, makes of the members of Catholic Action "an auxiliary phalanx obedient to the voice of the Supreme Pastor and the direction of the bishops in the preservation and diffusion of the faith and Christian morality among the people."

"The most solid foundations," of civil life, he said at another point, are "obedience, order, justice, equality and charity." This is different from the fascist "believe! obey! fight!"

It is worth noting that the Pontiff again took the occasion indirectly to reaffirm the universality of Christianity, in which all peoples are brothers and there is no racism. He quoted St. Paul that there is "neither Greek, nor Jew, nor Barbarian nor Scythian," but all are children of God.

Taft Calls Bases Deal Argument Against Draft

Navy Must Be Strong Enough Without Big Army, He Asserts

By Hedley Donovan

Post Staff Writer

House isolationists yesterday renewed charges that President Roosevelt's destroyer-defense base trade with Great Britain constitutes "an act of war," while Administration supporters defended the agreement as a diplomatic master stroke.

Sharp debate on the transaction is expected to develop today in the Senate, which adjourned early yesterday out of respect for the late Senator Lundeen. In both houses of Congress the alignment of opinion on the President's negotiations breaks across party lines.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, told reporters the President's action furnishes "a strong argument against conscription."

The chief argument advanced for the draft bill, he stated, was that the Navy is not strong enough to defend the United States without the backing of a big Army.

"Now it appears that the Navy is strong enough to give away 50 destroyers in exchange for bases we could seize tomorrow, if England were to fall," he said. Taft indicated he might speak on the transfer after full study of Attorney General Jackson's opinion upholding the legality of the President's action.

From Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, ranking minority leader, came vigorous indorsement of the exchange.

"The whole country will breathe a sigh of relief that we now have outposts where we can have submarines, aircraft and naval vessels available to protect the Panama Canal and our Atlantic coast," he said.

Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, veteran isolationist spokesman, told reporters he had nothing to say at present, adding with a smile, "I don't want to go into a concentration camp."

Representative Smith (Republican), of Ohio, touched off the brief but spirited House debate by charging that the President's deal is "clearly an act of war."

"If the people knew what was going on behind the scenes in Washington," said Representative Sweeney (Democrat), of Ohio, "they would start a revolution, not to overthrow but to preserve democracy."

Representative Luther Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, answered criticism of President Roosevelt's failure to submit the proposal to Congress with a statement that "you cannot take the people into your confidence when you are making a trade."

"Good Job," Says Creel

Whoever concluded the negotiations with Britain, according to Representative Creel (Democrat), of Kentucky, "did a blamed good job."

Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, in the course of debate on the conscription bill, said the exchange of destroyers for defense bases "was not made for the defense of our shores but to further the movement in the direction of war." He accused the Administration of fostering "an hysteria of imminent invasion."

A frequent Administration critic, Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, said he was glad to see the Government acquire the new naval and air bases.

Divergence of viewpoint within Republican ranks was underlined in a statement made last night by Samuel F. Pryor, jr., G. O. P. committeeman from Connecticut and Eastern campaign manager for Wendell Willkie.

The President's move was "the act of a dictator," Pryor said in an interview in New York. Emphasizing that he was giving only his personal views, he said:

"The great issue involved is that it is the first step toward taking us into the war without consulting the representatives of the people."

Willkie said Tuesday the country "undoubtedly" will approve the agreement with Britain, but he expressed regret that the President had not sought the approval of Congress.

been elected to Congress on the Almazan ticket declared to the nation:

"We shall utilize all the means which the law and the people grant us to save the country in this decisive hour."

They accused retiring President Lazaro Cardenas—who supported Almazan's opponent, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho—as "The person principally responsible for the crisis;" charged the government and the government party with assassination and imprisonment of Almazan followers during the campaign; alleged there had been more than 12,000 political assassinations during Cardenas' tenure; said they were prepared "for whatever sacrifice is necessary to crown the democratic victory which legally is ours."

They attacked the Cardenas government's expropriation of American and other foreign oil companies as part of a shadowy Stalinist maneuver to create difficulties for the democracies on this continent;" said the people were ready to help the Almzanistas "rectify the policy of blind subordination to Soviet totalitarianism and criminal destruction of the naiton."

Political quarters said that in a secret session Almazan's people had proclaimed him President-elect of Mexico.

Avila Camacho's office commented: "There is no crisis. The Almazanistas have finally revealed themselves as the paid servants of the oil companies against the interests of the Mexican people. The manifesto is a call to rebellion until Doomsday without receiving an answer.

Last Tribute Paid Lundeen At State Rites

St. Paul, Sept. 4 (AP).—Praised as a champion of the poor who "stood up again and again and protested against the evils of our day," Senator Ernest Lundeen was honored today in funeral ceremonies at the State Capitol. Senator Lundeen and 24 others were killed Saturday in the crash of an airliner in Virginia.

All morning long a procession of mourners passed the flag-draped casket in the rotunda of the capitol, while troops stood guard. Then at 3 p. m. the funeral services were held, the first time a funeral had been conducted in the capitol. Dr. George Mecklenburg, pastor of Wesley Methodist Church, delivered the sermon.

"Senator Lundeen will always be remembered as a man who believed tremendously and worked sincerely for what he believed," Dr. Mecklenburg said. "He was always the champion of the poor and he was implacably against war because he said the poor pay the price of war."

The speaker referred to Senator Lundeen's stand in the House of Representatives in April, 1917, against United States entry into the first World War. Burial was in Fort Snelling National Cemetery.

Highlights of Hitler's Speech

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 4.—Adolf Hitler made these specific references to Britain today in his Sportspalast speech:

England owes it to its geography and the extraordinary speed with which it withdrew from battle that it has not yet met the same fate (as France).

For it is not true, as a number of British politicians state, that the British army is a wild horse tugging at the reins in eagerness to get at its German enemy. They were so close to us they easily could have satisfied such eagerness (in Flanders). They withdrew of their own accord and pretended withdrawal was a great victory.

The great territory which the German army controls has been extended by the Italian Allies which have taken the initiative in East Africa, strengthening their positions and throwing England back.

Naturally, these operations also are regarded by the English as a "success." But they are such a success as a normal, sensible man can't understand. We see repeatedly that English propaganda proceeds from the high point to the low but nevertheless in a few days it is again at the higher point.

For example, I read, "Now the dice of the war are cast. If the Germans don't suceed in reaching Paris—and they won't succeed—they have lost the war. Should they, nevertheless, reach Paris, then England will win the war."

Thus England won numerous so-called "victories." The most glorious victory—in our eyes, however, the most disgraceful failure—was the flight from Dunkerque . . .

They (the English) were thrown into the sea and this was, as they said, a great "victory." Then came the superb conflict in the west. In this campaign especially Allied combinations had nothing except defeats to show.

Now France is shattered and what is their explanation? They say, "Now England can finally concentrate its entire strength. Now England has reached the strategic position which it continually has wished for. The French ballast cost us only British blood."

They said the war will last three years. . . . But at that time I said to Reich's Marshal Goering: Prepare everything for five years. We did not act that way because I believe the war will last five years. But whatever may happen, England will break down.

I know no other fixed term than this alone. If they are very inquisitive in England and ask: "Why doesn't he come?" Calm yourself. We will come. One must always be so inquisitive. This world will become free.

Once for all the nuisance must be removed that it is possible for one nation to block an entire continent just as it pleases.

In the future it must be made impossible that a pirate state is allowed, from time to time as it desires, simply to deliver up more than 450,000,000 persons more or less to poverty and distress. I find it unbearable that a nation of 85,000,000 can be penalized for its life at any time by another people whenever it suits that plutocratic gang. (Here Hitler declared he repeatedly had offered the hand of understanding to Britain.)

You know yourself that was my foreign policy . . . I prefer now to fight until a final, clear decision is reached. And this clear decision can only be that the regime of miserable, mean, war agitators is removed and that a situation again is established in which it is impossible that a single nation in the future is able to tyrannize all of Europe.

Germany and Italy will see to it that such a situation does not repeat itself in history. And in this instance all of England's Allies won't help, no matter what they are planning. We are ready for everything. We are determined and willing to undertake everything, and always to act. Above all, we are frightened by nothing.

We National Socialists have gone through the hardest school imaginable. We can't be intimidated by anything, we can't be surprised by anything. When England entered the war a year ago the English said we have one ally: He is called General Revolution. They had no idea at all of the National Socialist German people's state.

This General Revolution didn't allow himself to be discovered. They said they had another ally, General Hunger.

From the beginning we reckoned that the great "friends of humanity," as in the World War, would seek to starve women and children and we prepared ourselves accordingly. Also this general was only mistaken speculation.

Now they have come to the trail of the third general. This is General Winter. The English should not forget, if they accept such generals, to promote perhaps their most important general to imperial field marshal general, namely, General Bluff.

That is their only solid ally. With these generals, however, they won't defeat us any more. Perhaps they can dumfound the British people in that way, but the German people have really learned to know England. With these means the gentlemen won't win the war and, thank the Lord, other means lie in our hands and will remain there.

And when the hour has struck then we will put General Deed in place of Generals Hunger or Revolution or Winter or Bluff—that is—action. And then we will see who proves to be most worthy.

It is wonderful to see our people in war . . . just now when Mr. Churchill is demonstrating his discovery of air attacks at night.

He isn't doing it because these air attacks are especially effective but because his air force cannot fly over German territory in the daytime while German fliers are over English soil day after day.

"Came in the Night"

The English come in the night and drop their bombs here and there on civilian residential sectors, on farmhouses and villages. For three months I have not ordered that to be answered in the belief they would stop this nuisance.

Mr. Churchill saw therein a sign of our weakness. You will understand that now night after night we will give answer. We will give these night pirates a dose of their own medicine. Our answer will be given in increasing measure.

If they declare they will attack our cities we will wipe out their cities.

The time will come when one of us breaks and it will not be National Socialist Germany. Once already in my life I have conducted this sort of fight to its ultimate consequence and we smashed that opponent.

Hitler Threatens to 'Erase' Britain's Cities

flict he "told Goering to prepare for five years."

"The hour will come when one of us will crack up," he shouted, shaking his finger in England's direction, "and it won't be National Socialist Germany."

He recalled, he said, that he had always desired to come to an amicable arrangement with Britain. But now, he said, biting off the words sharply, "I prefer to fight until a clear decision is reached."

"We are tired," Hitler said, "of having England tell a nation of 85,000,000 whether it may do this or that, whether or not it may drink coffee. Personally I am not interested for I don't drink coffee, but it makes me angry that others can't drink it when they want it. We are ready for everything no matter what Britain may be planning. Nobody can scare us."

Hitler gave a discursive analysis of how from his viewpoint British hopes were dashed to the ground from the beginning of the war. Then he recalled that Britain had said the Norwegian campaign of the Nazis was "a grave German mistake," and ended up with the campaign in the West, culminating in France's collapse.

"Their Hailie Selassies, King Haakons and Queen Wilhelminas couldn't help them," he said mockingly. "Against the British Generals Revolution, Hunger, Winter and Bluff, we pose our General Deed and General Volksgemeinschaft (community spirit) of our people."

Hitler asserted that the British performance on the continent was "one series of defeats."

The fight over central Germany was described by informed sources as the first big engagement of the war over Germany.

Four or five British bombers were reported shot down by antiaircraft fire and German fighters at Berlin, and authorized sources said "lively activity of German and English planes was observable in the Magdeburg region," about 70 miles from Berlin.

A British raider was reported brought down by the cable of a barrage balloon. The use of such balloons—the report was not verified—and the use of German fighting planes would be departures in German air defense.

London Repels Biggest Night Raid

against London in a night raid.

[The United Press and International News Service both described the night attack as "the most intensive of the war," both in London and in a southeast coast town, where the United Press said many homes were demolished.

[In London, a large fire was reported raging in a dock area, and the United Press said more than 100 bombs rained down upon one section of the city. International News Service said those Nazi bombers which failed to penetrate the wall of antiaircraft shells turned back, aiming their bombs at airfields in the Thames-side area.]

Half a hundred searchlights threw up their beams, indicating that the attack was moving in from several directions simultaneously.

British Claim 54 Planes

Distant explosions could be heard.

The "archies" (antiaircraft guns) were throwing shells at the rate of one every two seconds.

The alarm—third of the day—came shortly after 9 p. m. (3 p. m. E. S. T.).

The Nazis came in from high—apparently above 25,000 feet—and now and again sharp bursts of machine-gun fire from British planes could be heard from aloft.

More than half an hour after the assault was begun, antiaircraft fire still was gathering fury, first in one direction and then in another, and it seemed clear that the Nazis were coming over in waves.

The official British score card for daylight aerial engagements, which themselves were very heavy, meanwhile was upped to 54 German planes shot down; 11 British planes lost, with 5 pilots safe.

[The German wireless said 45 British planes were shot down, with 15 Nazi planes lost.]

The biggest Nazi formation of 200 planes crossed the Kent coast about noon. Several sections were admitted to have broken through to drop explosives on inland industrial sites. "Some damage and a number of fatal casualties" were caused, in the official phrase.

Other raiders bombed a Medway River town and southeastern areas, smashing homes and burying some in the wreckage.

Two-Day Alarms in London

Earlier waves struck at British airports in Kent and Essex, following up the predawn attacks throughout England from Scotland to Wales, but those formations were broken up and chased back to France.

Still another wedge attempted to ascend the Thames Valley toward London, but close-bursting antiaircraft shells scattered that sortie, too.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE U. S. CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Gentlemen: The undersigned views with alarm the announcement of a United States-Canada recent treaty, the withdrawal of British troops from Shanghai and the recall of the Japanese Ambassador from Washington. Is there a possible connection between these incidents?

Have you been informed of the existence of a secret treaty between the Japanese and English empires in which the latter agrees to remain neutral under any and all conditions?

Do you propose drafting the American boys to send to Canada, South America or Shanghai? How will this strengthen our admittedly defenseless position? Do you realize that Canada could not return our assistance, should we need it, as her draft laws do not allow her draftees to leave the country?

Or again is the proposed draft of our men for the protection of private interests in China? Is our Navy's Eastern cruise also connected with these events?

Are these not possible steps to a war self-created by repeated politically self-manufactured crises?

Anxiously awaiting a reply from my New York Congressmen, I remain

Respectfully yours,
MRS. J. SERGEANT CRAM

Is It 'Etiquette' for New Brother-in-Law to Kiss Wife's Young Sister Warmly in Saying 'Good-by?'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This problem probably will startle you, but I am hoping you will give it serious consideration, as it really troubles me. My sister has recently married. Her husband is of a very affectionate disposition and naturally some of his affection is directed at me.

To be explicit, at parting, he kisses me squarely on the mouth, and puts his arms about me. I would much prefer to be more casual, and I know that my sister notices the situation and is sensitive about it. But I don't know how to handle the problem without seeming prudish, or hurting my brother-in-law's feelings.

Would this be a question of etiquette? Or do demonstrations of affection differ in different families? Is this a customary attitude of a brother-in-law to his wife's younger sister? I will thank you kindly for some good advice. Sincerely. CONSTANCE R.

Managing the Situation Without Giving Offense

DEAR CONSTANCE R.: Demonstrations of affection between blood kin or its "in-law" equivalent do differ in different families, as you surmise; but the spirit of the exchange usually is keyed to merry fondness, as versus the implication of passion—which implication you seem to be reading into your brother-in-law's squarely planted kisses.

The fact that you are disturbed by his full embrace, and that your sister likewise is "sensitive" to the spectacle, affords some reason for thinking that there is, perhaps, something thoughtlessly more lover-like than brotherly about his behavior. But what it probably means is that his bridegroom's intensity of feeling for your sister (his wife) unconsciously carries over into his forthright goodbye kiss to you.

And I imagine your sister's "sensitivity" is more an expression of her awareness that you are reacting with unwarranted breathlessness to the exchange, than it is a manifestation of jealousy. If she seems uneasy, it probably is because she is thinking somewhat along this line: "Oh, I wish John wouldn't do that. I'm afraid he's putting ideas in the poor kid's head. But he's such a warm-hearted person, so affectionate toward everybody, just like a puppy, that it would be like a slap in his face if I tried to tell him what I mean. Etc, etc."

However, since some tension exists, in both your own and your sister's attitude, it becomes your responsibility (in my opinion) to circumvent such embraces in the future. It can easily be done, simply by standing your ground on a hearty handshake, when the time comes for leavetaking. If he tries to draw you to him, you might turn your face aside and say, "Hey, cut it out. I don't like to be kissed; at least not by brothers." Or, "We Blanks are formal people, or hasn't Susan told you? A litle affection goes a long way with us. We only kiss at weddings and funerals, eh Susan?"

The difference between prudishness and disarming tactfulness, when managing a situation of this sort, is altogether a matter of one's mental attitude toward the party of the second part. If your mental attitude toward your brother-in-law is genuinely wholesome and friendly, you can set him right in this matter simply by acting on impulse; by doing and saying whatever pops into your head at the moment—and without hurting his feelings in the least. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

'Ideal' Salesgirl Relies on Comfortable Shoes As Her First Aid: Gives Rules for Foot Care

Judy Rupprecht, "ideal salesgirl," is shown above with the chic yet comfortable "insulated" shoes she wears.

The Post Fashion Editor.

Washington has approximately 8,000 salesgirls who will be serving the public this fall. Of that number about one-half will be knitting brows, puckering lips and looking generally uncomfortable over their foot problems.

Most salesgirls' foot woes come from corns and swollen ankles. To remedy this situation, a nationally known shoe designer has worked out a system of insulated footwear which permits the feet the "breathe." These shoes have a porous innersole designed to keep out extreme cold and heat.

This footwear was tested on 500 sales girls with the result that their foot troubles lessened in a few weeks. One of them, Judy Rupprecht, of New York, was recently elected as the most typically alert and engaging sales person. Judy attributes her cheerful disposition largely to the care of her feet. She wears insulated shoes, which she says give her complete foot comfort. Here are her other suggestions to girls who must spend much time on their feet.

Wash your feet nightly with warm water and scrub briskly with a stiff bursh and lots of soap.

Keep toenails short and square.

Do a foot exercise nightly, such as picking up marbles with your feet. This strengthens foot-muscle resistance against the miles the average salesgirl walks each day.

If you use polish, change it regularly.

Judy keeps her toenails free of polish but keeps them in perfectly groomed condition. But she does have one pet foot luxury, a holdover from childhood days—after her nightly foot bath, she smothers her feet in soothing baby powder.

1,000-Calorie Diets Found Satisfying

By Ida Jean Kain

The 1,000-calorie diet is fast becoming the most popular means of reducing. It's safe, satisfying and speedy.

On such a limited number of calories there is little margin for extras and the menus are composed mainly of the protective foods. You need these daily: a liberal serving of lean meat, one or two eggs, two glasses of skim milk or buttermilk or one glass of milk and a serving of cheese, two cooked vegetables, two raw vegetables, two fresh fruits, two slices of whole-wheat bread and three pats of butter, each one-fourth inch thick.

That is a good diet. It may be nutritionally more adequate than the one to which you are accustomed. Many a person is surprised to find that she feels better on the reducing menus than on her usual fare. To assure an abundance of the vital vitamns, however, the 1,000-calorie diet can be supplemented with a Vitamin A, B, C capsule daily.

Intake Restrict

Avoid any diet which does not include all of the protective foods. The body has an effective reserve of the essential elements. They must be made available in the daily diet so that no demand is made on the vital tissues.

As long as you have excess fat you have a reserve of calories. You can lose weight simply by limiting the calorie intake below the number burned in energy. The calorie deficit created by restricting the calorie intake is made up by drawing on the fat stores.

Once the importance of the food elements to health is understood, the emphasis in diet shifts from what you do not eat to what you eat! Think of "diet" in terms of your actual needs rather than a form of deprivation.

Supplementary Concentrates

Balanced reducing diets have been devised on less than 1,000 calories a day, but they are not recommended for unsupervised reducing.

If the 1,900-calorie menu is to be followed for any considerable length of time, it is best to use supplementary concentrates for Vitamins A, B and C. Vitamin A is particularly needed because of the very limited amount of butter and cream in the menus. Since research reveals that an abundance of A increases the feeling of well-being, the reducer will benefit from additional amounts. Vitamin B is also limited—the chief sources are whole grains and bread, and even on the average diet it is apt to be low. The reducer cannot take fresh fruits in uplimited amounts, therefore the need of Vitamin C in the concentrate.

Notes From a New England Tour

MOTORISTS going North from western Massachusetts frequently use a back road which takes them via Searsburg, Vt. The road to Searsburg is not well marked, and one crossroads is particularly baffling. Apparently confused tourists have beaten a path to the nearest farm house, for now when you drive up to ask the farmer if you're on the right road, you see a neatly painted sign on the lawn: "Yes! Searsburg straight ahead."

SIGNS ALONG THE WAY—

"Visit the Maine Hermit" . . . "Lake Shaftsbury—Drive In" . . . "Chateau Calvin Coolidge" . . . "Bar-Nothing Ranch."

A tourist driving through Pittsfield, Mass., wished to mail a letter. The first mailbox she noticed was supporting a street-corner lounger, so rather than make him move she handed him the letter and asked if he'd mind mailing it. Something a little vague in the lounger's expression, however, prompted her to make sure of the epistle's fate instead of driving on immediately. As she watched, he hoisted himself up with some difficulty, ambled a block down the street, entered the municipal postoffice with the letter, then ambled back to the mailbox on which he had been leaning.

It was end of summer at the barn theater north of Crawford Notch, N. H. A cold wind swept through the cracks as the troupe met for the last dress rehearsal of the season. Snow had fallen the night before on nearby Mount Washington. Actors and stage crew alike had succumbed to the grippe. Traces of last week's stage set still were visible on the flats, for the dregs remaining in the paint cans had been diluted once too often. Spirits were already low when the two property boys burst in to announce that the truck's fan belt had broken so they couldn't borrow the furniture from the summer hotel after all. A moment of appalled silence followed, then the players continued to limp adenoidally through the lines of "Three-Cornered Moon." Suddenly the director rose from his seat, flung his shawl to the floor and croaked, "A little pep and enthusiasm! This is a comedy! . . . Ka-tschoo!"

Two elderly ladies in a restaurant in Kennebunkport, Me., consulted the menu and then asked the waitress, "What's the difference between fish chowder and clam chowder?"

Bell Collecting Hobby

An amusing hobby indeed is the collecting of bells which in lore and legend more than live up to Poe's romantization of them. There are wooden bells from Java, camel bells from the Gobi and Sahara deserts; there are sleigh bells and elephant bells, school bells and temple bells, cow bells and dinner bells, wonderously musical Korean bells and the curious bells of street peddlers.

The New Dish

She—Don't you want any more beef, darling?

He—I don't believe so.

She—Is—is anything the matter with it?

He—Oh no, no. It's just—well I guess I'm just getting a little tired of roast beef.

She—Well this is the first time we've had it this week and anyway I asked you this morning what you wanted me to get and you wouldn't say a thing——

He—Oh well, that's all right.

She—And then the man said he had such a nice rib roast and I knew you always——

He—Oh, that's all right. It's just that I like a change now and then.

She—I'm sorry. . . Well anyway I have a wonderful surprise for you for dessert.

He (suspiciously)—What?

She—Just wait and see. . . . Now then, what do you think of that?

He—Say, what is that stuff?

She—That's a Peach Macaroon Charlotte!

He—A what?

She—Oh well, just taste it and see.

He—Wait a minute. What's inside of it?

She—Oh, peaches . . . and macaroons . . . and a lot of things. Daisy Lightcap says Sam's crazy about it. Go ahead and try it.

He—In a minute—say what's that thing sticking out there?

She—That's a lady finger——

He—Say, what do you think I am!

She—Oh now don't be silly. Lots of men eat lady fingers . . . Well how do you like it?

He—It's all right.

She—Do you really think so?

He—Yes, it's very good.

She—Have you gotten any of the peaches yet?

He—Well—yes, I guess so. . . .

She—I don't believe you like it.

He—Oh yes I do. It's perfectly all right.

She—Well being as Sam Lightcap was so crazy about it I thought maybe you'd like it——

He—I do. I do. It's very good.

She—You don't say that as if you meant it.

He—Well I do. Say do I have to eat these what-you-may-call 'em too?

She—The lady fingers? Of course. Don't you like them?

He—Oh yes, yes.

She—Say I want to know what's the matter with that dessert?

He—Why nothing. It's very—very palatable.

She—Well I can't see why you don't like it when you're so fond of peaches——

He—Wait now you're working yourself up over nothing. I didn't say anything against this dessert.

She—Well you don't like it as well as some other desserts you've had.

He—Oh I don't know. It's very good.

She—I want to know what's the matter with it.

He—Well it's very good only—well if you want the truth I think maybe a little more—er seasoning would have helped it. It's—well a little flat.

She—There I knew it! You don't like it! And after I spent the whole afternoon beating the egg whites, and crushing the macaroons——

He—Wait a minute now! Don't get excited. It's very good.

She—No, I know you're making a martyr of yourself eating it. Why didn't you say at the beginning you didn't like it?

He—But I do like it——

She—And then after Daisy said Sam Lightcap was so crazy about it, and when you're always saying you want a change and I thought I had such a nice surprise——

He—Say now wait a minute! It's a very fine dessert, and I like it. It's only—well it's only—that I just don't see any use of your going to all that work.

She—What do you mean?

He—Well, the peaches would have been just as good sliced. You see after all you can't improve on the everyday things—and—well I'm not much for change.

'Woody' Van Dykes Honored By Mrs. Willebrandt at Party

Hollywood Couple to Entertain in Kind Following Gay Party at Mayflower Given by Mabel Walker Willebrandt

By Hope Ridings Miller.

HE MAY BE Col. W. S. "Woody" Van Dyke by the time he gets back to Hollywood, but the title is still "Major" now—"And you never know just how those promotions will turn out," he told me yesterday at the party given by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt at the Mayflower Hotel.

MRS. VAN DYKE

I wasn't there early. In fact, I walked in the door about 30 minutes after the opening hour; but few other guests had arrived then, and I made the most of a chance to talk to the noted filmland director and his attractive wife, in whose honor the fete was given.

Maj. Van Dyke, whose name and fame have swept across the country and back again, has made headlines in the hollywoods time and again. But what he's proud of primarily is not his achievement in the cinema world, but rather his role as a Marine Reserve officer, who has been on recruiting duty in Culver City. And it is in that connection that he is scheduled to be made a colonel.

Mrs. Van Dyke, incidentally, looks as if she could be put into a starring film role at the drop of a hat. She's small and streamlined and she had chosen a snatch of a bonnet that I remember chiefly for the cluster of valley lilies on the front, its froth of green veiling and the way it was pulled smartly forward over her blond hair. Her dress was a black velveteen model, set off with a trim white blouse and one of those tricky lapel ornaments that accent a dark suit to perfection.

MRS. WILLEBRANDT, always a stunning figure and one of the town's most gracious hostesses, appeared in a snappy black floor length dress, trimmed with a white open-work collar. She said the party was one of those spur-of-the-moment affairs, arranged hurriedly because of the brief Washington stay of the Van Dykes. Incidentally, she had set the time from 5 to 9 o'clock and had ordered up a lavish buffet so that as many friends as possible could find it convenient to drop in for a drink and stay for supper.

The Pan American room, still in its summer attire, was the scene of the party which was attended by several hundred guests. Although this is Mrs. Van Dyke's first visit to Washington, Maj. Van Dyke has been here many times before and has scores of Washington acquaintances.

Mrs. Willebrandt, an old friend of both Maj. Van Dyke and his mother, Mrs. Laura Winston Van Dyke, of stage fame, was not here when the director and his wife hit town a few days ago, en route to New York; so yesterday was the first time she has had a chance to entertain them. Tonight they will turn table and give a party themselves. It will be at the Shoreham Hotel, where they will be registered until tomorrow. Then they will be heading back to Hollywood—but not by air. Maj. Van Dyke is one of those persons who would like to be "grounded" from now on out. In that respect he is quite a contrast to yesterday's hostess, who commutes regularly by plane between her Washington office and her office in California.

SPEAKING OF AIR TRAVEL, reminds me that Ruth Nichols, the well known flier, was among the guests. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, jr., who was assistant hostess, recently returned by plane from California, where she spent most of the summer. She will be starting back to Madeira soon.

Representative and Mrs. Leland Ford, who hail from California, were extolling the charms of the Sunshine State to a circle of guests. Later I saw Representative Ford deep in talk with William S. Culbertson, who has been making some swell speeches this summer on "The American Way of Life." He and his family are staying on at their summer place in Franklin County, Pa., for a few more weeks. Mrs. Culbertson yesterday was elected president of the Garden Club in that district. She and her husband have been entertaining quite a string of summer guests. Among those recently visiting them for a week-end were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun.

But back to yesterday's party. Who else did I see there? Oh, yes, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., the latter wearing a lovely gray chiffon frock with a broad-brimmed purple hat. In passing, I heard her say that a letter from a friend in California advised her that any number of people there thought the recent V. F. W.—"Veterans of Foreign Wars"—convention meant Vote For Willkie.

Col. Charles March breezed in early and seemed to know everybody present. Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom were there; also, Ugo Carusi, keeping friends entertained with his inimitable imitations; Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck; Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Sidney Taliaferro, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Bloedorn, Tom Morgan, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr.; those pretty Essary girls, Peggy and Elene and their mother, Mrs. T. Fred Essary, and scores of others.

It was a grand party, ask anybody who happened to be there.

Miss Carrico Becomes Bride

White lilies, gladioli and palms formed the setting for the wedding yesterday afternoon at 5 of Miss Bernice Carrico, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howell A. Carrico, to Elmer Warner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Warner. The ceremony took place in historic Christ Church, in Alexandria, the Rev. Edward Gabler officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore antique ivory moire taffeta, made with a basque waist, a collar of Alencon lace, a row of self-covered buttons ending just below the waist, and leg o' mutton sleeves. Her full skirt terminated in a long circular train and her veil of bridal illusion fell from a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a pearl-covered prayer book with a single white orchid and a shower of lillies of the valley.

Her cousin, Miss Catherine Curtin, was maid of honor, dressed in soft blue faille taffeta made with a hoop skirt. Her heart-shaped hat of blue tulle had a cockcade of ostrich tips and blue velvet streamers, and she carried Johanna Hill roses and pink buttonhole mums.

The bridesmaids were Miss Catherine Hartman, another cousin; Miss Ann Hollingsworth, Miss Dee Gwynn and Miss Mildred Wheatley. Their antique rose faille taffeta frocks were made like that of the maid of honor, and they wore rose hats and carried Johanna Hill roses and blue delphinium.

Shirley Tartaglino, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Tartaglino, and Sally Ann Grady, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Grady, of Richmond, were flower girls. Charles Hollingsworth, son of Dr. and Mrs. Russel Hollingsworth, served as ring bearer.

William Lee, brother-in-law of Mr. Warner, was best man, and the ushers were Andrew Carrico 3d, a cousin of the bride, Daniel Lanahan, Joseph Hardesty and Daniel Gatton.

A reception for relatives and close friends followed the ceremony.

After the reception, the couple left for a Northern wedding trip, the bride wearing a soldier-blue redingote of velveteen with a light blue wool dress and accessories of dubonnet. Her costume was topped off with an orchid. They will live at 2417 Naylor road.

Mrs. Warner is a member of the Dancing Masters Guild of America and Thet Pi Sorority. The bridegroom attended Benjamin Franklin University and is a member of Phi Sigma Chi fraternity.

The bride's dress was of white satin fashioned with a tight bodice, a high collar, and a full length train. Orange blossoms caught in a Juliet cap made her hat, and a prayer book from which a shower of lilies of the valley fell completed her ensemble.

Miss Dorothy Voigt, the maid of honor, wore a gown of Alice Blue faille which she topped with a Juliet cap of the same material.

The bride was given away by her father. Wells R. Bill, of New York, served as best man, and the brothers of the bride and bridegroom, Carl Gerold Luebben and Allen Palmer, were the ushers.

Miss Dawson Wed To Jos. L. Dean

St. Martin's Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday at 10 a. m. of Miss Ellen Una Dawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thomas Dawson, of 2707 North Capitol street, to Joseph Levelle Dean, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dean, also of this city. The Rev. Lewis Miltenberger officiated.

He was graduated from the Universidad de Henores y Ingenieros de Madrid. On his mother's side he is descended from the Sanz y Lujan family, one of the oldest in Spain, and on his father's from the Boissons of Bordeaux.

Heineman, of Westwood Hills, Calif., was married in a candlelight ceremony to Bradford Swope, son of Dr. and Mrs. Chester D. Swope, of Washington.

The bride's dress was of white crepe made with a V-neck and a long train. Holding up her fingertip veil, which had been worn by her sister, Mrs. Norman Kamp McPhail, at her wedding, was a Flemish cap of rare old lace, a family tradition. She carried a prayerbook garlanded with white orchids and stephanotis.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Frederick Nye Pauly, another sister of the bride, wore a gown of Spanish rose silk faille which featured the new torso lines and a full skirt.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. Norman Kemp McPhail, Miss Grace Alworth and Miss Oakalla Bellis, were dressed in light blue faille dresses like that of the matron of honor.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, while the bridegroom's father acted as best man. The ushers were Frederick Nye Pauly, Norman Kemp McPhail, Paul Edward Pauly and John Wheeler.

The bride is a graduate of the University of California at Los Angeles, where she was affiliated with Kappa Alpha Theta. Her husband is a graduate of George Washington University, where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and the National University Law School.

New Envoy Of Netherlands Due Today

Baron van Boetzelaer Assigned Here as Minister-Counselor

Expected to come to Washington today or tomorrow is the new Minister-Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, Baron Willem van Boetzelaer van Oosterhout, who arrived in New York on the Dixie Clipper Tuesday.

Meeting him at the airport was his wife, the former Ethel Litchfield, of New Canaan, Conn., and their two daughters, Margaret, 16, and Susan, 12. The four went directly to New Canaan for a brief stay.

Shortly after the Minister-Counselor arrives, the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon will leave for Nonquit, Mass., where they will spend a month.

Has Served In Washington

Being assigned to duty in Washington is not a new experience for Baron van Boetzelaer. He served as second secretary here several years ago and was also assigned to the post of Netherlands Charge de'Affaires in Mexico City for a period of six months. His diplomatic career began, however, in Copenhagen, where he was attache. From there he went to Bucharest and was then sent to Washington. Leaving here after three years, he served as first secretary and then as counselor in Brussels for five years, and after that he was assigned to duty as counselor in Berlin.

In the summer of 1939, Baron van Boetzelaer and his family visited this country. He returned to his post in Berlin and Baroness van Boetzelaer joined him there for a short time, and then came on back to Amrica in mid-April. He arrived here soon afterward—in fact, he landed in New York on the very day that Holland was invaded.

Was Named Envoy to Turkey

Shortly before that time he had been named Netherlands Minister to Turkey and he was here for a brief vacation before going to his new post. After two weeks, however, he was summoned back to the Netherlands ministry of foreign affairs and was made head of the political affairs division, which like other departments of the government had by that time been established in London.

Baron van Boetzelaer is in his middle forties. He is tall and slender, is fond of music and plays the violin—friends say "superbly"—and is also fond of golf.

Coman-Holmes Rites Set

Mrs. George Robert Holmes has issued invitations to the marriage of her daughter, Mary Catherine, to Dr. Dana Coman on Tuesday, September 24, at St. John's Church.

The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock and will be followed by a reception at the Carlton Hotel. The bride will be given in marriage by her uncle, Stephen Early, Secretary to the President.

Mrs. Holmes and her daughter, who have spent the past month in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., returned to Washington on Sunday and left the following day for New York. They will be back in town today.

About the Town

—with Dudley Harmon

MRS. WILLIAM J. DONOVAN is at her Virginia home again after an adventurous trip on a schooner through the South Seas, but is not planning to write anything about it! This is news, in these days when even grandmothers have taken to shipping before the mast so they can make a book of their experiences.

DUDLEY HARMON

Mrs. Donovan's jaunt, which was "just for pleasure," lasted five months. She visited Tahiti, the Galapagos Islands, remote Pitcairn, Samoa, the Easter Islands and other exotic places. Mrs. Donovan will be at her place near Berryville for an indefinite time and isn't yet sure whether she'll occupy her Washington house this winter. Col. Donovan, who recently made a special survey of the British military situation for Col. Knox, is accompanying the Navy Secretary on his flight to inspect Hawaiin defenses.

WHEN THE RETIRING French Ambassador sets up housekeeping in Brazil, his new post, one of the first things he unpacks will be a handsome silver inkstand and tray from Cartier's. The farewell gift of his staff, it was presented at a dinner he gave for them on Monday.

The Ambassador is now recovered from an illness which kept him in bed several weeks this summer. Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, social secretary at the embassy, cut short her vacation at Bar Harbor to help him in his arrangements for leaving. She has reopened her home here after a summer at the Maine resort.

PEOPLE AT post-Labor Day parties these days are divided into two groups. There are the pale, drawn looking guests who have been in town all summer, and the dazzling tanned ones who seem annoyingly healthy after extensive vacations in the North.

In the bronzed category at Sarah Smith's cocktail party the other afternoon were Mrs. Meade Fletcher, Polly Ehrlich and Harry Sellery. The Fletchers had a harrowing motor trip back from Cape May on Tuesday after the whole New Jersey shore was inundated by the hurricane. Miss Ehrlich has been at her family's summer home in Beverly, Mass., and Mr. Sellery got his suntan on the beach at Edgartown.

Sarah Smith was celebrating the announcement of her engagement to Dr. Cranshaw Briggs. The party was held in the garden of Cecil Jones' home in Georgetown, which the bride-to-be is occupying this summer. Guests sat around on the terrace and admired the poplar trees towering over a high brick wall. Jacques Reinstein was celebrating the birth of a son that morning—his wife is the former Rachel Campbell. Others present included Eleanor Powell, Mannix Walker, John Drier, Elizabeth Langley and James Mann.

WITH MISS SMITH'S engagement, the Washington institution known as "The Nunnery" passes out of existence. This was a group of young ladies who came to town early in the New Deal and kept house together. All of them now are either married or about to be.

ODDS AND ENDS: Mr. and Mrs. William Breese, jr., are back after a vacation at Edgartown. Mrs. Breese, sr., has a little English refugee boy living with her this winter . . . Deb Lucy Marbury will enter Antioch College, where the students divide their courses between work and study. They get jobs at department stores, on newspapers, in hospitals and schools as part of the curriculum.

Debs Are Invited To Tea Dance At Hotel 2400

Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner has issued invitations to a tea dance to be given at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth street on Tuesday afternoon, September 17, from 5 to 7.

The party has been arranged in honor of the debutantes of 1940, a number of poet debs and young girls from South American countries and their escorts. Pete Macias and his Lounge Riviera orchestra will play for dancing. Tea will be served in the Palm Court.

Parties Herald College Term

Miss Marjorie Monroe, who will leave next week to attend Stephens College, in Missouri, was guest of honor at a tea given yesterday afternoon at the Iron Gate Inn by her godmother, Mrs. W. Hamilton Knox.

Guests included a number of other young ladies who will leave soon for college. The party was the second given for Miss Monroe recently. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Elmer Monroe, of Chevy Chase, she was feted at a tea given a few days ago by her mother.

Caseys Will Give 2 Farewell Parties For Keith Officer

Keith Officer, retiring counselor of the Australian Legation, will be guest of honor at two farewell parties to be given by the Minister and Mrs. Casey. They will entertain at cocktails for him a week from tomorrow and at dinner on Thursday, September 19.

Mr. Officer has been assigned to Tokyo and will leave the middle of the month for his new duties. An Australian envoy was named to Japan recently for the first time in the history of the two countries.

Prof. Cecil Bald, who has been on temporary duty at the legation for three months, will leave next week with Mrs. Bald for Australia.

Hemisphere War On 5th Column Seen

Pan-American Union Plans Police Parley to Combat Espionage

The Pan American Union moved yesterday to launch a hemisphere-wide campaign of extermination against "fifth column" elements.

Acting to implement the resolution against subversive activities adopted at the Havana meeting of American foreign ministers in July, the Union set in motion machinery to convoke an inter-American conference of police, counter-espionage and judicial authorities.

A questionnaire was dispatched yesterday to the 21 American republics, requesting a list of measures being taken by each government to combat espionage, sabotage, treason, sedition and other subversive activities.

Acting Director General Pedro de Alba, of the Pan American Union, who dispatched the questionnaires, asked that the information be provided before November 6. The date of the conference will be set at that time.

The purpose of the conference, as outlined by the Havana meeting, will be to assure "the most complete and effective defense" against subversive activities "through the action of the proper authorities in each nation" and "through the coordination of such action with that of other nations."

The Pan American Union, Gen. de Alba announced, is at present codifying preventive and repressive measures adopted throughout the hemisphere as well as all information concerning the entry, rejection and expulsion of foreigners.

Granted Divorce From Vincent Astor

MRS. HELEN H. ASTOR, New York society notable, was granted a divorce yesterday from Vincent Astor, the millionaire yachtsman, on grounds of mental cruelty. The decree was granted 20 minutes after the suit was filed in Cody, Wyo.

Britain Sole Hope of France, Says Refugee Woman Editor

Mme. Tabouis, Formerly of the Newspaper L'Ouvre, Believes French Will Revolt; Thinks Russia, Turkey Will Fight Nazis

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Expressing optimism as to the outcome of the war, Mme. Genevieve Tabouis, noted French journalist, declared yesterday, "the rebirth of my country can only come in the resistance of the British."

Mme. Tabouis predicted that starvation, disease and unemployment would culminate in a revolt in France this winter. All the French who can manage to do so will get to England to join the British, and French colonial forces will be found allying themselves with British troops in increasing number, she asserted.

"If England stands during the winter, as I am confident she will, the whole situation will turn," Mme. Tabouis added. "Russia, Turkey and the Balkans will go against Hitler."

The distinguished writer, former foreign editor of Louvre, is now a refugee from France as a result of her uncompromising anti-Nazi stand. Her arrest was sought by the Germans and she was obliged to flee when the armistice was signed.

"A majority of Frenchmen played no part in the defection of France" said Mme. Tabouis.

Neither Parliament nor the public had opportunity to consider the armistice proposals until a week to three weeks after they were signed, she said. Censorship kept the people of France in ignorance as to what was going on. Had the press been allowed to function freely a different situation would have existed, she asserted. "If Frenchmen had known the future, they never would have accepted the armistice."

MME. GENEVIEVE TABOUIS

Reviewing the causes of France's collapse, she pointed out that the country's major reaction to the victory of 1919 was, "Peace has come forever; let's enjoy life." Moral principles were loose in all classes. France and England have been constantly at odds over the Versailles Treaty; French groups, fearing Communism, were confused by the slogan Hitler adopted in 1935: "Bolshevism, Enemy No. 1." Financiers and the intellectual elite became defenders of the slogan and championed the idea of dictatorship as a refuge from Communism. Sentiment lined up behind the Franco-Nazi cause in the Spanish revolution.

At the time of Munich, France was split by Munich and anti-Munich sentiment, propaganda flooded the country and a Fifth Column emerged.

Since 1934 the French staff had turned a deaf ear, she said, to the insistence of Gen. de Gaulle that the army be motorized. It refused to recognize the possibility of the blitzkrieg.

The final cause of France's downfall she gave as the combination between military chiefs and pacifist Socialist leaders.

Asked whether she thought food should be sent to France from this country, she shrugged her shoulders with a characteristic French gesture and said: "It is too bad to let the babies die. They will be Frenchmen tomorrow. If you can send dry milk for them to unoccupied areas—yes. In other sections, it is hard for me to say. My family is there. But, if individuals starve—they cannot be considered in such a crisis."

Mme. Tabouis was a chic, slightly built person with white hair smartly coiffed. She spoke with frankness and without bitterness. She stated facts as a newspaper woman knows them, and blamed no one.

She is here from New York for a brief stay, but expects to return here later in the fall.

French Envoy Denies Vichy Is Nazi Puppet

De Saint Quentin Says 'Will of People Will Find Expression'

Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, the French Ambassador, last night denied that the Vichy government is German-dominated and declared that "representative institutions, through which the will of the people can be expressed," will soon be resurrected in France.

Maurice Garreau-Dombasle, commercial counselor to the French Embassy who resigned rather than accept recall to France, declared Tuesday that the French government took its orders from Berlin. He said the would "never accept any task under German control."

Count de Saint-Quentin, who also has been recalled, said last night that he had no intention of resigning and would return to France as soon as his successor, Gaston Henri-Haye, arrives in Washington. Henri-Haye is expected to arrive within a week.

Soon after paying his final respects yesterday to President Roosevelt with a visit to the White House, the Ambassador said of Garreau-Dombasle's statement:

"I do not agree. M. Garreau-Dombasle has been a very able public servant, but his statement is not accurate.

"The armistice imposes certain obligations upon the French government which must be fulfilled, but a large margin of freedom is left. While respecting faithfully the obligations of the armistice, the government of the French Republic remains free in its will for national independence."

His office piled high with books and manuscripts prepared for packing, the stocky diplomat said there was no question but that representative government would be restored in France.

"The form of the new institutions has not yet been determined," he said, "but the will of the people will certainly find its expression."

Frank Scully, Humorist-Author, Indicted in Felony

Los Angeles, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Frank Scully, humorist and former secretary of the Department of State Institutions, was indicted by the Los Angeles County grand jury today on two felony counts charging misappropriation of public funds and failure properly to impound public money. Approximately $2,650 was said to be involved.

Scully, one-legged Hollywood figure, has written, such books as "Fun in Bed" and was reported in the East arranging for publication of a new book.

The charges grew out of collection of funds from estates of insane persons who had died while charges of the State of California, and during the time Scully was acting as administrator of such estates.

Scully had replied to these demands for return of the money with a suit asking that the court award him the $2,650 as fees collected while he was acting as guardian for insane indigents.

France to Break With Dutch

Copyright by New York Times

London, Sept. 4.—Diplomatic relations between France and the Netherlands will be broken off tomorrow at the French government's request, Netherlands officials announced in London tonight.

This action is believed to have been taken at the request of German officials, who are said to fear that the presence of Netherlands diplomats at Vichy provides Britain with the means of knowing what is going on inside France.

Madame Chairman

by Suzanne

MISS PEARL CARRUTHERS, of England, a member of the headquarters staff of the World Y. W. C. A., has arrived in the Capital to join Miss Marianna Mills, who came two weeks ago to establish a temporary office here.

Miss Carruthers and Miss Mills worked together at the international headquarters in Geneva and when the war situation made it impossible for them to operate freely in Switzerland, they made preparations to come to America. The Geneva office is being kept open, in charge of two American women, as a point of contact, but the administration of the organization will be carried on from here until the end of the war.

Miss Mills, also an English woman, is in general charge and Miss Carruthers will edit the official publication of the World "Y. W.," called The Monthly.

ELIZABETH POWERS

A room in the administration building of the local Y. W. C. A. is being used as an office until a location for the headquarters is decided on. Miss Marcia Dunham, of the national Y. W. C. A. board, is here from New York to assist and Miss Lina Willis, a fermor Y. W. C. A. secretary in China, now a resident of the District, also has been added to the staff.

The initial work will be to resume correspondence with all of the countries in the international group, for the World Y. W. C. A. surmounts suspicion and prejudice and maintains bonds of friendship despite the war. Much of Miss Mills' work is advisory correspondence. She has moved from Strong Residence, where she stayed on her arrival in Washington, to an apartment in the Pall Mall, 1112 Sixteenth street. Miss Carruthers spent a short holiday with friends in New England before coming to Washington.

HOME FROM CONVENTION—Elizabeth Powers, president of Pi Delta Chapter of Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority at the University of Maryland, has returned from the Southern district convention, held last week in Atlanta, Ga., bringing the achievement trophy for her chapter.

The trophy is awarded annually to the chapter in the Southern District that has led in scholarship, been outstanding on its campus and has given support to the national organization's major philanthropy, the Frontier Nursing Service, in Kentucky.

Miss Powers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Powers, of Hyattsville, Md., is a senior at the University of Maryland this year, majoring in home economics.

Another honor for the chapter was the election of its adviser, Mrs. William B. Henderson, of this city, as superintendent of the Southern district. This division includes Washington and the chapters in Maryland, Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida.

IN NEW ENGLAND — Mme. Felian Garzia, of the Women's City Club, with Mr. Garzia, is on a motor trip through New England. They have been at Cape Cod and are going to Lake Ontario before their return.

Both are members of the Arts Club and, for three winters, have conducted the Saturday evenings at Montmartre Noctambule, with impromptu programs by those who attended. The Garzias' discontinued them early in the spring, when events in their native France were too tragic to permit gayety in the quaint French setting of Montmartre. Whether the meetings of their "red-tapeless club" will be resumed this winter, they have not decided. Friends who have enjoyed the Saturday nights hope they will be.

COMMITTEES NAMED — Mrs. Harlow C. McCord, president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Sigma Kappa, has announced the following committee chairmen for the coming season: Auditing, Mrs. Earl F. Smithson; poetry anthology, Mrs. Robert Van Sickler; Christmas cards, Miss Dorothy Sornborger; executive, Mrs. Donald Saunders; finance, Mrs. Barton W. Richwine; life membership, Mrs. Lewis B. Rhodes; magazine Miss Catherine Lapish; membership, Miss Alma Barker; music, Mrs. Sterling Maddox; nominating, Mrs. J. H. Lapish; Panhellenic, Mrs. C. R. Cooper; philanthropy, Mrs. Wilfred P. Tiencken and Mrs. Paul Russell; publicity, Mrs. Charles E. Krey; rushing, Mrs. John Cunningham; scrapbook, Miss Lee Hardell.

The first social event will be a buffet supper and joint meeting of the junior and senior alumnae groups, to be held on September 18 at the Columbia Country Club.

KAPPA GET-TOGETHER—Kappa Beta Pi's from Washington will be among those attending a luncheon to be held Wednesday, September 11, at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Philadelphia by members of the sorority, who will be there from all parts of the country for the convention of the American Bar Association, opening September 9.

Elizabeth F. Reed, grand dean of the organization, will preside and guests of honor will be Judge George A. Welsh, of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Welsh. Judge Genevieve Cline, of the United States Customs Court in New York City, an honorary member of the sorority, also will attend. She was the first woman appointed to the Federal bench.

Mary Peacock, formerly of this city and now a resident of Philadelphia, will have charge of the luncheon arrangements.

Mrs. Hugo Hesselbach Better, Returns Home

The condition of Mrs. Hugo Hesselbach, who has been seriously ill for some time, is now very much improved and she has returned to her home at 1415 Twentieth street.

She recently came back from Asbury Park, N. J., accompanied by Mrs. Etta Schmid Wells. The latter, after spending the early summer in Chicago, Canton, Ohio, and Beach Haven, N. J., joined Mrs. Hesselbach at the New Jersey resort.

Air Defense Setup Ordered in Alaska

U. S. Acts to Provide Warning System In Far North

The Army acted yesterday to set up an aircraft warning service in Alaska to guard the vulnerable territory from sudden attack by air.

Reinforcements were ordered to the huge northern area in which two Army air bases and three Navy air and submarine bases are now under construction. They included an antiaircraft regiment, an infantry regiment and field artillery units as well as officers and men to form an air raid protection service.

Nucleus of the service, officials said, will be the Alaskan Communications System, a network of 21 Army Signal Corps stations and nearly 300 subsidiary radio stations feeding into the military setup. While reluctant to discuss the nature of the air raid system, officers said that highly secret airplane detectors, antiaircraft guns, defending planes and widespread observers will form the basis of the protection.

The Army now has radio operators at Point Barrow, northernmost settlement in this continent; Nome, Kotzebue and Nulato. The latter two are tiny posts in the northeastern part of the continent. Other Government radio stations in the Pribilof Islands—within bomber range of Japanese bases—and on St. Lawrence Island, close to the Russian boundary, tie into the Army system.

Founded in 1903 to serve the needs of six Army forts established in the expanding territory, the Signal Corps network became the main avenue of communications for Alaska. All but one of the forts were later abandoned but the system was continued to serve civilian needs.

Some 200 men now operate the Alaskan Communications System. The additional 2,400 soldiers ordered yesterday to the territory will raise the total troops there to about 3,600.

Rumania Put Under Dictator

was understood to have been reached after his long conferences yesterday afternoon with army leaders, who openly have fought her throughout the years as wielding too strong influence behind the throne.

Carol and Gen. Antonescu had talked for hours in the Royal Palace as the monarch attempted to persuade the general to reconsider his decision not to accept the premiership unless his conditions were granted.

Then, at dawn, came the startling decrees, indicating the general had won.

Meanwhile, troops with gas bombs were sent to Brasov early today with orders to recapture the American-owned telephone exchange from Iron Guardists who had held it more than 24 hours.

It was reported that the Iron Guard attacks Monday night, during which a futile attempt was made to assassinate King Carol, were more serious than had been supposed at first, with many serious injuries resulting.

The general, it was understood, had demanded that all relations cease immediately between the palace and a group of close friends and advisers who are believed to have influenced Rumanian policy for years.

Under this condition, it was said, the first who had to go was Earnest Urbareanu, the minister of the palace, who resigned late last night.

Nevertheless, even after this concession, Gen. Antonescu was reported to have made further demands and, it was said, when these were not accepted he handed back his commission to form a new government.

After all this, the capital fell into confusion. Troops, Iron Guardists, peasants under the leadership of Juliu Baniu, old liberals—they all met in the early morning hours tensely awaiting the next move.

Carol, upon whose person and throne one unsuccessful attempt already had been made, had summoned Antonescu to form a new government—expected to be a military dictatorship, after accepting the resignation of the strongly pro-Nazi Premier Ion Gigurtu.

Capital Full of Troops

Bucharest was filled with troops. Explosions in the outskirts were attributed to an attempt to blow up oil storage tanks. Troops were sent into the oil fields.

Dispatches from Szolnok, Hungary, said—despite formal denials by the Budapest foreign office—that a small band of German soldiers had taken up quarters in the Szolnok railway station.

It appeared these formed the first unit of a large force which is to be sent to Rumania to guard the Soviet frontier.

It appeared that Antonescu had been nominated to the very top post in the country for these reasons:

1. His established reputation as an iron disciplinarian.
2. His high place in the army, whose favor is vital to the crown.
3. His record as a nationalist who once before had stood out against the shrinking of Rumania's frontiers.

Red Troop Calls Reported

The King, it appeared, put aside personal enmity for Antonescu because of fears:

That continued outbreaks might lead Hungary to attempt to take not merely the northern half of Transylvania, but all of it.

That Russia might move yet again. During the day Rumania heard with concern that Moscow had called up new troops, and it was understood here that they were coming to Rumania's frontier. "Practice" blackouts in Kiev, in the Russian Ukraine, also were reported.

That Germany, whose troops already are preparing to occupy Rumania's frontier with Russia, might take over the whole country unless growing agitation against the Axis Transylvania dictate was halted.

Four army generals were reported under arrest as plotters against the government; there were rumors of revolts of three army corps; nationwide railway strikes threatened to spread to a complete breakdown of communications.

Hungarians March Today

Copyright by New York Times

Budapest, Hungary, Sept. 4.—In an atmosphere of excited anticipation enhanced by rumors of gathering tension between her great neighbors, Germany and Russia, and spiced by persistent reports from these two lands of military movements which dwarf her own, Hungary prepared tonight to reoccupy portions of the Province of Transylvania.

At 7 o'clock tomorrow morning (1 a. m. E. S. T.) the army will enter the territory for the first time in 22 years. Occupation will continue for nine days.

The three army corps participating in the annexation will move mainly from the Debreczen and Ungvar bases, although troops were drawn up on the actual frontier tonight. Only a few divisions are expected to participate, but the main force of the army remains mobilized in case of necessity.

It is believed that more than 600,000 soldiers are still under arms, and all is ready for a possible emergency. Buses are parked in the Budapest streets ready for troop transport.

It is hoped that bloodshed, if it occurs, will be limited to a scale resulting from disorganized local resistance.

Rites Tomorrow For Chas. Munro, Drowning Victim

Funeral services will be tomorrow for Charles Munro, 48, of 626 Sixth street northeast, who was drowned off Ocean City, Md., last Sunday.

MUNRO

The body of Mr. Munro was recovered yesterday. He was swept overboard with another man as the fishing boat Charles B. Mason encountered heavy seas entering the Ocean City inlet. A native of Silver Spring, Md., Mr. Munro lived in Washington most of his life. He was an interior decorator.

Surviving are his wife, Mary; a son, Charles S.; two grandchildren, four sisters, and a brother.

Last Rites Today For P. J. Ahern, Ex-Secret Service

Requiem mass will be celebrated today for Patrick J. Ahern, 71, bodyguard of two Presidents and retired Secret Service agent, who died Monday at his home, 1231 Ingraham street northwest.

Born in Cork, Ireland, Mr. Ahern joined the Secret Service shortly after coming to the United States. He served as bodyguard to Presidents Harding and Wilson and Attorney General Daugherty. When the United States entered the World War, he was assigned to escort the German Ambassador out of the country.

He was a member of the Holy Name and St. Vincent de Paul Societies of the Church of the Nativity, 6008 Georgia avenue northwest, where mass will be celebrated at 9 a. m. today. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Ahern leaves two daughters, Elizabeth and Irene, and four sons, Frank, Thomas, William, and Harry.

Col. J. F. Defandorf Dies at 77; Rites Set for Tomorrow

Lieut. Col. Jason F. Defandorf, U. S. Army, retired, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital. He was 77.

Col. Defandorf had served in the judge advocate general's department until July, 1927, having entered the Army in September, 1918. He was an authority on military reservations, parks and cemeteries. A native of New York State, Col. Defandorf received a law degree at National University here in 1890. He made his home at Garrett Park, Md.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Harriet H. Defandorf; a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth D. Weaver, and three sons, James H., John L. and F. Marion Defandorf.

Services will be held in Fort Myer Chapel tomorrow morning at 11, with burial in Arlington.

First-Line Army Planes Under 300

cover the status of about 18,000 Army and Navy planes to be purchased under the $5,256,000,000 two-ocean navy and armaments bill upon which Senate and House conferees completed action yesterday. It covers the Army combat plane situation only as of this week.

A breakdown as to types of first-line combat planes on hand and on order is withheld because of belief this might be of service to potential enemies.

Official information indicates the Army high command is still developing experimental planes and that types for mass production have not yet been finally decided upon.

Coincidentally, the same sources revealed that orders placed by the War Department since May 1 for land armaments, including tanks, semiautomatic rifles, antiaircraft guns, antitank guns and heavy artillery of different types, totals only about $75,000,000.

The data shows the Army now has 521 light tanks, with 627 more on order and that no more are to be ordered in the immediate future under present plans. They reveal the Army has only 18 medium tanks, although it has 1,000 on order and plans to get 165 more in the near future. It has no heavy tanks, has ordered one and expects to place orders for 50 more shortly.

The Army has 53,132 semiautomatic rifles and 70,770 on order, according to these figures. It has only one modern 90-mm. antiaircraft gun, with 78 additional on order and 389 to be bought in the near future. It possesses 431 older 3-inch antiaircraft guns, with 100 more on order and also has contracted for over 1,000 new 37-mm. antiaircraft guns for special work.

The figures indicate the Army possesses only 250 antitank guns, that it has ordered 700 more and that it plans to place orders for about 500 additional in the near future.

Apparently the Army staff intends during the near future to depend on the 75-mm. field guns of which it has several thousand. These guns are similar to the 75's the French found extremely ineffective against the larger bore German artillery which far out-ranged them.

In this connection the War Department figures show the Army has only about 1,000 of the 155-mm. artillery guns on hand. Since May 1, it has contracted for no more 155-mm. guns, and plans in the immediate future to order only a few more than 50.

These official figures do not include the much more extensive supplies of war implements covered by the pending second supplementary defense appropriation which is the major armaments measure.

What Conscription Means to You

U. S. Workers to Get Jobs Back

(Editor's Note: With conscription a certainty, The Post is presenting a series designed to answer everyone's questions about the effect of the draft on him. The series is based on legislation that has passed the Senate and the plans drawn up by selective service specialists since the World War. This is the twelfth article. Questions are invited.)

By George Thorpe

Unlike the man who leaves a job in private industry for a year's military training, the Federal employe is assured reemployment on his return. Neither does conscription alter the chances of candidates for civil service ratings who are called up before being appointed.

Question: Will Federal employes now in line for civil service ratings lose their chances of appointment if they are conscripted?

Although the pending Ramspeck bill specifies that the candidate must be recommended by his division head for the rating within a year of the contemplated executive order canvassing various jobs into civil service, the conscript will not lose his chance for the appointment.

Civil service officials say that the rights of CSC candidates will be "frozen" until their return.

Will Get Another 12 Months

Thus if an employe who is eligible for the rating, but is in an Army training camp until after the expiration of the year deadline will be given another 12 months in which to be recommended following his return.

What about the person hired in the conscript's place? Will he be in line for the civil service rating accruing to the vacated job? This point has not been definitely decided, but the Ramspeck measure provides that the candidate must have held the position for at least six months.

Hence if the substitute is new to the Government he will not be qualified for the CSC appointment. He probably would be, on the other hand, if he merely transfers from another Government post.

(The Senate bill provides that conscripted Federal employes will be returned their jobs after their year's service.)

Percentage a Factor, Also

Will the number of men to be called up from each State and the District be decided exclusively on the basis of population?

One other factor besides population will be taken into consideration when the National Selective Service director sets the State quotas. This is the relative percentage of residents of that area already in the services.

The 48 States and the District will be given "credits" for their representatives in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, and the credits will be applied on their quotas in this manner:

Assuming the District had a quota of 12,000 for its overall strength in the services (including the regular and reserve branches as well as the conscript army) and has 11,000 men already in these organizations.

Then the Capital would only be required to furnish 1,000 trainees instead of the approximately 1,800 estimated on a strict population basis.

State-by-State Tally

In establishing the final quotas State boards will thus take into consideration their percentage of Class 1 registrants and the State-by-State break-down of the contribution of each to the armed forces by recruiting.

Will all the 400,000 conscripts scheduled to start training this fall be called up at the same time?

According to present plans of the War Department these men will be called in four increments, as follows: 75,000 on October 15; 115,000 by November 15; 112,000 by December 15, and 98,000 late in December. These dates are subject to alteration according to when the legislation is finally enacted.

How long will the whole conscription process take—from registration day until the first man actually reaches camp?

Although the Joint Army-Navy Selective Service Committee at first estimated it would require close to two months to induct the first trainees, it is now thought that this can be accomplished in little over a month. This estimate is based on the expected efficiency of a decentralized selection system and the fact that on a sectional basis relatively few men will be in the processes of registration, classification and induction at one time.

(Is an aviator trained by the Civil Aeronautics Authority in its pilot training program in line for exemption or deferment from conscription? This is among questions to be answered by The Post tomorrow.)

2 Pastors Disavow Anti-Draft Protest

Unaware Sponsors Of D. C. Rally Meant To Use Names

Signatures to telegrams urging clergymen over the Nation to join in asking public prayers against conscription were repudiated last night by two of the alleged Washington signers.

The text of the telegram was read at a meeting of more than 1,200 draft bill protestants last night at Turner's Arena, 1341 W street northwest. It read:

"Religion, human personality, American democracy endangered by threatened passage of conscription bill. Will you join with us in urging public prayers throughout Nation Thursday and Friday. All night vigil and sunrise service at Capitol steps, Washington. Wire attendance or expression of support. Charles I. Stewart, Hotel Raleigh, Washington, D. C."

Backed by "Retired Financier"

Stewart, who identified himself as a "retired financier," a descendant of the American Revolution and chairman of the New York Committee for Inalienable Rights, read the telegram in connection with his announcement that "hundreds" of draft-bill opponents would sit all night on the steps of the Capitol in a vigil of protest while the House finishes debate on the Burke-Wadsworth measure.

The demonstration, Stewart, said, will be climaxed by a sunrise service Friday. He assured the gathering that the services and vigil had the support of clergymen throughout the country.

One of the names signed to the text of the telegram was that of the pastor of a large Washington church who asked that his name be withheld from publication. He said he had not understood his name was to be used and that the text of the message had not been read to him.

The Rev. Eddy L. Ford, director of religious education of the Foundry Methodist Church, another of the "signers," said he had not authorized use of his signature, but that he had been "interested" in the proposal for services as outlined to him in a general way.

"One does not like to have his name signed to a telegram and then to be told what's in the telegram," Dr. Ford stated.

Third Permitted Use

A third clergyman whose name also was carried on the telegram, the Rev. Peyton R. Williams, of Arlington, said he had agreed to use of his name after other names on the message had been read to him. He emphasized that he was acting not for his church but "as an individual."

All three of the clergymen expressed sympathy for the anti-draft fight.

The Rev. H. W. Burgan, pastor of the Hamline Methodist Church, also was named in the message. He was not immediately available for verification.

Leader Assails Police

In addressing the meeting, sponsored by the American Peace Mobilization and attended by delegates from as far away as California, Stewart accused the Metropolitan Police Department of "taking the law into its hands" in arresting three persons on charges of distributing handbills.

The trio, Edward Lameks, 26, Harrington Hotel; Donald A. Cryer, 19, Greenbelt, Md., and Rose Solomon, 26, Chicago, posted $5 collateral each for appearance in Police Court Friday. They were arrested near the Capitol by Privates T. H. Clarke and W. A. Elliott.

In answer to the arrests, leaders of the meeting announced last night that a citywide pamphlet distribution would be started at 4 p. m. today. At 11 a. m. today, it was announced, a picket line will be formed at the Capitol.

Stewart described the founding fathers as "desperate revolutionists" and suggested that if the conscription bill is passed "we, as they, mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor."

Rabbi Moses Miller, chairman of the Jewish Peoples Committee, described the projected vigil as a "night of devotion in defense of democracy." Rabbi Miller made a plea for funds to buy food and lodgings for delegates without money. He raised about $500 in $10, $5 and $1 bills, including contributions from War and Navy Department workers.

Lake's Club 'Orderly,' Say 13 Policemen

Hearings Resumed Before ABC Board; 2 Convicts Testify

Thirteen Washington policemen and two convicts from Lorton appeared before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday to testify as to the orderly manner in which Jimmie Lake's night club on Ninth street is conducted.

Two agents of the Department of Justice also appeared to confirm statements they said had been made to them by a prostitute that she was served drinks in the establishment, and at four other Ninth street restaurants.

The session was a resumption of hearings on charges that Lake's place had violated the liquor code. The charge of service of liquor to a prostitute previously was accompanied by one of pandering against a waiter at Lake's. The pandering charge had to be dropped when Justice James M. Proctor in District Court, ruled that there was no District law against pandering under which Abraham Blum, the waiter, could be prosecuted.

Two G-Men Testify

One of the G-men, I. E. Nitschke, was brought here yesterday from Butte, Mont., and the other, Charles F. Lanman, came from New York. Both testified to statements given them by the prostitute, who had turned State witness. She had alleged that she was served alcoholic beverages at Jimmie Lake's club as well as at four other Ninth street restaurants.

The case was continued until tomorrow at 2 p. m., when Lake will take the stand. Hearings began in June and were continued over the summer.

The policemen testified to the orderly manner in which Lake conducts his club and the cafe, downstairs from the club. They agreed the Ninth street club operator "always gave us 100 per cent cooperation" in police matters.

Some of the police who testified to this effect were Capt. Clarence Talley, Lieut. C. S. Strange, Lieut. Robert C. Pierce, Sergt. Ernest G. Meyers, Paul F. Little, Ray D. McClure, Elwood S. Groves, Sam R. Russell, W. D. Young, William Schotter and Miss Helen Stanberger.

Blum Denies Version

Dispute over statements given the Federal agents was again in evidence at yesterday's hearing as was true in the earlier hearings.

Abraham Blum appeared and denied certain portions of the statement, which police say contains his signature.

Edward S. Harris, who was brought from Lorton in custody of a guard, told the board he never knew the prostitute named in the case to visit Lakes'.

James Richard Piercy, also brought from the Reformatory, said he never knew the woman to take a drink.

Relief in Washington

Old-Age Pensions Are Based Strictly on Budget Needs

Officials Deny Benefits if Son, Daughter or Spouse Is Able To Provide Support for Him

This is the fourth in a series of articles on relief needs in Washington.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Relief needs in the District for 1942 include items under the classifications of Old Age Assistance, and aid to Needy Blind as well as under aid to dependent children, and General Public Assistance. The last two have been discussed in previous articles.

The impression that the District provides an old age pension should be corrected, says Robert E. Bondy, Director of Public Welfare. Although a maximum old age allowance of $30 a month for one person is fixed by law, this is not granted as a flat amount but is based on budget needs. If the aged person applying for aid has a son, daughter, grandson, granddaughter, or spouse who is able to support him, he is denied relief. If it is found impossible for any of these to provide for him, then relief is allowed, either in the full amount of an amount necessary to supplement whatever meager provision can be made within the budget of other members of the family.

$60 Maximum Per Couple

The law does not, as some seem to think, relieve children and grandchildren of the obligation of support and make the aged person independent of them in case they are disinclined to assume the responsibility, Bondy says.

Although the classification of General Public Assistance, $30 is the maximum allowed for a couple on relief, under the Old Age Assistance provision, two aged persons living together may be granted a maximum of $60 if their budget needs so require. Despite the fact this is generous by comparison, it only allows $7.50 a week for food, fuel, clothing and rent.

A person receiving such relief may enter a private institution for care if he makes his own arrangements or may have someone come in to care for him if necessary. The relief check must be made out to him, however, delivered to him and indorsed by him. If he is mentally incapable of handling the grant, he is required to go to the Home for the Aged.

Results in Decreased Cost

The Director of Public Welfare has asked for an appropriation of $636,000 for old-age assistance for 1942. This is an increase of $53,500 for the 1941 appropriation. It is estimated this would take care of the normal 100 yearly increase in the relief of load under this classification and of about two-thirds of the pending load of 265 applications. During the year there were 911 applications acted on, 594 of which were approved and 317 rejected.

Transfer of the pending load from General Public Assistance, where many of the cases are now receiving aid, to Old-Age Assistance will result in decreased cost to the District, as the Old-Age Assistance is reimbursed by the Social Security Board, Bondy points out.

The appropriation of $44,000 for aid to the Needy Blind, asked for in 1942 is the same as that for 1941. The actual expenditure for 1940 was $65,257 as the Social Security Board reimburses the District for half of the cost of aid to the blind and of administrative expenses.

Must Not Beg

There were 217 cases aided during the firscal year, at an average grant of $25.68 per case monthly. July 1 the maximum allowance for the needy blind was increased from $30 to $40 per month.

Those aided in this classification must be unemployables and must not beg nor receive alms. Those who can be given vocational training that would make them partly self-supporting are required to take it, and most are eager to do so, say the case workers. If other relief is also given the family, under the aid to dependent children classification, the total budget is figured and a fair share charged to each. The maximum is not granted to both.

The total appropriation for aid to dependent children asked for in 1942 is $163,000. It is estimated that reimbursements from the Social Security Board for grants and aid will amount to $114,460 and for administrative expenses, $10,080.

'Blossom Time' Love Laughs At Disturbance

Canoe Upsets, Man Falls in River, but The Show Goes On

An unexpected ground swell, a collision of canoes and a "Man overboard!" cry last night furnished an appropriate comic opera setting for Sigmund Romberg's "Blossom Time," the attraction for 5,000 music lovers at the Water Gate.

Unperturbed by the incident, "Franz Schubert" and "Mitzi Kranz" kept vocal poise as two canoes crashed and one of the paddlers plunged headlong into the Potomac.

Having pulled himself over the embankment, the erstwhile listener nonchalantly strolled behind a clump of foliage, wrung out his sodden clothing, and clambered back in his canoe, according to police. His name was not ascertained.

As the tug whose wake caused the collision glided down the river and airlines muttered overhead the show went on.

Vigorous applause rewarded the singing of Mitzi, Fritzi and Kitzi, the romancing daughters of Herr Kranz, respectively Edith H. Jones, Mary Ella Vostwick and Ruth Coberley; and that of Franz Schubert and Baron Schober, enacted by Howard Moore and Alexander Hill. They are members of the Columbia Light Opera Company, which presented the performance, closing the summer series of the Welfare and Recreational Association and the Community Center and Playgrounds Department.

2 Policemen Accused Of Brutality

Henry J. Martin, James E. Stabler Suspended; Jury Weighs Charges

A District grand jury last night had under advisement testimony of alleged brutality of two Third Precinct patrolmen who were suspended at noon yesterday.

Between 16 and 18 colored persons, ranging in ages fra 15 to 60, were heard by the jury yesterday afternoon. They had first complained to police officials.

Priates Henry J. Martin, 40, and James E. Stabler, 29, were relieved of their shields and revolvers by Inspector Edward J. Kelly at 12:05 p. m. yesterday after the inspector had taken statements from each of the complainants.

The policemen, Kelly said, refused to make a statement.

Witnesses Found

Kelly stated the men were suspended on charges of assault "on at least six or seven colored persons" at different location on their beat September 2, Labor Day.

Inspector Kelly said he received several complaints Tuesday concerning alleged brutality of two policemen Monday night. Investigation, he said, uncovered nearly a score of witnesses and "six or seven" persons who were assaulted.

Martin, according to Kelly, was identified by six persons in a line-up with several other men. Stabler, he said, was not identified, but was Martin's partner on that night, and each complainant said there were two policemen present.

The assaults, the complainants told Inspector Kelly, took place at different locations "between 10:45 and 11:55 p. m." One man was struck over the head with a nightstick, it was said. Another was kicked several times.

Home Invaded, He Says

One 59-year-old colored man, Kelly declared, signed a statement that two officers invaded his home and beat him "without provocation."

The assaults took place in Snow's Court northwest, at Twenty-fourth and I streets northwest, Twenty-fifth and K streets and at New Hampshire avenue and I street, Kelly stated.

"In none of the cases did the officers make any arrests," the inspector asserted.

Assistant District Attorney Allen J. Krause was present when Inspector Kelly interviewed and obtained statements from the complainants.

Martin is a veteran of 15 years' service, having been appointed to the force September 18, 1925. He lives at 1114 New Jersey avenue northwest. Stabler has been on the force since March, 1936, and lives at 534 Twentieth street northwest.

Nineteen-months-old Aubrey Blake, of 529 Ninth street northeast, tumbled 20 feet from the porch of his home yesterday, and suffered a broken leg.

77 Floaters Seized in Raid By Park Police

One Outdoor Sleeper Admits Theft of Car, Leads Police to It

Seventy-seven transients, floaters and "just bums" reposed in police cells last night, victims of a second nocturnal campaign by Park Policeman Bernard J. Beckman.

Caught sleeping in District parks "on benches, on the lawn and on window sills," the men were held for investigation and a line-up and face charges of vagrancy.

It was the park policeman's second appearance as "clean-up man" of the District parks. July 5, he carted off 42 to various precincts. Early yesterday, he took another policeman with him, A. J. Bickford, and netted 77.

F. B. I. Checks Prints

Last night the Federal Bureau of Investigation was checking the fingerprint records of the prisoners. The reports are expected to be ready by 9:30 a. m. today, when Beckman said he plans to arraign the men in Police Court.

Thirteen outdoor sleeping places were raided by the two policemen from 3:30 a. m. until dawn, it was said. They included Franklin Park and Mount Vernon square, both of which were visited by Beckman July 5, Logan Circle, Meridian Park, several small triangles and park areas on Rhode Island avenue, and the "jungle," a favorite bedding ground under the Inlet Bridge.

Extra men had to be placed in the fingerprint bureau at Police Headquarters to "mug" the men. One colored man said he had stolen an automobile. Later he led officers to the machine and also a stolen auto radio.

Robbery Inspired Campaign

Beckman's clean-up in July was prompted by the robbery of an elderly man near the Sylvan Theater. Of the 42 arrested at that time, 36 were convicted and sent to jail.

Yesterday's raid was due, he said, to the fact that "the parks were filled again. For almost a month before," Beckman declared, "there were no park sleepers. Then they started drifting in. So I asked Capt. Helms for permission to raid them again."

2 Soldiers Accused Of Purse Snatching

Two soldiers were accused last night of snatching a purse, containing $2.29, from a woman walking at Riverside drive and K street northwest. The woman, Nellie Simpson, 58, of 2418 G street northwest, reported the theft occurred at 11 p. m.

Jean Rothenburg, 2032 Belmont road northwest, lost $50 last night when a thief grabbed her pocketbook in the rear of her home.

Pageant to Continue At Takoma Pool Tonight, Tomorrow

The first performance of the second annual Red Cross "Aquafete" at the Takoma Park Pool last night proved to be a spectacular two-hour revue of rhythm swimming, acrobatic and stunt diving, surf board riding, life saving, dancing and modeling.

Among the outstanding performances were those of Patsy Palmer and Bill Wright, jr., queen and king of the carnival; Buddy Dearing, "world's fastest swimmer"; Lillian Kirsch and Charles Kaulias, District breast stroke champions; Buddy and Betty Rowland, 10-year-old tandem; Bill Tarvett and Bert Williams, fancy divers; Henry Rink and Kiser Crawford, clowns.

Besides, there were 100 of Washington's prettiest girl swimmers, dancers from the Madolin Hodgson dancing school, and mannequins from Kann's.

Edgar Morris, Red Cross roll call chairman, in a brief introduction to the Aquafete, told the audience that the aquatic review was a symbol of the water preparedness program maintained at the public pools by the Red Cross first aid and life-saving department.

"The Red Cross," Morris declared, "is the life guard of humanity, always ready to lend a helping hand to those who suffer as a result of misfortune beyond their sontrol."

The water pageant will be presented at the Takoma Pool, Fifth and Van Buren streets, tonight and tomorrow, with 5,000 free seats available to the public.

District Budget 'Far Below' Needs, Katz Asserts

Expenditures authorized in the District's 1941-42 budget, now under consideration, are "far below" Washington's needs, Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the District-Maryland Industrial Union Council (C. I. O.), declared last night.

Citizens of the District would be willing to pay additional income taxes "to make a better lot possible for the District of Columbia," he told a meeting of the Washington Auxiliary of the United Federal Workers of America at U. F. W. A. headquarters, 522 Seventeenth street northwest.

More money, he said, is needed for labor services, welfare activities, particularly public relief, health and educational facilities.

The Minimum Wage and Hour Board, through lack of an adequate staff of inspectors, is unable to enforce the minimum wage and maximum hours laws for women, he declared.

8 Embryo D. C. Guard Fliers Celebrate Before 'Pushing Off'

Eight former college boys, more recently law students and Government workers, celebrated last night before pushing off for new jobs as National Guard flying cadets at Lakeland, Fla.

They are the survivors of several hundred applicants for the recently formed 121st Observation Squadron, District Guard aviation unit. Others were "washed out" because of failure to meet the requirements—two years' college training and perfect physiques.

Ahead of the eight prospective airmen were seven and a half months' stiff training courses, three months at Lakeland, and the remainder at Maxwell Field, Ala.

"It's a good way to miss the draft," remarked one of the youths, unperturbed by the fact he may be called for service long before the 400,000 trainees have finished their one-year training.

Lieut. James Higgs, at whose home 4444 Linnean avenue northwest, the party was given, pointed out that there were 22 vacancies still open for young men who could fufill the requirements for the squadron.

Those who will report Wednesday at Lakeland are Laidler Mackall, Henry C. B. Claggett, Marcel Lindheimer, George Patchings, Patrick Ready, William Resseger, William Pappadeas and James V. Williams.

Driver Admits Homicide Charge In Traffic Death

William Howard, colored, 35, of 104 K street southeast, pleaded guilty in Police Court yesterday to a charge of negligent homicide in connection with the traffic death of Robert Loving, colored, 49, of 320 Dixon court southwest.

Howard was held by a coroner's jury after an inquest. He was accused of driving an automobile which struck and killed Loving in the 800 block Fourth street southwest, June 15.

Judge John P. McMahon set September 11 for sentencing Howard and ordered the probation officer to make an investigation in the meantime.

Oldest District Inhabitants Not To Sponsor Fete

The Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District turned down a proposal last night to sponsor a mass meeting September 18 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the United States Capitol's cornerstone laying.

Members agreed there was not sufficient time to prepare for the event.

The association elected Oscar J. Burton and Reuben A. Bagley to membership.

HAY FEVER and ASTHMA
Science has not yet found a preparation which will give relief to all hay fever and asthma sufferers. This is understandable when one realizes that both of these conditions can be caused by many things, such as various pollens from flowers and weeds, perfumes, animal hairs, improper diet, etc. However, science has discovered that many cases of hay fever and asthma get amazing relief from the administration of a certain vital food element. Allergen, a rich source of this important element, gives relief to thousands of sufferers year in and year out. In fact, if Allergen is taken early enough, hay fever and asthma can often be prevented. Allergen is put up in inexpensive, easy-to-take tablets. Trial size, 39c; regular size, $1.00; economy, $2.00.

Eugene O'Neill Has Title For His Nine-Drama Cycle

Our Greatest Playwright Has Not Yet Completed Undertaking on Which He Has Worked 6 Years; On the Remarkable Career of Fritzi Scheff

By Richard L. Coe,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

"A TALE OF POSSESSORS SELF-DISPOSSESSED" is the title Eugene O'Neill has given his cycle of nine full-length, co-related plays.

This news, which comes from Teresa Helburn's recent trip to the Pacific Coast, does not necessarily mean that America's greatest contemporary dramatist has completed his six-year task. He doesn't know when he will be finished. He completed the detailed scenarios last year and since then has been busy with the actual dialoguing of the individual plays.

Each of the plays is a full-length, individual drama in itself, but related to the others as an essential link in the chain. Separately they will be known as: 1) "Greed of the Meek," 2) "And Give Me Death," 3) A Touch of the Poet," 4) "More Stately Mansions," 5) "The Calms of Capricorn," 6) "The Earth's the Limit," 7) "Nothing Lost Save Honor," 8) "Man on Iron Horseback," 9) "A Hair of the Dog."

The author of "Mourning Becomes Electra," "The Emperor Jones" and more great dramas of our time than you can shake a bookshelf at, has introduced no technique that he has not used before. He also vows that it is in no sense autobiographical and is in no way connected with any proposed play mentioned in his previous plans. Miss Helburn of the Theater Guild visited him and his wife, the former Charlotta Monterey, found him in excellent health, but discussed no production plans for the new work.

One thing we're not going to miss is the entrance of Fritzi Scheff for her first show at the Capitol Friday afternoon. This amazing daughter of a Viennese physician and his opera singer wife has had one of the more fascinating careers in a profession that's jammed with unbelievable life stories. She began as an opera singer in Munich in 1898, singing "Martha," the same thing that's swung so elegantly these scurrying days. She came by this honestly, for her mother was Anna Jaeger, prima donna of Vienna's Imperial Opera House. Then she roamed the continent in traditional operatic fashion. Maurice Grau heard her and brought her to the Metropolitan Opera House for a variety of roles that ranged from "La Boheme" to "Die Walkure." She's been in America, pouring champagne out of her slipper, ever since.

Curiously enough, it was here in Washington, at the National Theater, that she made her first appearance on the musical comedy stage that was to bring such wider celebrity. That was "Babette." It was here, too, that she first played "Mlle. Modiste" and first sang "Kiss Me Again." That was the ninth of October, 1905 and Fritzi has been singing it ever since. Practically without stopping for breath.

And though she was 61 last Friday, Fritzi still has plenty of breath left. During her week in Gene Ford's "Variety Hall of 1910," she'll do exactly what she did a few years back in New York when she astounded reviewers with her "Mlle. Modiste." Her numbers will include that drum number "The Mascot of the Troop," "Absinthe Frappe" from "It Happened in Nordland," "When You're Away" from "The Only Girl" and, oh, Fritzi, "Always Do as People Say You Should!"

PEOPLE AND THINGS: Today is "Sammy Kaye Day" at the New York World's Fair and right after it's over Sammy entrains for his week at the Earle, during which he's offering an audience contest with cash prizes for the best impromptu bandleader . . . Walter Wanger, volatile producer of "Blockade" and "Algiers" among others and Joan Bennett's husband, should be very worth listening to when he talks at the Variety Club luncheon Tuesday at the Willard . . . "The Howards of Virginia" will go into the Earle Friday, the thirteenth . . . Steve Cochran's Olney Theater has now "gone barn dance" for Saturday evening swing sessions . . . The rural swaying begins this Saturday . . . "All This and Heaven Too" is breaking records up U street way, having moved from two weeks at the Lincoln to the Booker T . . . which is tantamount to three weeks on F street for the chain . . . One of the better things of the week will be Maj. W. S. Van Dyke II's buffet dinner at the Shoreham tonight . . . Yes, the Major's an earned, not honorary title for director "Woody" Van Dyke . . . And his wife is a real charmer . . . Sam Jack Kaufman leaves tonight for three weeks fishing in northern Michigan . . . Max Zinder will be the Capitol's conductor in the interim.

Little

So long as the world loves a love story what happened at "Mayerling" will be a favorite film. This eloquent picture of a royal romance has returned again for a Little Theater engagement.

Charles Boyer played the Archduke Rudolph with such stunning understanding that were this the only film of consequence he ever made, his name would be celebrated anyway. As it is, his portrait of a man in love with a woman his royal right can never give him is a notable companion in the French player's gallery. Danielle Warrieux has never regained the force she revealed in this, the first film to bring her to American notice.

Of course, so long as the Duke and Duchess of Windsor live, their story will be compared to the unhappy romance of this young ruler and the girl who was beneath him. The Archduke and his Marie Vetsera took one way out of their tragedy. England's ruler and his American beloved choose another, braver path, but the parallels are so intriguing that never will audiences fail to contrast the two affairs.

Another of "Mayerling's" interesting qualities is its universality. This reviewer, who speaks no Italian, first saw it in Rome with dubbed-in Italian dialogue, but the story was unmistakable, the true quality of a motion picture. The version we see now is French with English subtitles. Arthur Honegger's music makes this one of the earliest films to properly synchronize the two arts while the general excellence of this production by a France that may never come back is a sad sidelight on the European fury.

Actress Penning Life of Husband

Billie Burke is writing the biography of her husband, the great Florenz Ziegfeld, she announced on the set of "Dulcy," in which she is featured.

Since the making of the picture, "The Great Ziegfeld," the actress has been deluged with letters from thousands of fans asking her to put his life in written form. However, it wasn't until her friend, Mrs. Will Rogers, who has recently completed the life history of the beloved Will Rogers, encouraged her in the project, that she consented.

The two families have been friends for many years an dsince Rogers was a Ziegfeld star of long standing, Mrs. Rogers and the actress share mutual memories and ancedotes. Miss Burke's decision comes at an appropriate time as M.-G.-M. starts "Ziegfeld Girl" within a few weeks, with an all-star cast.

They sure enough had plenty of rods, but these boys, opening Friday at RKO-Keith's in this Western rattler, do look lost without their steeds. In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Sept. 4.

If "Foreign Correspondent" doesn't raise your blood pressure, then you'd better see your doctor. It's as real as life itself, and up to the minute as the daily headlines.

HOPPER

Two years ago when Producer Walter Wanger did "Blockade," which was 'way ahead of its day, he was called a traitor, and some goodly folk tried to ban it. Now, since he's made "Foreign Correspondent," he's hailed by critics and public as a hero. This is my idea of a picture.

When Deems Taylor was going on the Paramount lot to call on Mary Martin, he carried what looked to be a camera in his hand, and was stopped by the doorman, who said, "Sorry, sir, you can't bring a camera in here."

"Oh, no?" And he lifted the lid—what he got was sweet music. He was taking her one of those pocket RCA radios.

The neatest trick of the week was pulled by Mary. No walkouts or suspensions for that litle lassie when she wants a salary tilt. She just has her friend Oscar Serlin demand her services for his new Broadway show, and immediately they tear up a scrap of paper and she gets more money. Smart, painless and efficient—eh, wot?

Zasu Pitts was showing off a rhumba on the set of "No, No, Nanette," and now it's going to be used as comedy relief for Anna Neagle's dance. And Zasu thought she was hot!

You won't believe it (I didn't), but Paul Muni is going to give an imitation of Bing Crosby and sing—so help me!—in "Hudson's Bay."

You'll laugh when you get a load of Hedy Lamarr in her next picture as a street car motorman in Moscow, Russia. She believes women should work. Well, that is, she believes it until Clark Gable comes along.

In looking over their livestock, Clark and Carole discovered they have five dogs and 14 cats at their ranch. Two are dachshunds, (a new one just given them by the fire commissioner of Santa Barbara, and they call him "Commissioner"), two pointers, and a Labrador retriever that thinks it's a lap dog.

Wish you could have seen the fair visitors who were "Ohing" and "Ah-ing" over Bob Taylor and Walter Pigeon on the "Flight Command" set. The technicians, without any sense of humor or regard for a lady's feelings, turned on the motors filled with oil—which make fog over the set.

Arthur Murray met a producer after a preview the other night. Said producer, "How did you like the picture?"

"Well, it might have been worse," Arthur replied.

Producer snapped, "I hope you'll retract that statement, Arthur."

"All right," said Arthur, "I will. It COULDN'T have been worse."

The last time Grace Moore made a picture here, she had a run-in with the candid-camera boys, and shrieked, "Don't you ever shoot another picture of me." Their reply was "O. K." Now that she's back and appearing at night spots, the candid boys have a heck of a time shooting all the people at her table, but not Grace again. She's furious.

There's plenty of glamour in Dietrich's new picture, "Seven Sinners." Even her parasol has s. a. She designed it herself.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 4 (INS).—We can now take Republic out of the "quickie" class, for when a company pays $50,000 for a property we can no longer look upon that studio as the tin pan alley of movies. Fifty thousand dollars, my friends, is the price that M. J. Siegel, president of Republic Productions, handed out for "Sis Hopkins," famed stage classic. Judy Canova, top femme star of the Republic studios, plays sis.

PARSONS

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Olivier drifted back into town in a rosy honeymoon haze and reported for wardrobe fittings and tests in preparation for their roles as Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson. Another important addition to the cast of Alex Korda's historical romance arrived yesterday in the person of Sara Allgood, who will play Mrs. Cadegan, Lady Hamilton's mother. Miss Allgood, one of the bright particular stars of Dublin's famed Abbey Players, came over from Ireland last spring and scored a Broadway hit in "June and the Paycock." There has been much talk that Vivien and Laurence will in the future try to arrange their movie dates so they can costar.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: John, jr. and Carmen Considine will welcome the stork for the third time. The other two Considine children, Erin and John, are handsome enough to be in the movies; the Joe Mankiewiczes also have a date with the long-legged bird. Mrs. M. was formerly Rose Stradner, well-known actress; Annabella's plane was forced down near Kansas City Saturday night and she arrived at 2:15 a. m., hours too late for the dinner party planned for her. I dined with Ty and some other friends and he was on the phone every five minutes; There's much talk that Jawn and Elaine Barrymore are warring again. At any rate, Elaine and her mother spent the week-end at the Santa Barbara Biltmore with M. Barrymore conspicuous by his absence.

Lois Andrews gave George Jessel a gold locket with her picture engraved on one side and with the inscription "Forever yours" on the other when he left town—just to prove all the rumors aren't true about their separating; Mrs. Danny Danker and litle Suzanne took the plane for Florida to visit relatives. Suzanne had a corsage as big as herself; Edwina Mandel has gone to New York to see the shows and shops; apparently Ann Sheridan didn't sail for Honolulu Friday, for she and George Brent were at the House of Murphy on Labor Day; Lupe Velez and George Hall at Bill Jordan's bar of music.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Proven Hits Also Billed As Finale Nears for Summer Attractions

"WHEN THE DALTONS RODE." The last great outlaw band of the old West comes to the screen in this New Universal production opening tomorrow morning at RKO-Keith's. Brian Donlevy, Broderick Crawford, Stuart Erwin and Frank Albertson are the terrible Daltons and Kay Francis has her first "outdoor" role as the telegraph operator of Coffeyville, Kans., center of the gang's exploits. Andy Devine, George Bancroft, Mary Gordon, Harvey Stephens and Edgar Deering are others in the cast. "Gateways to Panama," the "March of Time" release on the Caribbean defenses, and "Pluto's Dreamhouse," a Disney cartoon, are also on the incoming bill.

Capitol

"CAPTAIN CAUTION." This story of blockade-runners in the War of 1812 is adapted from a novel by Kenneth Roberts, author of "Northwest Passage," and comes to the screen with Leo Carrillo, Bruce Cabot, Victor Mature and Louise Platt in the leading roles. An ambitious stage revue titled "Variety Hall of 1910," will bring back such notables as Fritz Scheff, "Mlle. Modiste" herself; Joe E. Howard, a current favorite of the air's "Gay Nineties Revue;" the Watson Sisters, Marshall Montgomery, Emma Francis, W. Harold Kennedy, Eddie Horan and the Primrose Four. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"HE STAYED FOR BREAKFAST." Loretta Young and Melvyn Douglas costar in this lightheaded ribbing of communism. She is married to a pompous banker, played by Eugene Pallette, whose most annoying habit is the way he holds his pinkie when drinking coffee. Douglas, playing a politically-conscious waiter who doesn't like the banker either, shoots off the offending finger and starts the ruckus. Alan Marshall and Una O'Connor are also involved. Sammy Kaye and his "Swing and Sway" music are the incoming stage feature, offering his air companions including Tommy Ryan and Charlie Wilson. Opens tomorrow morning.

Palace

"BOOM TOWN." Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr and Frank Morgan continue for a second week on F street in this action-packed story of oilmen and their ups and downs.

Metropolitan

"THEY DRIVE BY NIGHT." After a week at the Earle, this story of truck driving returns to the downtown sector, starring George Raft, Ann Sheridan, Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart. Alan Hale, Roscoe Karns, Gale Page, Joyce Compton and Henry O'Neill also are in the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"I LOVE YOU AGAIN." William Powell and Myrna Loy are the stars of this mad comedy which returns after two weeks at the Palace. The story concerns the business and marital adventures of an amnesia victim, Frank McHugh, Edmund Lowe and "Alfalfa" Switzer are featured. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trans-Lux

"HISTORIC VIRGINIA." This Andre LaVarre travelogue of the neighboring State includes visits to Williamsburg, the Raleigh Tavern and Yorktown battlefield. Other short subjects at the newsreel house are an "Information Please" with Clarence Budington Kelland as guest expert; "Fishing in Hawaii" for the Waltonians and a color cartoon, "The Bookworm Turns." Opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

"TOP HATTERS." With Amy Fong, the Chinese charmer as the headline attraction for the second week of its new season, the Gayety will also offer Jack Diamond, Billy Foster, Bany Jacobs, Ethel Delou, Leona Thurston, Fred Mason and Frank Hall in its new burlesque attraction. Opens Sunday afternoon. This week's bill with Vicky Welles plays a midnight performance Saturday.

Cross Roads

"SMILIN' THROUGH." The Allan Langdon Martin classic of the first World War continues for a second week at the Virginia barn theater with Elizabeth Winburn in the Jane Cowl role. Robert Langley, William Draper, Margaret Mansfield, W. Julian Hatcher, Austin Gattis and Irma Gordon complete the cast.

Roadside

"EAST LYNNE." Mrs. Henry Wood's celebrated play, a favorite since 1862, is the season's final production continuing through next week at the barn theater on the Rockville pike. Betty Gray, Larry Lawrence, Norman Rose, Lois Alexander, Kenneth Banghart and Jack Salamanca have the leads. As an entr'acte, Bibby Osterwald sings "My Mother Was a Lady."

Open-Air

"THESE THREE." With Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea in the leading roles this notable screen adaptation of Lillian Hellman's play opens a three-night run this evening at the drive-in theater on the Richmond pike. Spencer Tracy and Ann Dvorak also costar in "Sky Devils." Earlier nightfall has moved up opening time to 7:15.

Glen Echo

THE AMUSEMENT PARK will close for the season on Sunday evening. All attractions including the swimming pool will remain open through Sunday. The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 4.

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: William Saroyan, who refused the $1,000 Pulitzer Prize, nevertheless accepted the scroll, signed by Nicholas Murray Butler, which signified the award. That scroll is the rarest one ever issued by the prize committee, for it contains a typographical error. Saroyan showed it to me, in the study of his home in San Francisco. It reads "For 'The Time of Your Life,' and original American play," . . . Saroyan, who has three new plays ready for this season, confided: "I'm going to embarrass the hell outa the Pulitzer Prize committee this year because all three plays deserve the prize, and they'll just have to give it to me again." To ridicule their award, however, Saroyan will issue his own prizes—a 15-cent scroll—to Ed Stettinius, George Washington Hill and other eminent gentlemen about whose business operations he knows absolutely nothing.

SAROYAN

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT: Dorothy Parker dined at Ciro's and had the most excellent wines and viands obtainable in Hollywood. It began with champagne cocktails followed by caviar wrapped in smoked salmon. The proper wines then were served with each elegant dish. At midnight a luxurious limousine arrived, to take Dorothy home . . . "Where to?" asked the chauffeur . . . Dorothy, who had been among the first to discover John Steinbeck's Okies, paused for a moment to permit the caviar and champagne to settle, then waved her arm majestically westward, and instructed: "Highway 66."

FASHIONS DEPARTMENT: Thomas Mann, vacationing in Beverly Hills, reminisced of the time when Albert Einstein came to his home in Princeton, dressed in his customary attire—but wearing no socks . . . "Dr. Einnstein," one of Mann's guests asked, "Did you forget to put on your socks?" . . . "I'm not wearing any socks," the scientist explained, "because then I never have to worry about getting holes in them."

WAR DEPARTMENT: Richard Haydn, the young Britisher now appearing here in "Tonight at 8:30," is flying to England to join the army. "And when I return," was his farewell message to Noel Coward, "I expect to have many things up my sleeve—including my arm, I hope" . . . Coward told me of his Paris apartment, at 22 Place Vendome, which now is occupied by the Nazis. "They shall have to redecorate, I'm sure," said Coward, "for the apartment is done in red, white and blue and the large screens are decorated with the French tricolor."

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: This is the way Hugh Herbert tells it: Two fishing enthusiasts matched their exploits. The first told of catching a 200-pound fish in the Columbia River basin. "I fished in the exact spot you describe," said the second, "and when I pulled in my line, I found a lamp which was 200 years old—and it was still lit" . . . "Let's make a deal," suggested the first fish-story-teller. "I'll take off 100 pounds—if you'll turn out the light."

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Lily Pons and Andre Kostelanetz returned from Honolulu last week, accompanied by Bill Schweitzer, the world's champion rifle shooter. Shortly after they had come to the islands, Lily decided to forego some of her singing practice in favor of learning to shoot. Schweitzer agreed to give instruction to Miss Pons, on condition that her husband consent . . . Andre was impressed with their arguments—that in these times a steady trigger finger and true aim might be extremely useful. But he also was anxious to avoid all risks. And so Lily Pons, taking rifle instruction from the world's champion, did all her practice shooting in the crater of an extinct volcano in Honolulu.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT: Ill, and struggling to retain the 135 pounds remaining of the husky 200-pounder which was once Tom Mooney, the man around whom stormed the most celebrated case in the history of American labor, now is a patient at St. Luke's Hospital in Frisco. There, too, he is fighting to recapture the headlines which were his for so many years, for Mooney always has felt that he was destined to be remembered . . . His estranged wife tells of the early days of their marriage, when Tom and his bride would talk in the cemeteries of San Fransicco. He would point to the tombstones of the dead, and tell her: "See? All these men are forgotten. But I—I will be remembered for centuries."

Truth Triflers About to Wed Invite Prison

Marriage License Applicants Face Term If Facts Are False

Persons who trifle with the facts when applying for marriage licenses here are trifling, also, with a two to ten year prison term for perjury. So is anyone who puts them up to it.

The blushing bride-to-be had better come clean about her age. And if the prospective bridegroom has a divorced spouse out West somewhere, the license clerk's office is no safe place to be reticent about it. These are among the facts required by law to be stated truthfully. The applicants would be wise to give their right addresses, too.

More than 2,000 men and women applied for marriage licenses here last month, setting an all-time high record. A casual inquiry yesterday indicated that some of them unwittingly exposed themselves to prosecution.

The United States Court of Appeals here recently took a severe view of misstatement of apparently trivial information required with application. Justice Justin Miller spoke for the court in upholding the prison term imposed on a man who gave the wrong name and also concealed a previous marriage.

Under the common law, Justice Miller said, a man might change his name for an honest purpose, but the District Code requires him to give his right name if he wants to get married.

"The law merely requires truthful answers to a few simple questions," said Justice Miller, "but the safeguard of the law is found in the severe penalty which is imposed for false answers."

If anybody actually has gone astray, he can correct the error at the license clerk's office.

2 U. S. Lines' Ships To Be Withdrawn

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—The United States Lines said tonight that its liners Manhattan and Washington would be withdrawn temporarily from the New York-Pacific coast trade so alterations to crew quarters could be made "during the slack season."

Curran Fills 3 Vacancies On District Attorney Staff

District Attorney Edward M. Curran yesterday announced appointments to fill three of the five vacancies on his staff.

The new Assistant District Attorneys are:

John Lewis Smith, 28, 2424 Tracy street northwest, formerly law clerk to Justice James M. Proctor, of the District Court.

Bernard Margolius, 26, 5333 Twenty-eighth street northwest, law clerk to Justice Justin Miller, of the United States Court of Appeals.

Dennis McCarthy, 28, 2800 Ontario road northwest, law clerk to Justice Harold Stephens, of the United States Court of Appeals.

Margolius and McCarthy will receive $3,200 a year. Smith and two other assistants expected to be named in about two weeks will receive $2,600 a year.

John J. Wilson resigned as chief of the criminal division shortly after Curran's appointment as successor to Justice David A. Pine was announced on March 15. Curran created four other vacancies by asking incumbents to resign about two months ago and recommended his choices to fill these posts about two weeks ago. Attorney General Jackson accepted Curran's recommendation and appointed three of the men yesterday.

Smith is a native of Washington and was graduated from Princeton University, also receiving his law degree there. After being Justice Proctor's law clerk three years, he entered private practice with his father, John L. Smith, sr., last January. His engagement to Madeline Cotter, Washington, was announced recently.

Margolius, also a native of Washington, was graduated from the old Business High School in 1931, received his arts degree at George Washington University in 1935 and his law degree from G. W. U. in 1937. He has been Justice Miller's law clerk since.

McCarthy, who will be assigned to duty in the Police Court, is a native of Salt Lake City and studied at Leland Stanford University. He came here five years ago to study law at Georgetown University and was admitted to the bar here last year.

The SOLOVOX
USED WITH YOUR PIANO IT PRODUCES TONE EFFECTS OF ORCHESTRAL INSTRUMENTS . . . FLUTES, REEDS, BRASSES AND STRINGS!
Made by the makers of the Hammond Organ and the Novachord.

Easy to Play
Anyone who can "pick out" a melody by ear can play a creditable solo on the Solovox—because all the beauty of tone is built into the Solovox. You touch the keys and Solovox does the rest. Thus it's loads of fun for duets, with merely a "one finger pianist" at the Solovox while his partner plays the piano.
PRICE $190
—on easy terms. Or if you already have an account with us you can buy it by slightly increasing your present monthly payments.
As you play your piano haven't you often wanted a singing tone to take the melody of a tuneful strain—just as a solo instrument does in an orchestra? With the Solovox you actually can achieve such an effect, seated at your own piano! For Solovox is a revolutionary new musical accessory for the piano. Easily, without learning new techniques, you can add a singing solo tone similar to some orchestra instrument to the brilliant percussive tones of your piano. You play from regular piano music; the right hand carries the melody on the Solovox, the left hand accompanying on the piano . . . The result is an instrumental duet of rare charm and expressiveness.
You choose from many beautiful Solovox tones—all voiced to supplement those of the piano. For Solovox gives you tones which the piano does not—smooth sustained voices, rich in vibrato, reminiscent of orchestral flutes, brasses, strings and reeds. There are hundreds of possible tone colors, all produced electrically—without strings, hammers or mechanical sounding device.
The keyboard of the Solovox attaches easily to your piano—a compact tone cabinet mounts inconspicuously on grand or vertical—you plug into an electrical outlet—and the Solovox is ready to play! Solovox in no way interferes with or changes the regular operation of your piano. You still play your piano in the regular way, whether you are using the Solovox or not. There are no connections between the Solovox and the playing parts of your piano.

Browder Barred by U. S. Court From Stump Tour

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—Earl Browder, Communist Presidential candidate under prison sentence for passport fraud, was denied permission today to make a campaign speaking tour on the Pacific Coast.

"I do not think there is any reason why a man convicted of a crime should be allowed to engage in political activities, particularly against the Government," said Federal Judge John C. Knox, in denying Browder's application to leave the court's jurisdiction.

Japanese Rotary Clubs Are Dissolved

Toyko, Sept. 4 (AP).—Representatives of all Rotary Clubs in Japan, Korea and Manchukuo, 47 in all, voted today to dissolve the organization in the Japanese Empire.

The action was a sequel to the recent nation-wide anti-espionage agitation in which Rotary came under fire from nationalist elements because of its international connections.

Patrol Boys at Training Camp

SCHOOLBOY COURT—Private Leslie Green teaches court procedure for use in school traffic violation trials. Patrol boys taking part of judges are (left to right) Fred Merkle, of Barnard School; Floyd Bilbo and John Moy, both of Henry School; Vernon Arthur, Stuart Junior High School; Robert Lesley, St. Dominic's School, and Raymond Janney, Stuart Junior High School

Washington youngsters who will soon resume their duties as schoolboy patrol officers are now at Camp Ernest W. Brown learning traffic-control methods from experts.

The boys are being taught patrol work, court procedure and traffic technique by District police officers. But the course is not all work. Swimming, hiking, nature study, and all the outdoor activities of camp life provide plenty of diversion.

The ten-day course is being sponsored jointly by the Metropolitan Police Department, the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, the District schools, and the District Motor Club of the American Automobile Association.

SAFETY INSTRUCTIONS—Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District Motor Club, American Automobile Association, uses traffic posters in his talks to the boys

FOREMOST NATURALIST at the camp is David Terk, of the John Eaton School, who proudly displays his latest acquisition—a gar fish

A similar course was held during August for officers of patrols in colored schools.

Four classes are held each day, two in the morning and two in the afternoon, each class being 25 minutes long. More than 100 boys are attending. The course is organized under three main topics, "General Knowledge," "Patrol Operation" and "Qualification for Leadership." Another subject is "Safe Bicycle Driving."

Each youngster has begun a notebook and is listing ways of improving the patrol at his school. They will all participate in a model school safety patrol court at the end of the course.

Volunteer groups will put on safety plays and exhibition drill teams in connection with their classes. Safety talks by schoolboy patrolmen are featured at general get-togethers of the group.

All local schools are represented at the camp, where the training course will last until Monday, September 9.

A new class will be opened at Chamberlain as soon as possible in airplane mechanics. One is now conducted at Phelps. Several other new classes also will be set up in Chamberlain School, located at Thirteenth and Potomac southeast, as several rooms are available there.

PAUL DWYER OPERATES A GRINDER—NOTE THE TIME

A Fashion Contrast . . .

AMERICAN MANNEQUIN dressed for fall by American designers in ostrich, brocade and jewels

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor

To combat the universal acknowledgment of New York as the new fashion and beauty center of the world, Berlin steps forth with eye-filling picture propaganda showing Nazi women, not as comfortable hausfraus, nor as half-starved Amazons, but as attractive, well-proportioned, neatly garbed young women.

American fashion experts have been debating whether German propagandists would get into action now that our merchants have refused French products with concealed swastika control. So this week marked New York's debut of formal white tie showings at Fifth Avenue's gilt-edged stores in imitation of the Parisian collections held every fall at this time.

Typically poised willowy American models displayed richly-plumed gowns last evening at Bergdorf Goodman's show, the first of a promenade series to sponsor nothing but made-in-America originals. Tonight Saks Fifth Avenue and later other custom-design stores will add to the weekly displays of clothes intended to set the world's style pace.

Berlin observes from a distance and answers with these photographs of it's war-time beauties. Germany has never been considered a font for fashion inspiration, although Teuton women have a fair statuesqueness well suited to feminine "pretty" clothes. Nazism has no intention of permitting them anything glamorous, any more than lipstick and fancy coiffures are allowed.

The fashion items permitted Nazi women include over-alls, jumpers, monkey suits and divided skirts—with a new attention to fit and tailoring. The German fashion machinery is so business-like that even the peasants' picturesque skirt has been replaced by culottes. Occasionally there is a feeble attempt at feminizing by means of white cotton aprons, timidly edged with lace. These are worn over strict blue blouses and red, white and blue skirts. The tri-color, satirically enough, more often encases German torsos than French ones. And Germany, despite her dominance of The Lowlands, has borrowed even there, for Nazi farm girls at the front, mechanics and plant workers now walk in wooden Dutch sabots.

GERMAN MAEDCHEN outfitted for fall by the Nazi war machine in a businesslike jumper

HERE—At last the first of the authentic American designs, free of Parisian apron strings this time, have come out of New York, all of them feminine and elegant. The model (above) wears a typically graceful American-made evening gown of white and black tulle, a pair of white birds perched on top of the black velvet bodice

THERE—The girl with the hoe is a frequent sight in Hitler's Germany, especially if her costume is down-to-earth like this Nazi girl's. Her overalls are cut exactly like a man's and the work she does suits her business of farm ploughing, factory assembling or serving as machinists' helper.

N. Y. Grid Giants Lose First All-Star Game, 16-7

39,405 See Easterners Beat Pros

Little-Heralded Aces Upset Dope After 9 Straight N. Y. Wins; Guard Jocher Stars

By the United Press

New York, Sept. 4.—The New York Football Giants had never lost an All-Star game, but then they never met a bunch of boys named Joe from Scranton and other unpretentious Eastern colleges. Tonight they did, and the little-heralded Eastern College All-Stars ripped through the haughty professionals for a 16-to-7 triumph.

Playing the professionals off their feet in a thrilling game before 39,405 spectators at the Polo Grounds, the Eastern collegians, coached by Tuss McLaughry, of Brown, and rated a 3-to-1 underdog in the betting, showed the Giants a few things about passing, broken-field running, rugged line play and teeth-rattling tackling.

In nine previous years, all-star teams packed with all-Americans and players of mighty reputation had little luck against the Giants.

The All-Stars scored two touchdowns and a field goal and led from near the end of the second period until the finish. A fluke play enabled the All-Stars to score their first touchdown. The Giants had the ball on their own 35-yard line when Kay Eakin, rookie halfback from Arkansas dropped back to pass. One of the All-Stars charged into Eakin just as he was about to let the ball go. The impact jarred him and the ball bounced out of his hand and a few inches into the air.

Arthur Jocher, 202-pound guard from Manhattan—one of those boys named Joe, who few fans had ever heard of before—grabbed the ball and raced 35 yards for the touchdown. Merlyn Condit, Carnegie Tech halfback, missed the try for goal, but that was the only thing he missed all night.

Cahill's Passes Good

The touchdown was a lucky break but even before that the All-Stars had been out-playing the lackadaisical Giants. Once the Stars had moved down to the Giants' 20-yard line on six straight passes completed by Ronnie Cahill, the little passing wizard from Holy Cross.

The half ended with the All-Stars leading 6-0, and most of the Giants' fans thought their favorite would bound back in the final half and chase the upstart collegians right out of the ball park. As it turned out, the Giants were lucky to get away with their lives.

Midway in the third period the Stars increased their lead to 9-0 when Condit, the fellow who failed to convert after the first touchdown, kicked a 20-yard field goal from placement. A pass interception by Eddie Boell, of New York U and a 23-yard run by Vito Ananis, of Boston College, another comparative unknown, had set up this scoring play.

Giants In March

The Giants showed their first signs of life after the All-Stars' field goal, and, sparked by little Eddie Miller, of New Mexico State, covered 65 yards in a touchdown march. The last 3 yards were plenty tough to get and the Giants had to take

Bill Werber's Single Beats Pirates in 12th

30,543 Watch Night Game in Cincinnati; Leaders Win, 3-2

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 4.—Bill Werber's twelfth-inning single sent Eddie Joost in with the run to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3 to 2, tonight before 30,543 fans, the largest night crowd of the season here, and give Fireman Joe Beggs his second relief victory in as many days.

The game, the thirty-third the Cincinnati Reds have won by one run this year, was snatched near the close.

After Bucky Walters and Max Butcher had pitched ten scoreless innings, the Pirates loaded the bases with none out in the eleventh on Lonnie Frey's error, a single, and a walk. Two long flies brought in two runs.

In the Reds half, big Max got Pinch Hitters Lew Riggs and Ernie Lombardi, but Werber singled. Mike McCormick singled him to third and Ival Goodman walked.

Danny MacFayden came in and walked Frank McCormick to score one run and Mace Brown hit Jimmy Ripple to send in the tying tally. Jimmy Wilson bounced for the third out.

The Pirates went down in order in their twelfth, but not the Reds. Brown walked Lonnie Frey and Dick Lanahan took the mound. Eddie Joost greeted him with a single, sending Frey to third. Lonnie died at the plate on Beggs' tap to Brown, but Werber found the ball he liked and the game was over.

The victory protected the Reds' eight-game lead over the Brooklyn Dodgers, who downed Philadelphia.

Nats' Johnny Welaj to Marry Washington Girl

Johnny Welaj, Nats' outfielder, yesterday obtained a license to wed a Washington girl.

Giving his full name as John Ludwig Welaj, of Manville, N. J., the outfielder revealed to License Bureau officials that his bride would be Miss Pauline Smith, of 1417 N street northwest.

Welaj, 24 years old, joined the Nats late in the 1938 season and has been a regular outfielder with the club at intervals. He is rated as one of the fastest players in the big leagues and an outstanding player defensively.

He came to the Nats after starring with Trenton in the Eastern League, and was released to Springfield, Mass., last season. When he was recalled in midseason he was leading the Eastern League in hitting.

Wasdell Stars As Dodgers Beat Phillies

By International News Service

Philadelphia, Sept. 4.—Brooklyn kept its flickering pennant hopes alive tonight when Luke Hamlin pitched a seven-hit, 3-to-0 shutout against the Phillies.

Before a crowd of 18,031, the largest to turn out this season for an arc-light game in Philadelphia, the Dodgers reached Logan Frye for nine hits. Walker singled, Camilli doubled and Wasdell tripled in the opening inning to give Brooklyn two runs. In the sixth, the Dodgers tallied once when Medwick tripled and Camilli sent him home on his second double.

Izzy Jannazzo Wins Decision Over Williams

New York Welter Outslugs Chicago Foe Before 2,500

By Al Hailey

Back in the ring for the first time after a seven-months lay-off because of a broken right hand, Izzy Jannazzo, of New York, spiked rumors that he was washed up by out-punching Chicago's Holman Williams for ten rounds last night at Griffith Stadium.

It was a toe-to-toe slugging spree from start to finish, and the reward is supposed to be a chance at Henry Armstrong's welterweight championship here September 23 as the Varsity Club benefit show.

A crowd of 2,500 paid to see the battle, and they saw Jannazzo taking a terrific beating along with his victory. But Jannazzo was handing out more than he was getting and using the hand he broke on Steve Mamakos' jaw here last April without restraint.

Izzy won the first four rounds, each by a narrow margin, lost the next three and then out-slugged the hard working colored boy the remainder of the way. It was a tough one to decide, and Jannazzo was lucky to win. It might have been called either way with more lenient judging.

In the tenth Williams rushed out and slammed Izzy with a left hook, but Izzy came back with that chopping right hand to stagger the colored battler. He drove one to the jaw and followed with a left into the midsection and Holman sank half way to the floor.

Jannazzo's Eye Cut

But in a few minutes, he was back in there slugging and at the bell Jannazzo's left eye was a mass of blood. His right eye also was beginning to close.

Williams went into high gear in the fifth round, the first he won and had Jannazzo on the run the greater part of the round. He came out in the fifth and with a well-placed bit of butting with his head, followed by a looping right over the right eye, he tore open a deep gash.

Jannazzo was driven into the ropes and the leaping and raging Williams tore after him. On the infighting, he worked like a mechine-gun on Jannazzo's middle and Jannazzo was a tired cookie when he came off the ropes. In the middle of the ring he drove his right to Holman's jaw three times and punctuated the series with a stinging left jab. Near the end of the round he forced Holman to go under cover again, but it was Williams' round.

After keeping Williams off in the first round with that long left, Jannazzo came out in the second and hammered the crouching colored

Irish, Ga. Tech Grid Rivalry Is Extended

Atlanta, Sept. 4 (AP).—The intersectional football series between Notre Dame and Georgia Tech will be extended through 1945, Coach Elmer Layden of the Fighting Irish told the Atlanta Journal today. The present series runs through 1941. Recently there have been rumors that Notre Dame intended to cancel the contract because of alleged professionals in Southern football. This Layden was quoted as denying.

Tech plays Notre Dame at South Bend October 12. Last year Tech lost a close decision, 14-17, while in 1938 the Irish won, 14-6.

Krakky Beats Yankees, 6-5, for 1st Victory

Nats Push Yankees Back Into Third Place As Big Lefthander Finally Wins; Sundra Pounded in Early Innings; Case Stars

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Joe Krakauskas caught up with the will o' the wisp yesterday to the dismay of the New York Yankees. The bow-legged left-hander who hadn't won a ball game all season, finally walked off the field a winner and put a crimp in the Yankees' pennant rush.

He beat 'em, 6 to 5, on behalf of the Nats. It wasn't exactly a classic performance by Krakauskas, but it was good enough. It served also to dump the Yankees back into third place.

Krakauskas' awakening was a painful affair for the Yankees. They muffed a chance to gain a full game on the league-leading Indians who were dropping a ball game to the Tigers in Detroit, and tonight they are still 3½ games behind Cleveland. Detroit moved into second place, three games off the lead.

The Nats won the ball game by slugging Steve Sundra out of the box in four innings, during which the lead changed hands three times as Krakky also was taking his bumps. It was well for the Nats they got their half dozen runs against Sundra because they could not get to first base—literally—against Relief Pitchers Marvin Breuer and Johnny Murphy in the last four innings.

Krakauskas had to bear down to get his victory and he did it in a magnificent manner toward the finish. He nursed his 6-5 lead through the last four innings as if it were his life at stake, and threw some potent pitching at the Yankees. The Yanks made only two of their ten hits after the fifth.

Weak Roller Started

It was in the eighth that Krakauskas actually saved his ball game. He put the tying run on base with none out when he walked Charley Kellar on four straight balls and he was in a horrible situation when Babe Dahlgren singled to right to move Kellar to third with none out. But from that point, Krakky was boss.

He caused Frankie Crosetti to dump a roller in front of the plate, and Ferrell threw the batter out as Kellar held third. Then Krakky rose in his might and struck out Pinch Hitter Bill Knickerbocker. He issued Joe Gordon an intentional base on balls to fill the bases and then got out of the inning on Red Rolfe's short fly to Walker.

Krakky had to struggle for his victory in the ninth also. With one out, Joe DiMaggio banged a double to center and beat it out by sliding

Nats Challenge Yankees Today In Double-Header

Now boasting a three-game winning streak on the rebound of their six-game losing streak, the Nats encounter the Yankees today again—twice. It is a double-header at Griffith Stadium, starting at 1:30 p.m.

For the double bill, Manager Bucky Harris is starting the same two pitchers who were beaten by the Yankees on Sunday in a double-header at Yankee Stadium. Dutch Leonard, who lost a 3-2 game, and Walter Masterson, will go to the mound for the Nats.

The Yankee pitchers will be Ernie Bonham, the prize recruit from Kansas City, who shut the Nats out with four hits in his last start, and Atley Donald, who was also winner over the Nats in his last appearance.

'Pops' Cooper Wins With Tops III

Toronto, Sept. 4 (AP).—Sixty-year-old Jackie (Pops) Cooper, of Kansas City, Mo., won the Canadian 225-cubic-inch hydroplane championship for the third successive year today, racing his sleek Tops III to victory in two of three 5-mile heats at the Canadian national exhibition.

Cooper drove his boat to victory in the first two heats and placed second to David Forman, of Buffalo, in Eaglet III, in the final heat. Forman has finished a close second to Cooper in the first two heats and placed second in the championship. The third successive year of victory gave Cooper permanent possession of the British-American Trophy, emblem of the title.

Speed of the heat winners averaged from 58 to 60 miles an hour. In third place in the three heats was Irenee Brunelle, of St. Eustache, Quebec, with Lucille.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Now that the American League pennant race has boiled down to a stretch battle among Cleveland, the Yankees and the Tigers, we seem to be getting somewhere with great rapidity. A Yankee team in that kind of company—even a Grade 2 Yankee team as this one appears to be—recommends itself as the solid thing of the field.

POVICH

The Indians' margin of lead at this date is not be sniffed at and discounted, because there it is with only 26 games to play, and the Indians still have to be caught before they can be licked. But somehow the Cleveland club never has won any acclaim for staying capacity and in recent games they have shown an inclination to chuck it.

The surprising feature of the Cleveland team this season is that the Indians have hung onto their lead to this date. Back in early June when they first replaced the Red Sox as the top club, it was assumed that the first club that got near enough to yell "Boo!" would scare the Indians into a long slump. They were replaced for a time by the Tigers, but they had the fortitude to come again and regain the lead.

This time, though, it isn't only the Tigers but the Yankees who are chasing 'em, and there is a chance that the Indians will react differently to a threat from the rear by the Yanks. The Tigers, after all, were something of an interloper in the pennant fight and not regarded as a really good ball team. At least they didn't scare the Indians much.

But the Yanks, ah, they are always a club to be feared. Down through the past 20 years they have been known as the best "money" club in the league, and the Indians are probably painfully aware of the fact. A stretch race with the Yankees is never welcome, and if the Indians at this time aren't looking apprehensively over their shoulders then they simply are not aware of their danger, which we doubt.

Where do the Tigers figure in this stretch rush? We'd say they are the weakest member of the field. Three consecutive defeats by the White Sox earlier in the week, during the course of which the Tigers scored only three runs, seriously reflect on the clutch power of the Detroit club. Hitting was supposed to be the Tigers' biggest weapon, but their hitting has tailed off, and with Barney McCosky out for a week with an injury, their power is more seriously affected.

The Tigers don't have pitching to compare with either the Yankees or the Indians. Del Baker's staff begins and ends with Buck Newsom and Schoolboy Rowe, seemingly. After Newsom and Rowe, Baker doesn't know where his next winning pitcher is coming from. Tommy Bridges is not having a good year, and the early-season luster of Rookie Harold Newhouser is considerably dimmed. The Tigers seem to be distinctly the long-shot entry, with their infield slowed to a pathetic pace on defense.

Until the Yankees came along to make a fight out of it, the Indians certainly seemed to be the class of the league despite a weak-hitting outfield. Roy Weatherly is the only outfielder on the club who belongs in pennant company and he has virtually held the outfield together.

The Indians have been winning ball games, it has been very obvious, because of their pitching and their amazing infield duo of Roy Boudreau and Ray Mack. They have the tightest defensive infield in the league, which always contributes to successful pitching. But there can be no complaint with Cleveland's hurlers. They have the redoubtable Feller, the two southpaws, Milnar and Smith, and Mel Harder, as usual is lending a potent hand with his late-summer efforts.

But can the Indians stall off the Yankees? As we were saying, this is not one of the great Yankee teams. If it were, it would be leading the league by at least a half dozen at this writing. If it had Gomez in condition, if Dickey and Keller were hitting at least .300, they'd be far out in front.

In the best traditions of the Yankees, though, McCarthy's 1940 team has been displaying its inordinate share of power in the clutch. Just before their early-season fog was about to envelop them and remove them forever as a 1940 pennant factor, they took a firm grip on themselves and started to play winning ball.

From a position 11 games back of the lead and far down in the second division, the Yanks began to charge. They haven't been winning games in typical Yankee fashion, by overpowering the opposition. They've been doing it with more finesse—getting good pitching when they needed it—and this year they usually have needed it—and getting the timely kind of hits that win ball games. They've won 20 of their last 24 games during a period when anything less than that pace may have been fatal to 'em. You sort of have to string along with a club like that, particularly when you see what's out in front.

Kovacs' Performance Livens Net Tourney

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 4.—Frank Kovacs, tennis' "magnificent screwball" saved the National Singles Championships at Forest Hills today from being completely humdrum.

As the tourney moved smoothly into the fourth round without a single major upset, Kovacs came to the rescue of some 3,000 fans by putting on a typical light-hearted, carefree performance that sent most of the stadium crowd scampering to the nearby grandstand courts.

The word was out that Kovacs was being soundly beaten by handsome young E. Victor Seixas, jr., of Philadelphia. So the crowd deserted the stadium where National Champion Bobby Riggs was due to play to watch Kovacs, suddenly come to life, put on a fine demonstration in pulling the match out of the fire by 5—7, 7—9, 6—0, 6—4, 6—1.

Keeps Crowd Amused

Kovacs' amazing backhand cross-court shot, the best in the tournament, kept him from defeat, and his histrionics kept the crowd fully amused.

The Oakland ace's performance was matched, in part, later in the day by the stunning victory turned in by Jack Kramer, co-holder of the National Doubles title. Kramer, the "Welby Van Horn" of this year's tournament, disposed of Sidney Wood, the former Wimbledon champion, 6—2, 6—3, 6—3, in the best display of all-court tennis seen all day. It was Kramer's third straight major victory.

Marching along into the round of 16 with Kovacs and Kramer were Champion Bobby Riggs, who hardly got a good workout in beating William Talbert, of Cincinnati, 6—3, 6—4, 6—3; Don McNeill, second seeded, who brushed past George Toley in straight sets, 6—3, 6—2, 6—1; Frank Parker, Bitsy Grant, Elwood Cooke, and Joe Hunt, who were extended—but not too far—in winning

Henry Prusoff Wins

The other seeded star, Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, had a tough time beating Eddie Amark, of San Francisco, but finally prevailed, 3—6, 0—6, 6—1, 6—4, 6—1.

The women's play, too, went on without an upset—but it almost had a beauty. Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles, regarded as the best of the younger crop of potential stars, barely scraped through a brush with Norma Taubele, of New York, winning finally by 5—7, 8—6, 6—2. Both Helen Jacobs and Dorothy Bundy skipped into the fourth round with easy victories.

Tigers Slug Feller, Beat Tribe; Bosox Win 2

Detroit Now In 2d Place, 3 Games Back

Rowe Scatters Seven Safeties; Gehringer, Greenberg, Campbell Hit Homers

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 4.—Fireballer Bobby Feller may be the No. 1 annoyance of the rest of the American League but to the Detroit Tigers of 1940 he's a pitching "cousin" whose Sunday throw is a nice home run ball.

With the assistance of three homers, the Tigers plastered Feller and the pacesetting Cleveland Indians, 7 to 2, today, regaining second place and moving to within three games of the Tribesmen.

Feller now has lost but eight games while winning 23 and three of his losses have been at the hands of the courageous Tigers, who played today with a patched up lineup because of a string of injuries. Bobby has defeated Detroit twice.

Old-Timers Star

Heroes of the Tiger victory were a couple of old-timers—Pitcher Lynwood Rowe and Second Baseman Charley Gehringer. Rowe allowed seven well-scattered hits in fashioning his thirteenth victory of the year. He has lost only three games. Gehringer, in and out of the line-up this season because of injuries, swatted a homer and a double that sent four Tiger runs across the plate.

Hank Greenberg and Bruce Campbell also homered off Feller before he surrendered at the end of the seventh after allowing all of Detroit's 11 bingles.

A roaring crowd of 17,710 partisan customers cheered the Tigers and booed the Indians throughout the contest. One rabid Detroit follower reminded the throng of the Indians' recent internal squabbles by placing a filled baby's milk bottle and a nipple on top of the Cleveland dugout. In the fourth inning the patrons cheered when Ken Keltner, Cleveland third baseman, collided with a newspaper photographer while going after an easy foul fly and failed to make the catch.

On Feller at First

The Tigers landed on Feller at the outset. In the first Campbell lashed a single to right and scored on Gehringer's two-bagger to the same spot. Greenberg went down on a long fly, but Rudy York drove a line single to left that scored Gehringer.

Hal Trosky slapped one of Rowe's slow pitches into the rightfield stands for his twenty-fourth homer of the year to open the second and in the fourth the Indians tied the score on their last run. Trosky singled after a long argument in which the umpires upheld a Detroit protest that he should remove a fingerless glove covering a wound on his right hand. Hal reached second on an infield out and came home when Campbell dropped Ray Mack's long drive for a triple.

In the Tiger half of the fourth Greenberg sent a low liner into the centerfield stands for his twenty-seventh home run, and in the fifth Campbell hit a homer inside the park.

7th Finished Feller

The uprising that finished Feller occurred in the seventh. Rowe started it with a single. Dick Bartell forced Rowe and was safe at first when Oscar Grimes, who had replaced Trosky, dropped a throw from Lou Boudreau that would have created a double play.

While Feller stood on the rubber preparing to pitch to Campbell, Bartell raced to second and the incident apparently upset the Cleveland flinger. Bob failed to throw to first a moment later when Campbell hit a high bounder in front of the plate. Gehringer then drove his ninth homer of the year high into the upper rightfield stands.

New York, Sept. 4.—Youth conquered experience today as Rookie Dick Errickson of the Boston Bees shut out the New York Giants 2 to 0 on five hits in a pitching battle with veteran Carl Hubbell.

The only runs of the game came in the seventh inning on a homer by young Eddie Mill[illegible] following a single by Chet Ross[illegible] rookie.

Errickson pitc[illegible]sterfully, allowing only [illegible] and facing only 22 batter[illegible] first seven innings. He go[illegible]lf into a jam in the eighth, loading the bases on two singles and a walk with one out, but escaped unscathed and in the ninth after he had given two more singles a double play finished the ball game.

It was the seventh straight defeat for the Giants and the eighth setback of the season for Hubbell, who gave only six hits and one walk in the eight innings he worked. Jim Lynn, who pitched the ninth for New York, allowed one other safety.

Errickson now has won 11 and lost 10.

Joe Krasauskas was the stand-out guy for the Nats in their 5-5 victory over the Yankees yesterday and thus drawn down the chief award of the day in the Man of the Month contest.

To Krakauskas, ten points, because he won his game by holding the Yanks scoreless in the last four innings to protect his one-run lead.

To George Case, six points, because he made three straight hits, two of which started scoring tallies.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, six points, because his third-inning double against the wall scored two runs to put the Nats in front.

To Cecil Travis, four points, because he drove in two runs.

Ed Robins Returns to Colonials' Grid Team; C. U. Holds Drills

205-Pound Tackler Was Out Last Season; 'Dutch' Bergman Returns

Though practice for its 1940 football season will not begin at George Washington until Monday, Coach Bill Reinhart was cheered immensely yesterday when it was learned that another much-needed experienced linesman will be on hand for duty.

The newcomer will be Ed Robins, a 205-pound tackle who "sat out" the 1939 Colonial schedule. A 6-foot native of Butte, Mont., Robins was a candidate on the 1938 squad at the G street school, but he was forced to withdraw due to illness.

Now completely well, he is expected to wage a fierce battle with John Clarey, another vet, for the tackle post which Tony Barauskas doesn't get. The latter will probably be one of the few certainties on the Buff team.

Meanwhile, Catholic University's gridders, already working out at Brookland Stadium, were joined by their popular coach, Arthur (Dutch) Bergman. He has been on a three-week vacation in Indiana, his native State.

At the same time Wayne Millner, Redskin end, who has assisted Coach Bergman for several seasons, reported that he would be on hand for the Cards' third drill today. He will be on crutches because of a knee injury in a Redskin exhibition, but that will not hinder his coaching.

Twice-daily workouts will continue at C. U., Coach Bergman announced, and an hour of "chalk talks" also will be on the program.

Mat Matches Feature 600 Pound Team

Hanley and Freeman To Meet Villians; O'Mahoney on Card

Another two-man wrestling match will be offered tonight at Turner's Arena, with Lou Plummer and Ed Newman, the villains, meeting the 600-pound beef trust composed of Sheriff Tom Hanley, of Texas, and Herbie Freeman, of New York.

The Hanley-Freeman combination thus far is untried in local competition, but the Sheriff is a powerful fellow. Freeman needs little introduction, having been a popular campaigner throughout the country.

Newman and Plummer almost broke up their team following last week's match, but the boys have smoked the pipe of peace, and say they are stronger than ever.

In the semiwindup Danno O'Mahoney, former world's champion, the big "Irish Whipper" who won the title back in 1934 from Jimmy Londos only to lose it to Dick Shikat, will make his 1940 bow, facing Emil Dusek.

Two of the rugged Zaharias boys will be on the card. Chris Zaharias meets Maurice LaChappelle and Babe takes on Abe Yourist.

Action begins at 8:30.

St. Louis Cards Defeat Cubs, 4-2, at Night

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 4.—Lefty Max Lanier pitched shutout ball for seven innings tonight while his St. Louis Cardinal teammates kept pecking away at the offerings of Claude Passeau to register a 4-to-2 decision over the Chicago Cubs.

Glenn Russell's pinch single, a walk and Hank Leiber's one-bagger were combined for two Chicago runs in the eighth after Lanier had limited the Cubs to four safeties over the first seven frames.

Clyde Shoun went to the mound for the Cardinals in the ninth and gave up two more hits, but a double play ended the Chicago threat.

Terry Moore, Enos Slaughter, Johnny Mize and Don Padgett, each with two hits, accounted for all the Cardinals' runs and eight of the nine safeties garnered off Passeau. Ken Raffensberger held the St. Louisans hitless in a one-inning relief job.

Harris Beats White Sox, 4-1, For Browns

Scatters Eight Hits For Ninth Victory; Strange Stars at Bat

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 4.—The pitching of Bob Harris, coupled with the hitting and fielding of the Browns' keystone combination—Alan Strange and Johnny Berardino—gave St. Louis the series opener with Chicago's White Sox today, 4 to 1.

Harris scattered eight hits to score his ninth victory, his third over the Sox. He has lost 12.

Second Baseman Strange got two of the ten hits off Thornton Lee, a triple and a double. He scored twice and drove in a third run. Berardino, his infield sidekick, contributed a double and two singles. In the field they handled 13 chances faultlessly and accounted for the day's only double play. The defeat was Lee's sixth in a row.

Armstrong's Manager Confirms Championship Bout Here

"Henry Armstrong, world's welterweight boxing champion, definitely will defend his title at Griffith Stadium on the night of Monday, September 23!"

That's precisely what Eddie Mead, the roly poly manager of Hurricane Henry, said yesterday in a long-distance conversation from New York with Josephine Sawaya, assistant secretary of the District Boxing Commission.

Lieut. Col. Harvey Miller, president of the N. B. A. and secretary of the boxing commission, was not in town. He is en route to the national convention of the N. B. A. in Milwaukee, and Miss Sawaya carried on the conversation with Mead to squash once and for all rumors that Armstrong would not be here.

Said Mead:

"Definitely we will be there. Pittsburgh promoters have offered me a lot of dough to have Armstrong defend his title there against Fritzie Zivic. I have not signed for Pittsburgh. The only contract I have for Armstrong now is with the District promoter, Joe Turner, for September 23. Regardless of Mike Jacobs or what anyone else says, I will fulfill this contract, and Henry will be in Washington to defend his championship."

Meanwhile, the Variety Club, working hand in hand with Promoter Turner, went ahead with plans for the biggest fight in Washington's history. A number of boxers have been mentioned as opponents for Armstrong; and a definite opponent is due to be named very shortly.

Both Holman Williams and Izzy Jannazzo, principals in last night's bout at the stadium, said they would be glad just to get a crack at Henry, while Phil Furr's followers were in full force at the ball park circulating a petition demanding the Washington boy be given the match.

Thus far no action has come from the N. B. A., for Col. Miller, its president, was not in town.

Pittsburgh dispatches persisted that Armstrong would fight Zivic there, but Mead cleared up that end in his long-distance conversation.

Boston Gains on A. L. Leaders With 10, 11 Inning Margins; Cronin, Carey Star

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 4.—Timely hitting in the clutch by Joe Cronin and Tommy Carey gave the Boston Red Sox two overtime victories over the Philadelphia Athletics today, 6-5 in 10 innings, and 5-4 in 11 frames.

Cronin clinched the opener by rapping out a single with the bases loaded and none out. After the Athletics pulled into a 4-3 lead in the eleventh inning of the second game, Carey poked out a two-run single to capture that contest.

During the opener Sam Chapman and Bob Johnson belted Starter Jack Wilson for consecutive homers in the fourth inning. Jimmy Foxx drove out his thirty-fifth four-bagger of the season and the 499th of his major league career in Boston's side of the fourth and Cronin connected for his twenty-first homer in the sixth.

The second game was a keen pitching duel between Nelson Potter and Fritz Ostermueller until the eleventh, when the Philadelphia righthander was forced to retire with an injured foot after putting his team into a 4-3 lead by singling and scoring on Joe Gantenbein's safety and two force plays.

Chubby Dean took over for Potter and became the losing pitcher after he loaded the bases for Carey.

Balkanese Wins Springfield Farm Purse at Timonium

6-Year-Old Son of Balko Pays $17.20

Fans Boo Decision Of Judges in Finish Of Fourth Race; Wale Signal Wins

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Timonium Race Track, Md., Sept. 4.—Balkanese, trained by C. E. George, of Washington, circled the front horses and won going away in the Springfield Farm Purse, feature event of the midweek program here. The 6-year-old son of Balko and French Doll closed a length in front of J. H. C. Forbes' Riotous after a sprint of 6½ furlongs. William M. Elder's Bell Chimes was third in the field of eight.

Balkanese, winner of his previous race at Marlboro in cheaper company, was overlooked by the heaviest money and rewarded his scattered backers with a $17.20 mutuel. He performed in the silks of Mrs. E. C. Moyer.

Finish Causes Furore

The big controversy of the day came with the finish of the fourth race. Mrs. I. C. Mourar's Reigh Tetrarch on the rail and C. H. Robinson's Wale Signal hit the wire at virtually the same time. The backers of Reigh Tetrarch were confident that Reigh Tetrarch had taken the decision but the judges, after consulting the picture, gave the verdict to the favorite, Wale Signal.

The boos almost blew the judges out of their perch on the grandstand roof and some 1,000 persons gathered in front of the projection screen in the betting ring. There were various and sundry opinions as to the winner. However, close observers had to admit that Wale Signal won, on the negative, at least.

Wale Signal Pays $4.80

While Reigh Tetrarch backers were sizzling, those who bet on Wale Signal were collecting a $4.80 win mutuel. Had it not been for some trouble encountered by Cotillion, a long shot, the argument on the finish would have been confined to second money for the filly closed like the wind after being carried to the outside fence entering the stretch.

Axacan turned a form flip flop to win the day's steeplechase and paid $6.60. Golden Reel, an invader from the big time, was second and Rouge Catalan third in the field of six.

The daily double paid $44.50. Delhi Dan carrying 120 pounds led all the way in the first race and paid $7.80. Pack Saddle, paying $8.90, came off the pace to win the second race.

Selections at Timonium

Dear Al:

Jockey Willie Kelly got back into saddle action yesterday, none the worse for that week-end auto smash-up. That guy on that outside-the-track loud speaker sells those commercials for 1 cent a word. Some afternoon I'm going to buy an hour's silence so I can get some work done. He makes Cumberland's colonel stand out like a lighthouse. Mrs. Ral Parr, widow of the Maryland breeder and sportsman, visited the races yesterday with the two English children she is keeping for the duration of the war. After yesterday's fourth race, there were some fans who insisted that the picture displayed on the photo finish screen was not the right one. They pointed out that the sign board with the word Timonium and the date and race on it did not show. This was because the camera used at this track takes only moving objects. I looked the picture over closely and the jockeys were the right ones. The shadows were confusing. I must confess that I called called Tetrarch the winner and Wale Signal second. One of the press box boys, near the finish line, wanted to bet 10 to 1 that Reigh Tetrarch the winner and is Governor's Day at the races and fair and Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor is expected to watch the feature from the judges' stand. Today's eighth race is the first time a mile-and-a-quarter event has been scheduled here. William Woodward, owner of Belair Stud, was here today but did not see the races. He was interested in a show of draft horses in which he had several entries. General Manager Matt Daiger has purchased a silver trophy to be presented to the winner of Saturday's Forest Lore Steeplechase Handicap. For the benefit of those who saw me drive into the track in that big, pale blue car, I'm not doing so good. That job belongs to Art Brown and that's about all he had after yesterday's eighth race. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—All Gray has the speed to take the top on these and I don't believe she will be threatened at any stage. The short sprint route is right up her alley. Morolee has worked well and has early foot but generally weakens in the last part. Distant Star, would have a chance if taken off the reserve list.

Second race—Satin Royce is the class of these sprinters and should make the most of the rail position. I see no reason for mistakes. Blind Talk has been improving with each race and could surprise. Geodesian could awaken with these.

Third race—Edgemont won over this track last year and was a winner at Cumberland. I'm going to string along. Carls Choice scored over this track and is a good one. Leicestershire was erased early in that last but is a threat.

Fourth race — Blenethel appears nicely placed in this event and will be out there for the best. Promises to get a good rider and I'm going to be there. Bud's Light has worked well. Miss Ksar for the minor award.

Fifth race—Little Mowlee led all the way when turned loose at Marlboro. Assuming that he will be in there trying, I'm forced to take him. The entry of Stand Alone and Room Service is dropping down several pegs and will be close. Walter Light will be a factor on a fast track.

Sixth race—The Lewis entry of Goodwine and Duchess Del seems best in this field. Dohoev probably would take it all but is a doubtful starter. The entry of Clymene and Maetake should take one of the money places although both have had too much racing.

Seventh race — Accidental seems the best of this bad lot. She isn't anywhere near her true form but should down this kind. Lady Solace and Blenny for the place and show.

Eighth race—America First may have too much on the ball for this gang. Speed Ship is moving up but won easily last out. Yankee Lad to show.

Best bet—Satin Royce.

Don Irwin Placed on Redskins' Inactive Playing List

Star to Act As Backfield Coach, Scout

Old Injury Forces Don to Sidelines; To Take Up Duties Of Max Krause

The Redskins yesterday began the much-talked-of backfield shake-up as Don Irwin, veteran fullback of four years, was placed on the inactive-player list to act as backfield coach and scout during the coming season.

Irwin, who has been held back this year by an old ankle injury, will assume the post held by Max Krause last year after Krause was injured early in the season.

His removal from the playing roster is expected to make room for one of the quartet of rookie backs. He is the second fullback lost to the club for the season, Andy Farkas having been eliminated for ten weeks by a knee operation.

Meanwhile, the Skins' injury list was on the wane yesterday as the squad turned out at Anacostia Park for their first practice since the return from Spokane, Wash.

Millner to Play in Opener

Wayne Millner, out with a serio iliac back injury, underwent X-rays yesterday, and physicians said the damaged muscles will be well enough for him to play in the season opener September 15 against the Brooklyn Dodgers and that he may play next Tuesday night when the Redskins meet the Eastern College All-Stars in Boston.

Coach Ray Flaherty's squad cutting problem is reduced to three men, with Farkas and Irwin out. Farkas will not be on the inactive list, as Irwin, but because of a bit of contract procedure the club will be able to carry the 35 men allowed under league rules in addition to the fullback running star.

Irwin to Be Available

Irwin, who came to the Redskins in 1936 from Colgate, will be available at all times if the team should suddenly need his services in the backfield.

Flaherty left early yesterday afternoon on a double-header scouting venture in New York to study the play of the New York Giants and the College Stars, both future opponents, in the exhibition game there.

Barney Welsh Downs Shore

Favorites were hard put to advance yesterday in the singles division of the seventh annual Recreation Department Invitation Tennis Tournament, but in the men's doubles, seeded players had little troubles in matches played on the Reservoir courts.

Barney Welsh, District champion, seeded No. 1 in the tourney, took Frank Shore over the jumps, 6—4, 6—4, in a match which saw Shore pressing the champ on each point.

Second-seeded Hugh Lynch had a tough battle with Austin Rice in the opening set, which he won, 7—5, but easier going in his second 6—2 victory. Welsh's game was a semi-final match, while Lynch was playing a quarterfinal match.

In the women's quarterfinals, Margaret Keever, second seeded, defeated Peggy Smith, 3—6, 6—2, 6—2, and she will meet Dorette Miller in a semifinal today at noon.

In the doubles Alphonso Smith and Dick Murphy, top seeded, defeated A. Cyr and Pete Black easily, 6—2, 6—2, while Welsh and Lynch teamed up to beat the Curran brothers, 6—0, 6—1. Smith and Murphy meet Kruseberg and Mehl today at 5 p. m., the winner to play Shore and Adair immediately afterward. Threadgill and Willis meet Welsh and Lynch also at 5 p. m.

In the women's doubles, Misses Decker and Rowen meet Misses Miller and Smith, while Misses Bransford and Keever play Misses Boith and Levy today. Lynch and Welsh will play a semifinal singles match at 3:30.

Brother, Sister May Be Opponents In Mixed Net Play

It may be sister against brother in the annual Garfield Playground mixed tennis tournament finals if the two survive today's semifinal rounds at the playground courts.

Both Kits Tarleton, playing with Ray Hall, and her brother, Mahlon Tarleton, teamed up with Jean Lohr, won their quarterfinal matches yesterday.

Miss Tarleton and Hall defeated Louise Barnes and Jesse Newberry, 6—3, 6—4. Mahlon and Miss Lohr defeated Pete Finneran and Eleanor Carrol, 6—4, 7—5.

The only other pair to advance was Ben Zola and Janet Fitzwater, who defeated Tom Hodges and Mary Fitzgerald, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2. Zola and Miss Fitzwater meet Miss Tarleton and her partner while Mike Tardugno and Ellen Burnham meet Miss Lohr and Tarleton today at 2 p. m. Finals are Saturday.

Marty West, Jr., Wins Medal; Bows in Match

Marty West, jr., son of the Columbia Country Club president, won medal honors in the annual Columbia Junior Championship yesterday morning with an 82 but was knocked out in the first round of match play by George Rita.

Rita's upset victory placed him in the semifinals today with Joe Barse, who upset Ben Hartig, 2 and 1; Jim Stanton, who defeated Charles Stockell, 3 and 1, and Steve Olds, who won, 3 and 2, over Owen Williams.

West played each nine in 41 for his medal winning 82, that was only a stroke lower than the 83s of Hartig and Olds. The medalist's card included three bad holes, however, where he lost six strokes to par.

Barse meets Stanton and Rita plays Olds in today's semifinals, with the winners meeting for the championship this afternoon.

In line with the club's former policy, former champions were not eligible to compete.

four plunges with Walt Neilsen, 219-pound newcomer from Arizona, plunging over from the 1-yard line for the score a minute after the fourth period started. Feets Barnum converted, leaving the All-Stars ahead, 9-7.

Then came the night's biggest thrill. Barnum kicked off to Condit on the Stars' 3-yard line. The red-shirted Giants went down the field in a wave, but Condit wriggled his way through at his own 35-yard line and, with Jocher doing big and fancy blocking, sprinted on down the field for a 97-yard touchdown sprint. Ben Kish, of Pitt, converted, giving the Stars a 16-7 lead which they never lost.

Stars Superior

The All-Stars outgained the Giants, 204 yards to 200, and outstripped them, 137 to 89 on rushing plays. On passes the Giants completed 10 out of 30 for 111 yards while the Stars completed 9 out of 14 for 67. The Stars intercepted five of the Giants' passes and had only two of their own intercepted.

Brewers, Sandlot Champs, Set Out For Nat'l Tourney

Fresh from a send-off party at the home office and with the best wishes of all D. C. sandlot fans going with them, the Heurich Brewers of The Washington Post Industrial League will leave from Union Station at 6 p. m. this evening for the National Amateur Baseball Federation Tournament in Birmingham starting Saturday.

Winners of the Post League after a playoff with Cameo Furniture, and city titlist after a playoff with Pepco of the U. S. Government League, the Brewers will compete against approximately 30 sandlot champions of the East. Two losses will be necessary to eliminate a team from the week-long affair. Last year the Brewers reached the semifinals of the meet, which was held at Griffith Stadium.

Eighteen players, including three new pitchers allowed by tournament rules, as well as Managers Bill Flester and Ralph Bennie will make the trip.

Congressional Club Is Sold At Auction

'Congressional Country Club, Inc.,' Is Buyer; Bid Is $270,000

The Congressional Country Club, including 400 acres of cleared land and all buildings, was sold at auction yesterday afternoon to "Congressional Country Club, Inc."

Frank L. Yates placed the only bid before Auctioneer Vernon G. Owen, a $270,000 offer covering the first mortgage. The auction took place in front of the clubhouse at 4:30 p. m., and was witnessed only by the officials and a score of curious members.

Ratification of the sale is pending a hearing to be held in Baltimore September 17 on a petition by eight of the second-trust holders, whose total investment is approximately $8,000. If the petition is denied, the new club will take over 30 days after date of the ratification.

Acacia Assumes First Mortgage

In event of the ratification of the sale, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. will assume the first mortgage.

Veteran's Administrator Gen. Frank T. Hines, a former president of Congressional, will be president of the new organization, Yates will be vice president, George K. Brobeck secretary, and James A. Councilor, treasurer.

The board of governors will consist of the officers and: Joseph H. Hines, William Montgomery, L. P. Steuart, F. G. Awalt, Daniel L. Moorman, Dr. Robert A. Keilty, Howard W. Kacy, Harry P. Somerville, Bancroft T. Foley, Henry I. Quinn and Thomas J. Groom.

Club Chartered In 1923

The club was chartered in 1923 and the first president was Herbert Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce. Congressional has a long list of distinguished honorary members, including President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The club will continue under the present setup until the sale is approved. Then it will start anew, in accordance with the reorganization approved by the board and members of the old club.

When Attorney Yates put up the $10,020 cash and closed the sale, it put an end to rumors that an outside bidder would enter the competition, for either real estate, golf course or other purposes.

G.A.O. Beats Grocery Nine

General Accounting Office's fast-improving diamond team captured the second-half title in the Departmental Sandlot League yesterday when it took a 4-to-1 victory over D. G. S., first-half champion.

As a result the teams will begin a three-game series for the league title tomorrow, starting at 4 p. m. on the South Ellipse.

F. Mathias held the Grocerymen to four singles as he marked up his most important decision of the year. Only two bases on balls were issued by the winner in the seven-inning battle. Pembrooke, who issued seven safeties, was the losing pitcher.

G. A. O. scored all but one of its winning runs in the opening stanza and from there on played safe. Both clubs tallied once in the sixth. Only player to register more than one hit during the game was Second Baseman Moore, of G. A. O., who accounted for two singles in three official times at bat.

Nats Pound Steve Sundra for Winning Runs; Defeat Pushes Yanks Into Third

around Jimmy Bloodworth, to put the tying run in scoring position. But Krakky bore down again, retired Rosar on an infield grounder and walked off the diamond as a winning pitcher when Kellar popped up a fast ball to Rick Ferrell.

George Case, with three consecutive hits off Sundra, was a potent factor in the Nats' early scoring, but the Nats were forced to come from behind twice to give Krakky the lead that he finally made stand up. An error by Joe Gordon in the fifth inning when he dropped a throw to second as Buddy Lewis tried to steal, precipitated the Nats' tying and winning runs in that inning.

Speed Helps Case

Case unfurled his speed to stretch a looper into left field to a double to start the game for the Nats, and he scored after moving to third on Buddy Lewis' long fly to DiMaggio. Gee Walker got the run home. He dumped a slow roller along the first base line and when Rosar scrambled after the ball, leaving the plate uncovered, Case scampered home.

The Yankees protested loudly to Umpire John Quinn that Walker interfered with Rosar on the play, but Quinn said "No," and Manager McCarthy was forced to content himself with fuming.

In the second inning the Yanks bounced back at Krakky to score three runs and wipe out the Nats' 1-to-0 lead. They got a start when Krakky walked Rosar. Kellar followed with a single to center that moved Rosar to third, and, after Dahlgren fanned, Corsetti beat out a hit to Travis that moved a run home. Sundra grounded out, but Joe Gordon hit a two-bagger that the wind carried out of Case's reach, and the second and third runs of the inning crossed the plate.

Nats Steal Lead

In the third the Nats came back to take a 4-to-3 lead with a three-run uprising started by Case's bunted single. Buddy Lewis drew a walk and Walker's single to short center filled the bases with none out. Travis moved a run home with a fly to Kellar, and Jimmy Bloodworth belted two more across the plate on a long two-bagger against the centerfield wall.

The game rocked along at 4-3 until the fifth when the Yanks again moved in front with a two-run uprising. Henrich pushed a bunt past Krakky and beat it out. DiMaggio was out on a long fly to Walker, but Rosar hit a ball down the right field line that precipitated two Yankee runs. It was a double by Rosar that scored Henrich from first; with the aid of a fumble by Lewis, and Rosar also scored when Bloodworth relayed the ball past Travis into the Yankee dugout.

As if in compensation for the pain they had just caused him, the Nats came back with two runs for Krakky in the same inning. Lewis singled to right center and when he tried to steal second, he was safe on Gordon's muff of the throw. Walker got a luck-anointed single that took a bad hop to Dahlgren, and Lewis moved to third. Travis singled to right, scoring Lewis, sending Walker to third and Sundra to the showers. Walker scored when Relief Pitcher Breuer messed up Bloodworth's soft grounder to the box and was forced to make the putout at first base.

Thus the Nats gave Krakky the one-run lead that he made stand up to the finish.

John Holzberg Meets Willmett In Argyle Golf

The luck of the draw paired two of the top amateurs of the Argyle Club, John Holzberg and Tony Willmett, as opponents in the first round of match play in the club championship that starts Sunday.

Holzberg and Willmett, touted as finalists if paired in opposite halves of the draw, were thrown together as initial round opponents by the U. S. G. A. numerical dual system.

The winner will probably meet another of the club's outstanding golfers, Maurice Cooper, in the second round as Cooper rules a favorite over his opponent W. F. Barnes.

Play will be on the handicap basis in all flights but the first. Holzberg and J. E. Duffy, who meets Fred Murray in another good match, were comedalists.

Little, Nelson Enter $5,000 Scranton Golf

Sammy Snead Also To Play in Annual Anthracite Tourney

By the Associated Press

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 4.—Lawson Little and Byron Nelson, 1940 rulers of professional golf, posted last-minute entries in the second annual Anthracite Open Tournament to complete an all-star field in the $5,000 competition opening tomorrow.

Little, National Open champion and pro at the Bretton Woods (N. H.) Country Club, telephoned the Scranton Country Club assurance that he would compete for the $1,200 first prize. Nelson, pro at the Inverness Country Club of Toledo, Ohio, who won the Professional Golfers Association title at Hershey, Pa., Monday, also telephoned his late entry.

Snead In Tournament

One of Nelson's rivals in the 72-hole medal play tournament will be Sammy Snead, the West Virginian who bowed to the Toledo star in the P. G. A finals at Hershey. A victory here would be doubly sweet to Snead, now representing Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pa., for he was also runner-up in last year's Inaugural Anthracite Open, won by Henry Picard, of Hershey.

Practice rounds of a driving tournament tomorrow will provide the big field of professionals and amateurs with a warm-up for the first 18 holes of medal play Friday. A second 18 holes will be played Saturday, and the field will be cut down to 60 pros and 15 amateurs for the final 36 holes Sunday.

In addition to prizes ranging from the top $1,200 to $30 for the twentieth ranking professional, sponsors of the tournament will award a ton of anthracite to the medalist for each of the three days and tomorrow's driving contest winner.

In addition to Little, Nelson and Snead, the field includes Picard, former Open champion; Ralph Guldahl, Horton Smith, Tony Penn, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison.

Picard, last year's P. G. A. winner, played the 6,829-yard par 70 course with a record-breaking 273 for 72 holes to win the 1939 tournament.

Jannazzo Wins Over Williams

boy on top of his head fearlessly with the once busted hand. But Holman kept charging in and hammering Jannazzo about the body freely with both hands.

Jannazzo slammed his left straight into the colored boy's solar plexus and flailed that right into the kidney as the bell rang. Jannazzo was using his right in a different fashion, much in the way he'd hack with a meat cleaver, and Williams was hurt by that kidney blow.

Williams threw a looping right high on Izzy's cheek in the third and then moved in working on Jannazzo's body, but Izzy kept moving out of range and slapping in irritating style.

After taking three straight lefts to the face from Williams, Jannazzo uncorked anew in the fourth and hit the Baltimorean repeatedly with lefts to the stomach and rights to the jaw. He had Williams covering briefly but Williams is a tough gent and keeps boring back in, shooting his left. Jannazzo, using a modified form of Ceferino Garcia's bolo punch, slammed the right into Williams' kidney again and again during the round.

Jiminez Winner

The fiercest fight of the preliminary card was a six-round slugging and butting affair which left the face of Justo Jiminez, 133, of Mexico City, a mass of blood from deep cuts over both eyes, although he won. Carl Stein, 130, of New York, was the lad doing the head work, and it cost him the battle. But for his weakness for butting, heeling and doing a Tony Galento he would have been the victor.

In the second six-rounder, Billy Banks, of Washington, floored Calvin Calp, Baltimore lightweight, for an eight-count in the second session, but had to be satisfied with a decision over Calp, whose looping rights were a constant threat to the ring lights.

Tommy (Killer) Klene, 117 pounder from Savannah, Ga., lived up to his name by planting a straight left on the chin of Joey Puiz, 116, of New York, and knocking him out after 1 minute 50 seconds in the second of the semifinal.

In four rounders, Jabbo Kenner, 210, of Washington, technically knocked out Jimmy Green, 185, also of Washington in 2 minutes 50 seconds of the second, and Tommy Ricco, of Washington, decisioned George Vlaho, of New York, both 128.

ON FISHING

Roman, Dirigible Angler, Vacationing In Washington

Harold Wells, a local angler, insists that a small news note in a recent issue of The Post about fishing from a dirigible down the Potomac would not be the first time this feat was accomplished. He is right, and oddly enough we just noticed that the angler who did the trick first, Erl Roman, of Miami, is vacationing here in Washington right now.

ACKERMAN

It wasn't so far back—about two years, that Erl, with still photographers shooting and movie camera's grinding, both in the Goodyear blimp Pioneer and from boats on the water below, dropped a baited quarter-inch manila shark line in a likely spot off the mouth of Norris Cut while sitting astride the single engine that supplies the motive power of these balloons. Action was immediate, and alarming, for even though several of the big fish shied away from the shadow of the bag, there was one that stopped long enough to take a smack at the bait and his frantic fight to get free upset the nice balance of the dirigible, since Erl had taken a couple of turns around something handy and was climbing off his bucking steed.

With the quick jettisoning of much of their sand, the pilot was able to get the stern up and at the same time—the shark clear of the surface, and headed for the hangar on the causeway, where the landing was made—just 19 minutes from the time they started out.

George Smith, of Point Lookout, tells us of a Capt. Courtney seeing a school of small bluefish while coming back from the other saide of the bay, and of watching surfacing schools of fish through his binoculars.

We have reached the point where they have to be right on the dock before we can believe. We will say, however, this is the third report of small blues in this area.

More important, his swell invitation for Tommy Aitken to be his guest for several days when he arrives here from Mayo Clinic next week. We are sending it on to Tommy with the hope that his sojourn in Rochester will have corrected his odd ailment so that he will be able, and want to go fishing.

Julius Lully knows how to serve fish—we have known that for many years. We believe; considering the various reports we pick up from this place and that—he also knows how to catch them.

His last excursion was with Capt. Dick Rogers at Piney Point, where, with three companions, his catch totaled slightly over 100. Trout up to 2 pounds, big perch and 23 pan rock.

We have continually insisted the marlin fishing was going to be good through the better part of September. There is every indication that is still true.

Six on Saturday, none on Sunday because the boats were not able to get out, and eight on Labor Day is the count; and there is a stretch of good weather ahead that looks as though it is good for from ten days to two weeks.

There are big schools of marlin three hours run off Ocean City and scattered big fish closer inshore. Now is the time to go for them, with boats easily obtainable, in spite of the fact that the fleet is getting smaller with each passing day.

Bank clearings reached an 11-year high for August, rising to $109,602,295. This was more than $15,000,000 larger than in the same month last year.

Meanwhile, in the July roundup of the Federal Reserve Bank at Richmond, the following results were shown for Washington:

Bank debits in July totaled $299,105, an increase of 12 per cent over the same month last year.

July registration of new cars totaled 2,695, a gain of 29 per cent over the like 1939 month. For the first seven months, 17,799 new cars were registered here, up 10 per cent over the corresponding 1939 period.

Construction contracts awarded in July totaled $6,197,000, a gain of 6 per cent over the like 1939 month.

Department store sales in July were 16.6 per cent better than last year, while for the first seven months sales were 6.5 per cent improved over the 1939 period.

On the other side of the ledger, the Federal Reserve summary noted a 2.4 per cent decrease in employment here during July as compared with July, 1939. Payrolls were reported 2.1 per cent lower.

Enters Thirty-seventh Year

Carl J. Bergmann, treasurer of the Washington Permanent Building Association, today begins his thirty-seventh year with the organization. He started with the building firm in 1904 as a junior bookkeeper and has helped in its growth to $10,500,000 resources. He is also a director of the American Fire Insurance Co., and a director of the United States Savings and Loan League.

Dr. Stonier to Speak

The fall educational dinner will be held September 12 at the Columbia Country Club, according to Robert C. Christie, chairman of the publicity committee.

Tobacco Sales Figures

Sales this season on the Southern Maryland loose leaf auction markets total 16,034,818 pounds, according to the Marlboro Tobacco Board of Trade. For the week ended August 31, sales totaled 1,123,644 pounds.

The Leaf Tobacco Association of Baltimore, meanwhile, reported that sales so far this season totaled 11,668,167 pounds on that market. Sales for the week ended August 31 totaled 1,112,678 pounds on the hogshead market.

The newly created markets in southern Maryland are in sharp competition with the ancient Baltimore sales system.

The southern Maryland markets will close September 12, it was decided at a recent meeting of representatives of all the southern Maryland markets.

'Emissaries' Like Sir George Seen Harming British Cause

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
Economic Commentator

The controversy as to whether Sir George Paish was seeking to involve the United States in war recalls an incident which occurred before the Foreign Policy Association at Providence, R. I., some four years ago.

This writer appeared on the same platform with Sir George to present their diametrical view on international matters.

Mr. Rukeyser

The veteran British economist spoke first, and he took to flights of fancy and oratory. Respecting his gray hairs, I introduced my remarks by saying: "Sir George has achieved such rare peaks of sentiment that I hesitate to present the speech which I planned. I had intended to deal with more tawdry and mundane matters, such as could be recorded in simple arithmetic in double entry form."

Sir George is motivated by an evangelical manner, and he has long had a talent for making those who do not in peace and in war play the game of the British foreign office feel like social and intellectual outcasts. At this particular juncture, American sympathy is so much with the British that perhaps it does more harm than good to unleash Sir George and other British orators on the American people. This situation is not unlike that in California, according to a recent wisecrack by Frank Scully, genial author who expects to serve in the lower house of the State Legislature.

Referring to a classmate, who is scheduled to make a lecture tour through the State this month, Scully said: "I guess he's coming out to talk for Willkie. If so, he'd better stay away as the State is for him now."

Free goods, which are in unlimited supply such as the air we breathe, have no monetary value. Financial worth is contingent on relative scarcity. With that thought in mind, the management of the New York World's Fair is ballyhooing the fact that the exposition closes its doors forever on October 27.

Life insurance agents could learn something from this appeal. They hurt their own sales by creating the impression that policies are always available in whatever amounts the customer chooses. That is a misleading impression.

Life insurance policies, as a matter of fact, are available only to a select group of individuals who can meet company standards as to physical fitness and financial reliability. Companies restrict the total amount of insurance available to the most elect, in view of their new distaste for "jumbo" policies. Even those who are now fit tend through the years to become less insurable as they accumulate physical ailments and disabilities.

Some of the unique values of the World's Fair were attained unintentionally. The fact that war broke out in Europe while the fair was on has made even more significant the economic period which it visualizes.

Besides, as a result of the wartime blackout in Europe, the foreign section of the fair becomes all the more important. With American tourist travel to Europe interrupted, a visit to the foreign section of the fair becomes the only way for Americans to come into direct contact with European cultural and economic activities. The temporary lack of competition between the reality and the Flushing Meadows' imitation gives the foreign section an added value.

And now that it is apparent that the bondholders are likely to lose three quarters of their capital, no distaste for boosting private enterprises should deter publicists from urging the public to take advantage of the remaining days of the magnificent fairs on both coasts—in San Francisco as well as in New York.

80 Member Firms Behind Move for Extended Hours

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—Some 80 member firms, including a number of the largest commission houses, have appealed to the board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange to extend the hours of trading, it was learned today.

While 80 member firms is numerically a small minority of the total of 603, brokerage circles said the fact that several of the most influential houses were included would undoubtedly prompt the most serious consideration on the part of the governors. The board received a petition at its meeting August 27, and deferred consideration until September 11. Subsequently, a separate petition from Pacific coast firms has been received.

The proposal is to extend the closing hour from the present 3 p. m., New York time, to 4 p. m., Mondays through Fridays, and for "some extension" on Saturdays, when the market now closes at noon.

Continued small trading volume was said to be the chief factor behind the agitation.

Treasury Deficit Up $760,563,329 In Two Months

By the Associated Press

The Treasury spent $760,563,329 more than its income in the first two months of the fiscal year, which began July 1.

The Treasury spent $1,538,980,405 and took in $778,417,075. In the same months of last year, the spending total was larger and the income total smaller, but the figures were not comparable because they included social security transactions now excluded from the budget.

The Treasury's debt rose $937,709,058 to a record high of $43,905,240,096 during this July and August.

Steel Rate Seen Continuing High

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—All indicators point to the probability of "extreme activity" in the steel industry during the rest of 1940, Iron Age said today in a weekly survey.

The steel magazine based this forecast on these factors:

Rising steel scrap prices; movement of Lake Superior iron ore, highest in three years in August; exports of iron and steel, which set an all-time high of 707,800 gross tons in July; national defense requirements; structural steel contract awards.

The Iron Age scrap composite price advanced 21 cents to $19.29 a ton, within 63 cents of this year's peak of $19.92 set in June.

Virginia Gets A Half Billion In Arms Cash

Industry in State, Strategic Military Area, Is Booming

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Sept. 4.—Virginia, with its strategic naval and military facilities, is experiencing a half billion dollar boom originating largely through national defense expenditures.

Expansions and improvements at naval, air and military bases account for a substantial part of the total outlays, but huge expenditures for naval vessels constitute the largest single item.

The Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., builder of the America, this country's largest home-constructed passenger liner, now holds contracts totaling more than $282,000,000, and six naval contracts pending involve about $210,470,000 additional.

Much Warship Work

Three aircraft carriers and two cruisers, awarded under the emergency defense program, alone amount to nearly $170,000,000. The company also is constructing a battleship and another aircraft carrier under regular appropriations and has other vessels building for the United States Maritime Commission.

The Norfolk Navy Yard at Portsmouth, to which more than $60,000,000 has been appropriated for expenditure, is building an aircraft carrier and has been awarded another at $48,000,000, as well as a $2,500,000 minesweeper.

Projects at Virginia military and naval posts amount to more than $25,000,000 and Virginia concerns have been awarded contracts for upward of $3,000,000 additional for work in and outside the State.

New $25,000,000 Plant

The Hercules Powder Co. has announced plans and is making surveys for a new $25,000,000 plant near Radford, Va., which will employ probably 2,500 people and require as many to build it.

The Virginia Electric & Power Co. and the Virginia Public Service Co. are spending $6,000,000 for a power transmission program in the Hampton Roads area, a direct result of the enormous defense work in the coastal plants and bases.

In addition, the United States Housing Administration has earmarked nearly $4,000,000 for additional housing projects at Newport News and Portsmouth to help care for the influx of thousands of workers demanded by the defense contracts; approximately $1,500,000 has been allocated by the Works Progress Administration for defense projects in the State; the Norfolk & Western Railway has launched an $8,000,000 improvement program with the award of a contract for 1,000 all-steel cars to the Virginia Bridge Co.; the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway is planning a $900,000 terminals improvement program in Newport News and will reopen its Richmond shops after an outlay of some $50,000, and approximately $5,200,000 will be spent on the Blue Ridge Parkway in Virginia and North Carolina during the present fiscal year.

A Strategic Area

Virginia is a strategic area. Hampton Roads is the water gateway to the National Capital, provides the principal Atlantic base of operations of the Navy and headquarters of the Fifth Naval District, and in addition to the naval operating base has a naval training station. Naval Air Station, the Norfolk Navy Yard, the Langley Field base of the general headquarters air force—with some 6,000 enlisted men and 300 officers, the national advisory committee on aeronautics laboratory at Langley Field, the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., naval ammunition and mine depots, hospitals and other facilities.

Other important centers affected by the defense program include the Quantico fleet base of the U. S. Marine Corps, the Army Engineers post at Fort Belvoir, the Dahlgren proving ground on the Potomac River, the Remount depot at Front Royal and the Fort Myer Cavalry and Field Artillery post near Washington.

Gasoline Production Increased in Week As Stocks Decline

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 4.—Petroleum refining activity increased moderately last week, the report of the American Petroleum Institute showed today.

Refineries reporting to the institute raised operations to 82.8 per cent of potential capacity from 80.5 per cent the previous week. Runs of crude oil to stills for the industry as a whole were estimated at 3,575,000 barrels daily compared with 3,485,000 the week before and 3,472,000 a year ago.

'Frisco' Railway Petitions ICC To Modify Plan

By the Associated Press

The St. Louis-San Francisco Railway petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to modify its plan of reorganization for that carrier so as "to give due recognition and equitable treatment to the debtor's stockholders and creditors."

The Frisco said the ICC's reorganization plan was "unjust, inequitable, fails to afford due recognition to the rights of stockholders, discriminates unfairly in favor of certain creditors, and fails to conform to the law of the land."

In the commission's reorganization plan no provision was made for participation of present stockholders and general creditors of the Frisco.

The brief contended the commission erred in treating the earning record of the Frisco as a relevant factor in fixing the capitalizable worth of its assets.

"The use of such earnings as a basis for the exclusion of the debtor and its creditors and stockholders from further participation is the final act of confiscation and serves to foreclose citizens already gravely injured or seeking relief from those injuries," the brief contended.

Late Buying Rush Follows Hitler Speech; Metals, Rails and Aircrafts Lead Upsurge

New York, Sept. 4.—Wall street packed a lot of activity into the last hour today and about the only excuse the brokerage fraternity could find for he sudden reawakening of speculative activity was Mr. Hitler's speech. It seems that der Fuehrer has lost patience with the R. A. F., not to mention a few other things lost, and that he has generously decided to make one more appeal to reason to the British people. Also he believes that the war will last a long time, and has advised Reich Marshal Goering to prepare for five years.

No doubt his words fell on stony soil in Great Britain and there can be no question of the stony quality of their reception in our own financial district, for it has been many a month since the street has enjoyed such a boom.

Early in the day the market was irregularly lower, not taking kindly to the primary voting in Utah where Senator King, an opponent of the New Deal, found the going rather difficult, up to the last hour of trading the day appeared to be just one more of those dull and uninteresting sessions.

Then came Mr. Hitler to the rescue. When the final gong sounded, many of the leading speculative issues were up 2 to 3 points from their early lows. The composite average of the market closed with a gain of 0.82 point, the best since July 30. Of the day's volume of 782,140 shares, which was the largest since June 28, the volume of the final hour alone was 450,000 shares, or the largest for any single hour since May 23.

The above gains in the composite average carried it to 100.55, a new high since the upward swing from the low of the year established on June 10. Traders were encouraged by the ability of the market to follow through after last Friday's penetration of the trading area which had ruled in the market for a matter of months.

In the last primary decline of the market the Herald Tribune's average of 100 stocks moved from 107.41 on April 8 to 93.69 on June 10. This was a net loss of 13.72 points. The high of 100.55 today brought the gain from the low to 6.86 points, or 50 per cent of the loss of the last decline. According to the Dow theory, the major trend of the market is still downward but the secondary and minor trends are upward. secondary movements average from one-third to two-thirds of primary swings.

Groups leading in the late upswing included the steels, rails, aircraft, metal and manufacturing shares. Gains of 1 to 3 points were scattered throughout the entire list and closing prices in all divisions were well above the lows established in the morning period of irregularity. DuPont jumped 6¼ points and Union Carbide, 3⅛. New York Central was the day's most active stock and added 1⅝, followed by Loft, which gained 1⅝ points aided by a report of a 7-to-1 split of Pepsi-Cola shares. United States Steel was up 2⅝ and Bethlehem 1⅜. Gain of around 1 to 2 points were scored by such well-known stocks as Pennsylvania, United States Rubber, Great Northern preferred, Motors, D. G. H., Sears and Telephone. Chrysler gained nearly 3 points.

The car-loading report contributed somewhat to the buying of the carrier shares. In the week ended last Saturday there was a small gain of less than 1 per cent.

Listed bonds were in generally good demand today, with issues of Australia and Canada especially prominent, owing to the destroyer-naval base arrangement between the United States and Great Britain. The indications of closer collaboration sent Australian obligations up 5 to 7 points, and Canadian issues advanced more moderately. German and Italian bonds were soft, while a good tone prevailed in issues of the Reich-occupied countries and of Latin-America.

Turnover was $6,119,000 in the formal market, which suggests a modest return to what used to be considered a normal volume of dealings. United States Treasury securities were quiet but firm, owing to a market expecation that refunding of December notes soon will be announced, along with some direct or indirect borrowing of fresh money. Highest rated corporate bonds were firm.

IN MEMORIAM

DYER, VERMIE. In loving memory of my sister, VERMIE DYER, who passed away 3 years ago today, September 5, 1937.
I often sit and think of her
When I am all alone,
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.
SIS.

6:30, WJSV—The guests on Vox Pop have no names tonight. They have numbers. They're those private sleuths, William J. Burns operatives.

7, WRC—Fanny Brice's Baby Snooks tops the returning Good News and how's about varying things a bit, Fanny, with some of your other less delicate impersonations? Dick Powell, Mary Martin, Hanley Stafford and Meredith Willson are also on the returning caravan.

7, WJSV—How are you on streets? And we don't mean standing up, either, but on identifying some of the world's more celebrated highways and byways.

7:30, WJSV—How Allenby's forces opened the way for the capture of Jericho in the World War by resorting to a trick taken from biblical accounts of a battle on the same spot 20 centuries earlier is Strange As It Seems.

8:30, WMAL—Gen. Hugh Johnson speaks some of his forceful, colorful comments.

8:30, WOL—Here's a new one to our town and highly spoken of by Manhattan auslanders it is, too: Mayehoff on the Town. He's a wandering mimic and a genuine riot.

9, WRC—Rose King, the funny lady of York and King, who's been absent from vaudeville too long, joins a star-studded group for Rudy Vallee's program: Bill Robinson, Shirley Ross, Larry Adler and Pic and Pat.

9:15, WJSV—H. W. Prentis, jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers, makes the final talk in Columbia's series considering industry's role in the defense program.

9:30, WRC—Senator Robert A. Taft, Ohio Republican, talks on conscription: "Is It Necessary to Draft Men?"

10:30, WMAL—Senator Burke, co-author of the Burke-Wadsworth Conscription Bill, make a Nation-wide talk, shortly before which it is likely that the much-debated bill will become law. This airing, by the way, is a transcription of a talk made 15 minutes earlier.

Listen! with Glynn

The boys are talking all right. But they're not giving their right names, see! In fact, they're not giving any names at all, just numbers.

And yet they all feel that they're very much within the law in acting this way. In fact, they are within the law—they're members of the William J. Burns Detective Agency. And they are talking, thus guardedly, on Wally Butterworth's and Parks Johnson's "Vox Pop" program which you'll hear over WJSV at 6:30 p. m. tonight.

The men, and perhaps even women, sleuths who will lend this Philo Vance—Charlie Chan—Ellery Queen atmosphere to the C. B. S. studios, it seems, are not known even to one another except by number. They're reported not even to know how many "numbers" there are in the organization, though you'd think that in their business they'd be able to find out these things. How they identify themselves at home hasn't been explained either.

In their effort to get these world famous, though anonymous, gentlemen to tell of some of their exciting cases, Butterworth and Johnson have promised that they will adhere to the Burns method of identifying the interviewees.

Anyhow, it will probably be the first time that a radio program has announced "the next number will be," and there won't be any music following.

Hearing on Liquor Code Opens Today

Proposal to Fix Prices Probably To Be Discussed

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board today at 10 a. m. opens hearings on revision of the local liquor code which may have an important bearing on future conduct of the industry.

A price-fixing regulation, which has been offered as a proposed amendment to the code, and methods of advertising liquor products, will probably feature the discussions at the hearing. Suggested by the beverage industry committee, for which Milton S. Kronheim, sr., wholesale liquor dealer, was chief spokesman at an earlier hearing, the proposal to provide Washington with a "fair trade" law would eliminate local price cutting.

After an investigation of the local liquor situation by the Eberharter Congressional Committee, the A. B. C. board acted to revise the liquor code with the view to introducing 'reforms."

All told, 22 changes have been suggested by the board following months of consideration and hearings. These will be discussed today. The board will then make up its mind what the public wants and what the industry needs and transmit these recommendations to the District Commissioners. Some of the changes proposed would require amending the law and others could be promulgated by the Commissioners under authority granted them in the law setting up the liquor board.

Of the 22 changes suggested by the board, but not necessarily approved by it, nine were recommended by Kronheim. Eight of these nine were suggested by the Eberharter committee The tenth suggested by Kronheim related to the fair trades practice for the industry.

At present, there is legislation pending before the Senate to legalize price fixing, which has been approved by the House. Chairman King of the Senate District Committee has expressed his opposition to this measure.

One proposal which is bringing protests from many members of the industry is a regulation which would outlaw the use of prices in liquor advertisements. On one other occasion when the proposal was made, many witnesses said this would result in high prices.

The regulation which is intended to insure price-fixing states wholesalers may file with the board copies of contracts with retailers, relating to sale price or resale price of any beverage, which would be open to inspection to interested parties. No licensee could violate any of the minimum resale price provisions of the contract.

Other regulations or amendments up for consideration follow:

Combination stores, holding Class "A" (off-sale package liquor) or Class "B" (off-sale beer), would provide separate beverage departments which would be locked during hours when liquor could not be sold. This store, is usually a grocery, which has liquor or beer for sale.

Signs advertising liquor would be restricted in size to 10 square feet. No illuminated signs on Sunday or any other time when sale is forbidden.

Complete description of all personnel of licensees within 30 days of approval to be filed with the board.

Licenses would not be issued to an establishment within 600 feet of a school, church or any other type of religious or educational order.

Beer or liquor could not be sold between the hours of midnight Sunday and 8 a. m. Monday in off-sale establishments.

Drinking while standing at the bar would be permitted.

Bottled beer or package liquor could be sold by off-sale licensees between 8 a. m. and 10 p. m. on week days, but these licensees could sell their products between 8 a. m. and 12 midnight on Saturdays.

Restaurants and night clubs having a Class "C" license (on-sale of liquor and beer) or "D" (on-sale of beer and light wines) could sell between Saturday midnight and 2 a. m. Sunday.

All types of liquor sales prohibited between 2 a. m. and 2 p. m. Sundays.

Only menus could carry a liquor price.

Light wines and beer could be sold on Sunday by Class "C" or "D" licensees from 2 p. m. to midnight.

At the time of the last hearing, held several months ago, Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the board, said he wanted to find out the wishes of the industry and that he would compile these suggestions and submit them to the public. He did so in suggesting the 22 new changes.

Auto Injuries Kill D. C. Man; 2 Women, 2 Children Hurt

A Washington man died of injuries suffered in a Maryland automobile accident and seven persons, including four children, were hurt in traffic accidents yesterday.

Harold W. Walker, 50, of 2262 Hall place northwest, died at Mount Alto Hospital of a skull fracture, received August 22 in an automobile accident near the Edgewood Arsenal, in Maryland. He was taken to the Harford Memorial Hospital at Havre de Grace, Md., and then brought here to Mount Alto, August 31.

Maryland police, notified of Walker's death, were investigating last night.

A two-car collision at New Hampshire avenue and S street northwest, sent two women to Georgetown Hospital, Frances Dorsey, 30, of New York City, received a fractured skull, and Clara Smith, 40, of Jersey City, N. J., suffered a fractured skull and broken collarbone.

Both were reported to have been passengers in an automobile driven by Maude E. Gaynor, 54, of 1750 Sixteenth street northwest.

The other machine, police said, was driven by Robert L. Adams, 22, of 700 Quincy street northwest.

Three-year-old Regina Kellett, of 411½ G street northwest, was treated at Casualty Hospital for back injuries after she was knocked down by an automobile in front of her home. Police said the child ran into the street.

A second child, Robert L. Western, 3, of 1337 U street southeast, suffered cuts and bruises when he ran into the street from behind parked cars at Good Hope road and U street southeast, police said. He was treated at Gallinger Hospital.

Donald M. Pendleton, 7, colored, of 73 L street northwest, was hurt seriously when hit by a car in the 200 block K street northwest. The child suffered a fractured left thigh and internal injuries. She was riding a bicycle near her home when struck by an auto operated, according to police, by Paul H. Sanford, 31, of 341 Fifteenth street southeast.

A two-car crash, with one toppling over, sent Franklin R. Orters, 37, of Burke County, Pa., to Casualty Hospital with a dislocated left shoulder. Police listed the other driver as Victor R. Kile, 22, of Springfield, Ohio.

D. C. Job Center Places 4,189; New August High

The highest August placement in the history of the D. C. Employment Center was made last month, C. H. Bennett, senior administrative assistant of the center, said yesterday.

While placements jumped from 3,495 in August, 1939, to 4,189 this year, the active file of registrants declined from 35,993 to 27,843.

"The increase in placements is partly due to the national defense need," Bennett said, "but we can only put our finger on 148 placements for August that are actually working on defense projects."

Secret Service Master Mind Dies in Capital

John Sarsfield Tucker Expires 4 Months After Retirement

John Sarsfield Tucker, 70, long famed as a "master mind" of the Secret Service, died yesterday at his home only four months after retiring from a 46-year career with the investigating force.

Mr. Tucker, who had been confined to his home at 3816 Windom place northwest, for several months, was known in the Secret Service for his many successful campaigns against counterfeiters, many of them directed from behind a desk at headquarters.

Once classed as the best "shadow man" in the service because of his slight stature, Mr. Tucker in later years was assigned to executive duties, where he pitted his brain against the minds of countless criminals.

A native of New York, Mr. Tucker rose from a clerkship to be acting chief of the Secret Service for six months while its head at that time, W. H. Moran, was at the Paris Peace Conference with Woodrow Wilson.

TUCKER

At the time of his retirement, April 1, Mr. Tucker had served for three years as chief of the Washington City district, which comprises Virginia, West Virginia, nearby Maryland and the Capital.

After being assigned in 1924 to head the New York office, many big fake money cases fell to his lot.

One time by following up a suspicion about a lithograph shop in Times Square he seized $60,000 in bogus bills and made several arrests.

Another time he uncovered a cache of £90,000 in counterfeit Bank of England notes, and obtained several convictions.

Mr. Tucker received a bachelor's degree from Columbian University, now George Washington University, in 1896 and a master's degree the following year.

Dr. Zinsser, Germ Sleuth, Dies

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 4.—"In the prospect of death, life seemed to be given a new meaning and fresh poignancy."

And so, grateful for a gradual demise tempered with "contentment and happiness," Dr. Hans Zinsser, the microbe hunter, died today.

Leukemia struck down the 61-year-old Harvard professor, who was renowned in the scientific world for isolating the typhus fever germ and by the reading public for his best-selling books.

His reflections on approaching death were penned in his last book, "As I Remember Him," in which Dr. Zinsser wrote the story of his own life hidden under the subtitle "The Autobiography of R. S."

Dr. Zinsser died in the Memorial Hospital for the treatment of cancer and allied diseases after an illness of two weeks, but he must have known of his approaching end as log as a year ago for he talked much of it in his book.

"As the disease caught up with him, R. S. felt increasingly grateful for the fact that death was coming to him with due warning, and gradually," he wrote. "So many times in his active life he had been near sudden death by accident, violence or acute disease; and always he had thought that rapid and unexpected extinction would be most merciful. But now he was thankful that he had time to compose his spirit, and to spend a last year in affectionate and actually merry association with those dear to him."

One of the world's best known bacteriologists, Dr. Zinsser had risked death in the plague zones in the World War in his fight against typhus, which he put nearer victory in 1936 with the announcement the germ had been isolated.

That fight extended back even before United States entry into the war—his "battleground" shifting from Siberia, where in 1915 he was a member of the Red Cross sanitary commission, to Russia proper, where he served as sanitary commissioner for the League of Nations.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.
